Lures Out On Six Fronts

The Daily Colonist King Fisherman Contest broke out on six fronts Saturday, as the annual six-month fishing spree for valuable hidden-weight prizes, trophies and buttons was launched in B.C.'s centennial year.

The contest breaks down into six monthly contests for hidden weight prizes and King Fisherman Prince Buttons, and the full contest for trophies and merchandise prizes for the biggest fish and the maan hidden weight prizes. There are six classifications of fish — tyee, coho, spring (chinook), lake and river trout, and bass.

Main prize is an all-expenses-paid trip for two by Canadian Pacific Air Lines to Chile for a fabulous fishing holiday. All salmon five pounds or heavier and all trout or bass one pound or heavier are eligible.

Other major prizes are a Vancouver Island Helicopters weekend camping trip for two, and a Pioneer trailer-tent, plus an Elizabeth Arden cosmetic case for women anglers.

Big new feature of the contrast will be a special centennial aircraft campout prize for youngsters 16 years and under.

The prize is being sponsored by the Victoria Flying Club and president Vic Dawson will fly the winner and a companion for a weekend of fabulous fishing and outdoor living at his cabin in the wilderness on Nahmint Lake. Mr. Dawson has produced three King Fisherman winning trout from that lake in mid-July of past years — last year's trout leader, the trout leader for Righton Parker and a Prince Button winner for Bob Wright to clinch his Compleat Angler trophy.

The centennial aircraft campout will be a hidden weight prize for trout and bass entered by youngsters in May and June.

Youngsters should be sure their ages are marked on the entry forms in bold printing. The household in which they live must subscribe to The Daily Colonist.

There will be a special centennial Fish of the Year trophy awarded for the outstanding quality catch of the year and anglers who make a spectacular catch should phone or write to King Fisherman officials at the Colonist so they may be noted and turned over to the judges at the end of the contest.

More than 200 weigh-in stations from Oak Bay to Port Hardy and west to Tofino, Ucluelet and Gold River are now prepared to record entries. (See Page 10.)

The contest is on until Oct. 30. All that remains is for anglers to go out and catch fish, anywhere on Vancouver Island or Gulf Islands.

Deadlock Nears Deadline

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson acted as a labor-management mediator throughout the weekend in an unusual effort to avert a strike by CBC producers. (See also Page 40.)

The prime minister had an intensive round of talks Friday and Saturday with the producers and CBC executives, but there was no sign of a settlement.

"The situation is unchanged," commented Tom Koch, president of the Toronto Producers' Association, Saturday.

The 72 members of his association have voted to strike at 10 p.m. EDT today unless the CBC suspends its decision to drop Patrick Watson and Laurier Lapierre as hosts of the program This Hour Has Seven Days.

The producers have asked for outside mediation of their grievances against the CBC management, which centre on alleged interference with controversial programs on politics and public affairs.

CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet has replied that the Seven Days co-hosts violated program policies, resisted instructions from the top and aired their personal opinions. He said repeatedly their removal is final and irrevocable and he was backed up by the CBC board of directors.

Mr. Pearson met Mr. Ouimet for an hour Friday and kept in touch with him Saturday.

'Early Bird' Fugitive

Burglary Suspect Now Castro Aide?

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says it has learned that Georges Lemay, wanted for a bank burglary here, is in Cuba and believed to be an adviser to Fidel Castro.

Lemay, 40, escaped last Sept. 21, from the Dade County jail in Miami, Fla., and has not been seen since. He was arrested in Florida after his picture flashed on television screens via the Early Bird satellite as a wanted man resulted in identification.

La Presse says Lemay and his wife are living in a sumptuous residence at Havana.

KNEW NOTHING

Although police officials here are tight-lipped about the case, the newspaper says a Montreal police spokesman confirmed the report on Lemay's whereabouts Friday.

Local police and the FBI in Miami said Saturday they knew nothing of Lemay's being in Cuba, and an officer of the criminal investigation bureau of the Montreal police said the same thing.

UP TO $4,000,000

The Montreal bank burglary in 1961 for which Lemay is wanted netted those responsible anywhere between $500,000 and $4,000,000.

Authorities have said they are not able to give precise figures on the size of the loot from the burglary because depositors are not required to tell banks what they place in safety deposit boxes.

Britain Given Week To Act

LUSAKA (UPI) — Zambian students demanding tougher British action against Rhodesia attacked the British high commission building Saturday. President Kenneth Kaunda said later he had given Britain "seven days to make a move."

Police arrested more than 100 of the screaming youths who hurled stones at windows and tore the Union Jack to shreds outside the high commission. Police released them later but they were to appear before a magistrate Monday and Tuesday.

The students were demanding forceful action following Friday's shootings of seven African nationalists by Rhodesian security forces at Sinoia, across the border from Zambia.

CROSSED BORDER

The Rhodesians claimed they were terrorists belonging to the Zimbabwe African National Union party, which is banned in Rhodesia. They claimed the terrorists had crossed into Rhodesia from Zambia.

President Kaunda, who has long called for British military action against the rebel white regime of Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith, spoke at a mass rally at Nchanga, near the Rhodesian border and scene of recent disturbances during the Zambian copper mines strike.

WAITING FOR LION

In stating he had given Britain "seven days to make a move on the Rhodesian issue," Kaunda said if no move came he would "make Zambia's position clear."

The president did not spell out what action he expected from the British government or what position he would make clear. "Lion to bite," he said.

"I am waiting for the British lion to bite," he said.

Pilot on Record Flight Overdue in Far North

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP)—A search by Canadian and American aircraft started Saturday for pilot Frank Hern of Seldovia, Alaska, unreported on a long-distance flight in a single-engine aircraft from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Miami, Fla.

Hern, an experienced pilot with 10,000 hours of flying time, was last reported over Snag in the Yukon at 5:42 p.m. Thursday. He had hoped to land at Miami about 40 hours after leaving Fairbanks on the 3,959-mile flight.

An RCAF search and rescue spokesman said in Edmonton that RCAF Albatross and Dakota aircraft were being joined at Whitehorse by two United States Air Force planes to join in the search.

Air Sea Rescue in Vancouver said an RCAF Albatross search and rescue plane has been sent from the Comox base on Vancouver Island to Whitehorse to assist in the search.

The spokesman described the mountainous terrain of Hern's route as "pretty rough country." Hern was reported to have not filed a flight plan.

Whitehorse is about 490 miles southeast of Fairbanks and about 940 miles northwest of Edmonton.

SURVIVAL GEAR

Hern was trying to break a record set by a Czechoslovakian in 1956 for aircraft in the 1,102 to 2,204-pound class. He was flying a 160-horsepower, Cessna 150.

The aircraft, which Hern had named the City of Seldovia, carried water, high-protein food concentrate, survival gear and was fully equipped for instrument flying.

Hern planned to fly over Canada to the Dakotas and then down the Mississippi Valley.

HE'S NOT A BOY

The RCAF spokesman said: "He's in bad country but with over 10,000 hours flying time and being 39 years old, he's not a boy. We assume if he runs into trouble he'll try to land and await rescue."

Hern's flight was sanctioned by the U.S. National Aeronautics Association.

Moscow Moons Over Tune

An 'Upsurge' May Day For China

TOKYO (AP)—Red China is ready for one of its biggest May Day celebrations today, jubilant over an "unprecedented upsurge in industrial and agricultural production," the New China News Agency reported.

A celebration also is planned in Moscow, and the Luna 10 satellite in orbit around the moon will radio back to earth with electronic beep tones, the "Internationale," the anthem of the Communist movement, to mark the holiday.

In Saigon, 10,000 police and paratroops were alerted for any attempt by Communists to use a May Day parade by organized labor to stir up rioting and other violence. All Americans not on duty were urged to remain off the streets.

DECKED WITH FLAGS

Red Chinese cities were decked out with flags, flowers and slogans for the major Communist holiday. A huge portrait of Mao Tse-tung hung in Peking's main square along with somewhat smaller portraits of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin.

The Soviet government on the eve of the holiday gave Soviet citizens something to cheer about. An announcement promised a big increase in the supply of food and other consumer goods this year.

Dutchman Lost No More?

Nugget Samples 'Almost Pure'

Rivals 'Would Take Your Very Life'

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Glenn Magill says he really couldn't blame folks for being skeptical of his claim of having found the legendary Lost Dutchman gold mine. Not long ago, he didn't believe the mine existed.

"It is almost unbelievable," said Magill, who told of locating the long lost mine in Arizona's Superstition Mountains, "right where the Dutchman told everybody it was."

"I didn't believe there was a mine," Magill said. "I didn't even believe there was a Dutchman. But the more I tried to disprove it, the more proof I found."

Magill said he and five associates located the mine by interpreting four maps, three of which were obtained in the past two years from Dr. Erwin Ruth of Washington, D.C., son of Dr. Adolph Ruth who was mysteriously slain while searching for the mine in 1931.

He said he had been working on the project the past 10 years. He said it took considerable time to locate Ruth, to gain his confidence and obtain the maps, and to interpret the documents.

"It's sort of a freak mine," Magill said. "It's in a region where no miner would ever go to look for gold, according to the Dutchman."

Magill said he and his group had photographed the mine and obtained nugget samples that were "almost pure gold" but declined to pinpoint the location or show the photographs until legal rights are determined.

He said his group was the third this year to claim the find, but there was no doubt in his mind that he had located the mine. He said the mine was in a rattlesnake-infested government wilderness area on land originally granted to the Catholic church, and the church might still have some claim to the property.

Magill said it also might be dangerous to disclose the mine's location prematurely.

"There are several hundred people in those mountains today searching for that mine," he said, "and they're there all the time. There are people who would take your very life if they thought you had something."

Magill said his group keeps the maps and nuggets locked in a safety deposit box and never carries them.

Levee Collapses, Farmland Swamped

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—A temporary dam thrown up on swift Bayou Canal on a highway north of Shreveport broke Saturday, sending flood waters racing across farmland toward Oil City some five miles to the west.

Sheriff deputies said they were not sure how much water the dam released, and they were uncertain as to how many homes were in the path of the floodwaters.

There were no immediate reports of death or injuries. Deputies said the flooding would probably reach the edge of Oil City, and there was speculation that the water could reach the northern outskirts of Shreveport.

As the level broke, the Red River continued to push toward an expected crest of 30 to 31 feet by Tuesday. Flood stage on the river here is 30 feet.

tionale" will be a repeat of the stunt by the unmanned satellite April 4, the day after it had gone into orbit. It was thunderously applauded then by the 6,000 delegates to the 23rd Congress of the Soviet Communist party.

Rehearsals for the traditional May Day Parade in Moscow indicated that no significant new weapons would be displayed.

Huge portraits of Marx, Engels and Lenin dominated Red Square.

Organized labor in Japan dropped all anti-American and anti-Viet Nam war slogans and predicted the biggest May Day turnout in its history, possibly half a million workers and their families.

Disillusionment Grows in Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lincoln Gordon, assistant U.S. state secretary, said Thursday there are signs of an internal struggle within the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba and "growing discontent and disillusionment within the general population."

First Book Found

More than $1,700 worth of old books and records were cleaned out of a warehouse at 507 Pandora Thursday and Friday, at a sale organized by the women's committee of Victoria School of Music.

Hundreds of books and records and a few sound tapes were donated for the sale.

All money goes to the school's scholarship fund.

Four shelves crammed with Canadiana when the sale opened were left with four books when it ended.

Victoria writer Mrs. Agnes Newton Keith discovered a copy of her first book, Land Below the Wind, and bought it for 75 cents.

The book is out of print and she had been looking for a copy for years.

Venezuela-Guiana

Boundaries Challenged

GEORGETOWN (CP)—British Guiana's Prime Minister Forbes Burnham promises he will yield no ground in his country's border dispute with neighboring Venezuela but the opposition People's Progressive Party contends that a compromise may be in the offing.

The dispute between the two South American countries involves about 50,000 of British Guiana's 83,000 square miles of territory.

It has its roots in the 19th century when the area was being settled and gold was discovered there. The controversy originally involved Britain, which was pushing exploration and settlement, and Venezuela.

INDEPENDENCE

Today the Guianese, scheduled to get full independence May 26, say the question was resolved once and for all with the award made by an arbitration tribunal in 1899.

The Venezuelans say this award is null and void. The disputed territory lies in the north west section of British Guiana.

The Guiana legislative assembly has approved the establishment of a four-man international commission which will work during the next four years to seek what is called a satisfactory settlement of the dispute. The PPP voted against the approval.

Each country will have two members on the commission.

SHOWS MUTUAL GAIN

Prime Minister Burnham, in an assembly debate Thursday, said both Venezuela and British Guiana have a great deal to gain from mutual co-operation and understanding.

He said there is no question of this country's yielding to the Venezuelan claim.

Dr. Fenton Ramsahoye, who was attorney-general in the former PPP government of Dr. Cheddi Jagan, said the agreement was clearly a re-opening of an issue closed in 1899.

The Guianese government, said Ramsahoye, had agreed to negotiate apparently because it felt there was something to negotiate about.

Your Good Health

Abstinence Only Sure Contraceptive

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been reading about the IUCD's (intrauterine contraceptive devices). Are they in general use by physicians or must I go to a special clinic to obtain them?

I have been taking the pills for two years but they seem to make me tired and nervous. The IUCDs sound ideal — MRS. C.D.

There is no perfect method of contraception except sexual abstinence, so the best advice I can offer is to choose the one that has the fewest disadvantages for you.

The present IUCDs are updated models of devices that have been used for many centuries. Today's models may be thin steel rings, plastic spirals or circles of nylon thread.

There seems to be no agreement as to precisely why they prevent conception, but they do, even though not 100 per cent of the time.

From such reports as I have encountered, my feeling is that disadvantages outnumber advantages, but others may disagree with me.

Advantages are: No personal effort is required, no need to remember to take a pill for 20 days on schedule. There are no systemic effects such as headache, nausea or bloating.

For the other side of the picture, the devices do not always stay in place. The expulsion rate (slipping out of position) is reported as high as 20 per cent (that is, occurring with one of five users.) There is a similar percentage of removal because of bleeding which, naturally risks infection. There may be pelvic discomfort.

It is necessary for the woman to make frequent visits to the doctor to make sure the device is in proper position. When pregnancy occurs with the device, there is a high incidence of tubal prengancies.

Because the devices are irritating to some individuals, one might suspect that there is a risk of cancer. However, this apparently is NOT the case, which is important to know.

It is not necessary to go to special clinics for these devices There are may doctors who consider htem an effective contraceptive. I think there are more, however, who think the disadvantages outweigh the advantages.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 78. Recently a blood vessel burst in my eye, and the blood covers most of the white. Will this clear up? Or cause trouble? It has not disturbed my vision yet. — L.C.E.

And it won't bother your vision or be dangerous. This appearance of blood in the eye can be frightening, but it looks worse than it is, by far.

This blood will absorb in about 10 days with no harmful after effects.

Be sure to get ample Vitamin C (citrus juices) and calcium (milk or skim milk is the most plentiful source) in your diet, which may lessen any tendency toward future bleeding.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is meant by "latent diabetic"? — H.K.

A latent diabetic is one who under ordinary circumstances does not show sugar in the urine or have high blood sugar, but under stress conditions, for example with a fever, surgery or in pregnancy, sugar is found.

In Secret

Lunar Race Joined

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —The United States and the Soviet Union are locked in a tight race to land the first men on the moon, perhaps within three years. The winner's rewards will be substantial: National prestige, scientific knowledge, possibly military domination of space.

Last March, President Johnson predicted that Americans would be the first on the moon. Who's ahead at this stage? It's hard to tell because of Soviet secrecy.

U.S. space officials are currently spending $3,300,000,000, on the manned space and lunar program and say their budget is adequate to the American objective. Slight cuts in recent years have not affected the manned space development; reductions were made in other phases of the space program.

U.S. AHEAD

On the basis of deeds accomplished, the United States has an edge. But American space officials are looking to the next Russian manned flight to provide the answer.

It's been more than a year since Russia sent cosmonauts into orbit. That was Voskhod 2, a one-day mission March 18, 1965, during which Alexei Leonov took history's first space walk and sent Soviet prestige soaring.

Since then, the United States has orbited six two-man Gemini teams and wrested every man-in-space record from the Russians.

SPACE SHIP

The Gemini flights, up to 14 days, have demonstrated the basic techniques for getting to the moon. These are ability to manoeuvre a manned space ship, rendervous of two ships, lineup of two space vehicles and the ability to sustain life for the length of time (8-14 days) planned for early lunar voyages.

The Russians have demonstrated only one of these: The space walk.

Unless they show they can do the others on their next manned launching. U.S. experts believe America will maintain the edge.

NEW CRAFT

Reports from behind the Iron Curtain indicate that during the long pause since Voskhod 2, the Russians have been developing a large third - generation space ship to follow the early Vostok and the Voskhod.

There are indications it may weight up to 27,000 pounds and carry a crew of three to six men.

The ability to link up two such craft would give the Soviets a big boost toward the moon. For it generally is believed they plan to assemble a station in earth orbit as their lunar launching pad.

TALL ROCKET

The United States, meanwhile plans to make a direct ascent to the moon, using a single mammoth Saturn V rocket which is scheduled for its first test flight early next year.

This giant 36 - storey - tall rocket will generate 7,500,000 pounds of booster thrust, compared to 430,000 pounds for the Titan II which hoists the 7,700-pound Gemini craft.

CBC spokesmen in Toronto said meanwhile they were proceeding on the assumption that the Seven Days program would go on the air as usual at 10 p.m. Sunday.

They said they have a standby file of taped and filmed programs they could use in the event of a strike.

The Montreal Producers' Association, composed mainly of French network employees, warned the CBC against using television programs originating in Quebec in other parts of the country that could be affected by a strike.

Mr. Pearson interrupted his mediation efforts Saturday to make an hour-long speech at a strategy meeting of the national executive of the Liberal party.

He also had a chat at his residence with Allan O'Brien, the party's new national organizer. The prime minister was scheduled to fly to Toronto at 4 p.m. today to address a veteran's convention.

Tackle Maker Closes Up

VANCOUVER, (UPI) — Canada's largest manufacturer of fishing tackle has officially closed his business after 57 years, stating union demands forced the closure.

R. C. Gibbs, president of Gibbs Tool and Stamping, said demands by the United Steelworkers of America "imposed conditions which, in view of foreign competition and increased operating costs, have made it impossible for me to continue profitably."

At its peak, the company employed 40 workers and shipped products to all Canada, the U.S. and Fiji.

Planners Seek Voice

The Community Planning Association, Victoria branch, has given notice to the Pollution Control Board that it wants to express its views on the discharge of effluent into Sandhill Creek in Central Saanich.

Westcraft Manufacturing Ltd. has applied for permission to discharge aluminum anodizing and conversion coating process effluent into Sandhill Creek from its Central Saanich factory.

Objections to the application will be received at the legislative buildings before May 20.

A public hearing will be held at the discretion of the board.

Central Saanich Reeve R. Gordon Lee has already said it would be fantastic if the board allowed such pollution of the creek.

Athabascan Survivor Remembers Fallen

TORONTO (CP) — A wreath was thrown into Toronto harbor Friday night after a shipboard service to honor 128 crew members of HMCS Athabascan who died April 29, 1944, when their destroyer was sunk in action against two German destroyers in the English Channel. James Aikins, a survivor, tossed the wreath from the deck of the Haida, a sister ship of the Athabascan which took part in the same action.

A small group of navy men, former seamen and relatives of seamen who served aboard the Athabascan took part in the ceremony.

TRIBAL CLASS

The Athabascan and Haida, Tribal class destroyers, were screening Royal Navy mine layers off the French coast when two German destroyers were sighted.

In the attack, the Athabascan was hit by shellfire forward of her bridge. A short time later her magazine exploded.

The Haida sank one German ship and damaged the other after the Athabascan was hit. Of 132 Athabascan survivors, 46 were picked up by the Haida and 86 were taken prisoner by the Germans.

GUN CREW

Mr. Aikins said that during the attack he was working as a member of the gun crew on the forward deck. He said the explosion of a shell blew him into the water, burning his hands and arms and injuring his legs.

He was rescued by the Haida. The Haida, now decommissioned, has been converted into a memorial museum.

Grits Name Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—Allan O'Brien a 34-year-old corporation lawyer and little-known campaign worker, is the Liberal federation's new national director and chief organizer.

He succeeds Senator Keith Davey, 39, at a time when the Liberals face major tasks: preparing a national convention set for Oct. 10-12 in Ottawa, and revamping nearly all federal riding associations in line with the new electoral map.

Mr. O'Brien, an urbane man with three university degrees, was formally appointed at a meeting of the party's national executive Saturday.

DELEGATES

Sunday he was to attend a meeting of more than 30 top Liberal officials from across Canada to plan the October conference, expected to draw between 1,000 and 2,000 delegates.

The new national director was born and raised in Windsor, N.S., lived in Edmonton six years and moved to Toronto two years ago.

He said in an interview he hopes to move to Ottawa with his family in about one month. He married the former Nancy Roscoe of Halifax and they have two children, Timothy, four, and Catherine, two.

KEEP BUSY

Since 1959 he has been a solicitor and assistant to the general counsel of Interprovincial Pipe Line Co.

He said the redistribution of riding associations likely will keep him busy for many months. He plans to travel extensively to meet party officials at the provincial and riding level, especially on the prairies where the Liberals hold only one seat out of 48.

Campus Eases Liquor Rules

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—If they are 21 or more, Stanford University students will be allowed to drink alcoholic beverages in campus residences starting May 10. President Wallace Sterling, announcing that policy Sunday, said no alcoholic beverages will be sold on the campus.

Ad for Husband 'Kind of a Joke'

BOSTON (AP) — A Radcliffe girl who advertised for a husband so she could escape dormitory life said Friday she has had 220 offers, "but I'm staying single."

And she confessed to being "a bit shocked" at the number of serious proposals prompted by her advertisement that ran in the Harvard Crimson two weeks ago:

"One-year marriage? Seems to be the only way for a Cliffie to get out of the dorm. I'll share expenses, am a good cook. Other details? can work it out. Contact Crimson Box 2000."

"It was kind of a joke," said the 20-year-old student. It was also to protest Radcliffe rules that will require her to live in a dorm next year instead of in the "peace and quiet of an off-campus apartment."

Harvard men were quick to apply for interviews.

She said she has received about 60 letters from men stationed in Viet Nam.

"They all point out that I could live off campus and receive an allotment and that they would be collecting more pay and could live off base," she said. "But I don't think I want to get married by proxy."

"A married graduate student and his wife have offered to adopt me and I'm meeting them next week."

Suk Pak meets the Mairs

* * * * * *

17 Months Coming

It's New Holly Sue!

TORONTO (CP)—The baby was 17 months in delivery, and the waiting room was the Toronto International Airport instead of a hospital.

But Richard and Gloria Mair of Burlington, Ont., got their daughter just the same.

For a moment Friday night, two-year-old I Suk Pak, a Hong Kong orphan, wasn't too sure how she liked the idea of a new family. But by the time she met brothers Stephen, 6, and David, 4, the deal began to look a little better.

For the Mairs it was the end of months of negotiation with three governments and an international social service.

Suk Pak was one of four Hong Kong orphans delivered to Canadian families Friday. One went to a Vancouver family and two others were adopted in Quebec.

Dick Mair, 30, a professional engineer, and Gloria, 28, got the idea of adopting the girl from newspaper pictures of misery and starvation in Asia.

The four children were escorted from the Far East flight by Vancouver social worker Mrs. Laura Fowler who had been on a field trip to Hong Kong.

Suk Pak, the Mairs said, is to be renamed Holly Sue.

U.S. Phantom Jets Claim Super MiG Shot Down

SAIGON (AP)—United States Air Force Phantom jet pilots shot down another MiG-17 fighter Saturday in a dogfight 100 miles northwest of Hanoi.

The Americans claimed it was the 11th to fall, against a loss of only three U.S. planes, since last spring in aerial combat.

They said two other planes—a U.S. Navy Crusader and a U.S. Air Force Thunderchief—were shot down by anti-aircraft fire on Friday.

A dispatch from Hanoi by the Soviet news agency Tass, however, said seven American planes were shot down that day.

Meanwhile, Communist fire from neutralist Cambodia stirred up U.S. 1st Infantry Division troops who for a week had been methodically wiping out enemy base camps and supply depots northwest of Saigon on the Vietnamese side of a frontier river, the Rach Beng Go.

About 50 guerrillas shot from their sanctuary across the 50-foot-wide river in a diversionary action as Americans pursued about three platoons that had been spotted in Vietnamese territory.

The troops lashed back with machine guns and artillery but stayed on their own side of the river to avoid a graver international incident. American losses were termed light. There was no estimate of Viet Cong casualties.

Air action remained dominant otherwise both north and south of the border, but American spokesmen said U.S. Marines had killed four Viet Cong while patrols of the 25th Infantry Division accounted for 14.

Within Saigon, 10,000 Vietnamese police and paratroops were mobilized against a possibility that Communists would use a unionist May Day parade today to stir up rioting and screen grenade attacks. The U.S. armed forces radio urged all Americans not on duty to stay off the streets.

Rhodesia Talks Welcomed

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The word that Britain and the rebel regime of Ian Smith in Rhodesia have agreed to informal talks about prospects of a negotiated settlement was welcomed here.

The United States government has murally backed Britain in the prolonged showdown —in trade embargoes, on the British-Canadian-U.S. oil lift to Zambia and in the United Nations.

But there have been deep reservations ranging from the danger of losing face among African nations if Rhodesia muddles through, to alienating further such white allies as South Africa or Portugal.

PARTY IRE

While British Prime Minister Wilson has invited left-wing labor party ire in supporting the U.S. in Viet Nam, President Johnson faces thunder from his right on Rhodesia.

Some of this reflects anger about British-flag vessels still trading with Cuba and particularly North Viet Nam. Some represents the conviction the white Rhodesian rebels are the spirited 20th-century successors of the American revolution of 1776.

The U.S. has 20,000,000 restive Negroes of its own to keep in mind—a factor in UN Ambassador Arthur Goldberg's statement Wednesday that failure to resolve Rhodesia "with justice to the African (Negro) majority would undoubtedly strengthen the forces of extremism, violence and racism in the heart of Africa."

As Congress resumed, a series of Republican and southern Democrat members attacked U.S. support for Britain's Rhodesian policy on grounds Britain persists in trading with enemies.

STOP SHIPS

British-flag vessels calling at North Viet Nam have been explained here unofficially as a dwindling element, representing Hong Kong ownership that Britain has difficulty regulating.

But Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, chairman of the armed services committee, this week told an interviewer from the weekly magazine U.S. News and World Report:

"In the case of Britain, we have fallen over ourselves to accede to their requests in their difficulties in Rhodesia—which certainly are minor compared with what we face in Viet Nam. But, at the same time, they claim they can't stop their ships going into North Viet Nam.

'ANOTHER CHANCE'

"Well, I'd give them another chance to stop them . . . then if they can't or don't, we have the means of stopping them."

Russell, a Democrat, went on about Rhodesia specifically:

"Of course, I am opposed to our having anything to do whatever with this Rhodesian situation . . . it's a rather remarkable commentary on present-day history—when men are supposed to be getting soft—that 220,000 people in a nation of about 4,000,000 would undertake to maintain themselves not only there but against their mother country and against the power of the UN and the U.S. as well.

"Their courage may exceed their judgment but they have at least shown a considerable desire to run their own country as they wish."

Elements as moderately-minded as columnist Walter Lippmann have suggested Britain may have burdened the UN with a Rhodesian situation which is highly volatile just to escape some hard decisions by itself.

Father right, there is a newly-organized National Co-ordinating Committee for Friends of Rhodesian Independence which seems to lump together assorted elements including the John Birch Society.

It has published full-page advertisements in Washington newspapers urging U.S. support to break the Rhodesian trade embargo.

Kitimat Example

THE ANNOUNCEMENT that Alcan-Aluminium Ltd.—the new name for Aluminium Ltd.—is to increase for the second time within a few months the capacity of its smelter at Kitimat is welcomed as increasing the importance of British Columbia as a mining and metal producer.

While it is true that the raw materials of aluminum have to be imported into B.C.—mainly alumina from the Caribbean—the main ingredient of aluminum is power. It was the water potential of this province which 15 years ago brought Alcan to B.C. and with it the new city of Kitimat and its vast revenue potential.

Although B.C. is fast developing as one of the top Canadian mining areas it is unfortunate that apart from Kitimat and, of course, the great lead, zinc, iron, steel and fertilizer operations of Cominco at Trail and Kimberley, the mining and milling industry remains largely on the most primary basis.

For many years the government has expressed the hope that there would be a copper smelter on the coast, and a start at least made on an integrated iron and steel industry near tidewater.

It is more than ten years ago since an important eastern mining group announced plans for a vast metallurgical industry on the estuary of the Taku River. This was abandoned later as being unfeasible. Later the same firm investigated the possibilities of a similar venture using the water of the Naas River, but again nothing eventuated.

When the great copper mines of Craigmont and Bethlehem came into being in the Highland Valley area there were again talks of a copper smelter for that area, but despite the fact that copper reserves are continuing to grow, smelter plans are still in the talking stage.

Further north the Stikine River valley has been pinpointed as a potential refinery site for the unfolding copper and molybdenum resources of that wild part of the country.

Indeed the much needed secondary development of the mining industry appears as remote as ever.

Yet in 1965 B.C. mines exported in high grade ore, or concentrates, $34,350,000 worth of copper; $19,400,000 worth of iron concentrates; $13,700,000 of asbestos and $11,500,000 molybdenum.

This is the sort of export business expected from an illiterate and underdeveloped country, rather than from one with Canada's advanced technology in mining and refining affairs.

Apart altogether from the fact that primary mining operations give, under automation, relatively little employment in return for the denuding of the country's raw materials, there is also to be considered the unfavorable international balance of trade under which Canada is now suffering.

So long as Canada exports low-priced untreated ores and imports in return the expensive finished product, the situation is likely to continue.

In B.C. at least the search for some more integrated companies like Alcan and Cominco to make the best use of the mineral riches should be high on the list of provincial government things to do.

Words a Weapon

THE MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT for Brome-Missisquoi, Quebec, Mr. Heward Grafftey, made a point when he told the Quebec Safety League that the time has come when the federal government should insist on inclusion of proven safety features in all automobiles imported into or made in Canada.

At the provincial level, he said, lay the responsibility for the education of "better and safer drivers," the building of good roads and the regular inspection of vehicles.

These are generally accepted as important factors in reducing the highway traffic toll which in this country amounts to a dreadful 100 deaths each week.

Mr. Grafftey is to be congratulated for lending his leadership to the nation-wide concentration on this problem.

It might be said that action in the emergency is more important than words. But in this case the more talk the better; for little by little the impact of words will increase the public's awareness of the danger on the roads and, in the end, will surely unite all concerned in the effort to reduce it. Industry, of course, must play an important, if not vital role, in a continuing campaign to prevent accidents and to protect those who, inevitably, become involved in them.

The Gurkhas

FOR MOST WESTERN PEOPLES, mention of Nepal, that narrow strip of Himalayan country that lies between Tibet and India, probably summons a vision of mountaineers striving to climb every mountain. For Victorians there is the recollection of the lecture given here by Sir Edmund Hillary shortly after making the first ascent of Everest, with slides that depicted the picturesque nature of that far-off land.

And sharing that mountaineering triumph with a Nepalese himself, the Sherpa Tensing.

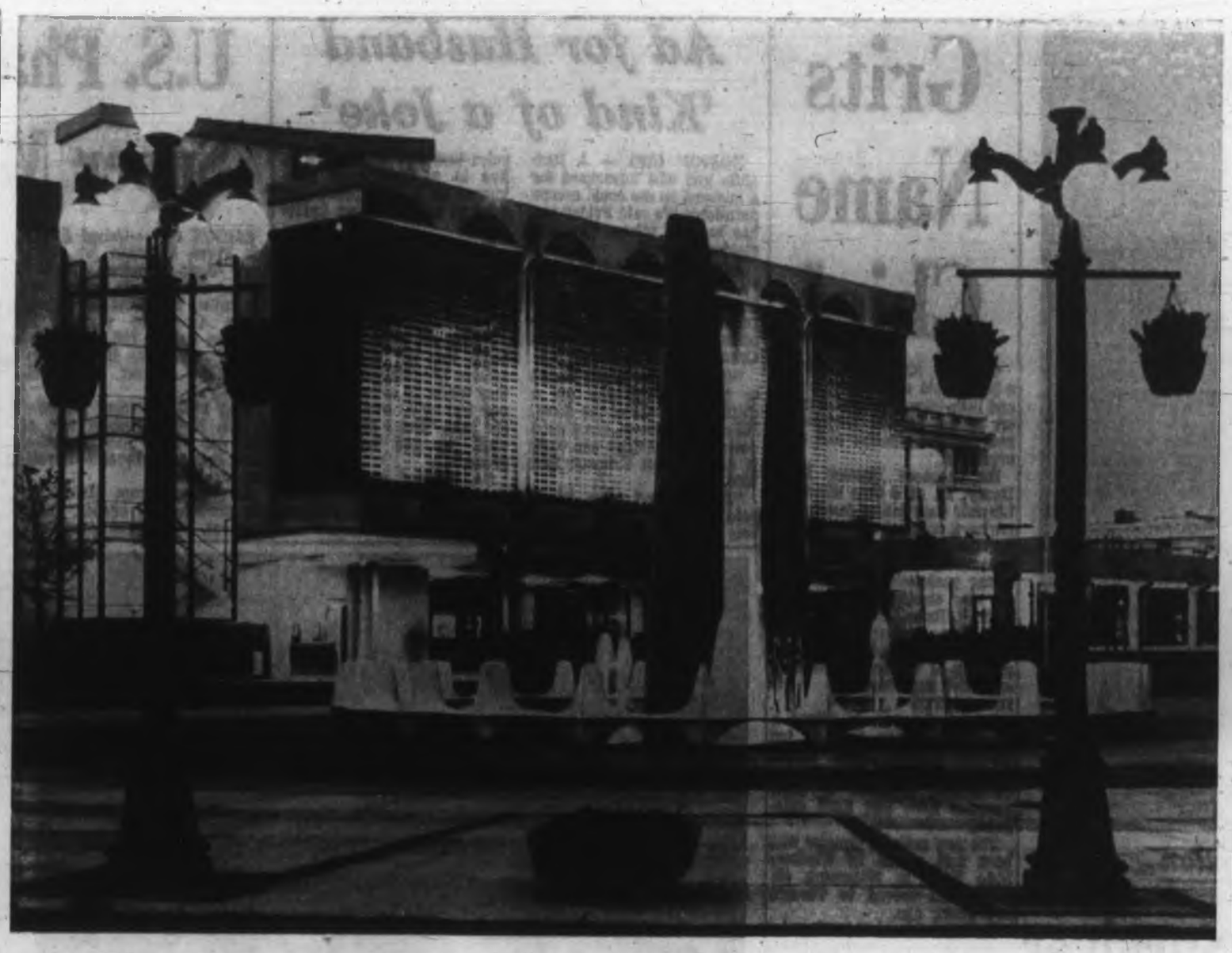

The most famous products of Nepal however are the Ghurka soldiers, the little brown warriors now serving in separate commands with the British and Indian armies, whose battle exploits have become legendary. Mercenaries these soldiers are, but with a difference; they serve primarily as a means of supporting the families they leave behind in their native mountain territory.

They come into focus again now with the award of that supreme accolade of battlefield bravery, the Victoria Cross, to a young Gurkha lance-corporal, Rambahadur Limbu, for outstanding conduct in Sarawak last November in his only second time in action.

This newest of VCs was running true to Gurkha military form. It is a maxim that every soldier carries a field-marshal's baton in his knapsack, and potentially it can be said he might also become a VC winner, but the odds against this are high. Many soldiers undoubtedly are worthy of the Cross but its bestowal nowadays is more rare than in former times.

As a comparison it can be cited that while 633 VCs were gazetted in the 1914-18 war only 182 were awarded in the 1939-45 conflict, these figures including three bars. Gurkhas themselves, tiny in number as against the millions of other servicemen of the last war, won no fewer than eight Crosses, a proportion that enhances the quality of their combat ability and courage.

And once more the villagers of Nepal have cause to acclaim the valor of one of their sons.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax . . ."

By TOM TAYLOR

THE rain in Spain, as Professor Higgins taught Eliza to say, falls mainly on the plains.

Not in Victoria it doesn't; it falls mainly on wet lawns.

This surprising revelation by the city comptroller, I must confess, struck me all of a heap. I had never suspected such before. It means moreover that one can't believe one's own eyes.

No wonder the experts frown on all those stories of mysterious flying objects; we are all too myopic. I can believe the latter when I'm looking for something that's staring me in the face and I can't find it, but rain, not in Spain but right in my own front yard—well I must say this is nonplussing with a vengeance.

Mind you, there are times when I see municipal aegis watering the boulevards while those dewdrops from heaven are falling with such force as to make such efforts redundant. But that, I suppose, is a different and quite irrelevant story.

It's the psychology of the home gardener, the comptroller opines, that accounts for the phenomenon he expounds. When half-a-day's rain falls every two or three weeks the lawns stay nice and green and so people keep pouring on the water.

My own lawn can't be paying attention to this interesting thesis. Two rainless weeks and it's almost verbally crying out for a drink.

Why, only a couple of days ago, with not a drop in sight of the liquid beverage that makes grass green, I counted half-a-dozen early morning gardeners plying their hoses with abandon while on my way to the office.

Patently they hadn't heard that one should wait for a rainy period before turning on the taps.

I live beyond the tweed curtain so perhaps things are different there. When there's a drought on, the long dry spell that the comptroller says causes people to say oh what the heck and then just let their lawns shrivel like the Sahara, all I can ever see is the masters of the house, or the mistresses, going to the rescue with the hose on full blast.

I must be myopic all right.

And when I think of the hours I've spent in previous summers, those delightful weeks when the sun shines and the rain stays in Spain, relieving the thirst of my lawn so it will cling to its nice green hue — how out of fashion I've been.

My psychology was all wrong.

I only wish though that my summer water bill reflected this interesting disclosure of gardening behavior. And I'm sure you do too. I am inclined to the notion that the fellows who tot up the amounts of the meters that register my contributions to the color schemes of lawns, never heard of this intriguing philosophy either.

Or else their computers have gone on the blink. Perhaps they also need a drink of water.

Not being a psychologist I wouldn't dream of disputing the city comptroller, of course; I am just wondering if he lives in the general area where for some two decades and more I've been living.

And if he leaves his hose curled up unused when his own lawn is turning brown as the proverbial berry.

Warrior to Work

A Most Difficult Conversion

By DR. ARNOLD TOYNBEE

TODAY the impact of modern life on the peoples of the world is ubiquitous. Even the most secluded fractions of the human race are feeling it. The impact is uniform, but its effect is differential; for some communities can come to terms with the modern way of life more easily than others.

The hunting and food-gathering peoples' way is the hardest to adapt—as witness what happened to the North American Indians in the United States and Canada, and to the Australian natives. The next most recalcitrant way is that of the pastoral nomads. In Central Asia, whose nomadic peoples have more than once shaken the civilized world to its foundations, the nomads have now gone down before the Chinese and the Russian peasants' advance.

A peasant community, even a primitive one, can face the onset of modern life with greater assurance. A woman who has handled a hoe can learn to tend a machine; a plowman can learn, not only to tend the machine, but to keep it in repair.

In Ethiopia, this differential response to the challenge of modern life hits the traveller's eye with dramatic force. The majority of the population are Amhara and Galla peasants who cultivate with the plow, and for them the way into the modern world lies wide open. Already they are beginning to modernise their agriculture and to pass over from agriculture into industry.

Ethiopia, however, has also her contingent of pastoral nomads. Somali in the southeast and, to the north of them, the Danakil in the huge triangle between the Ethiopian highlands and the Red Sea. In both regions, nature makes adaptation to modern life unusually difficult. In Ethiopia, the highlands are the plowlands, and physical altitude and cultural altitude go together. I tested this myself, when in one day's journey in a Land Rover I dropped some 6,000 feet or more from the city of Dessie, on the eastern brow of the highlands, to Tendaho, where the Awash River threads its way through the Danakil desert.

In Dessie my Ethiopian travelling companion and I had been paying a call on a friend of his who holds a senior post in the local administration. Here we were in the familiar modern world; a couple of cars in the garage; a sitting room furnished in Western style, and our host, a man of the world, dressed with a neatness to which I have always aspired but, being a professor, have never achieved.

The only thing in the household that was not quite modern was the behavior of the children. Their standard of courtesy was that of a bygone generation.

We made an almost perpendicular descent, by a zig-zagging road for miles and miles to Bati. At Bati we left behind the last plowed fields and entered the desert, but not the bottom-level desert yet.

Our corkscrew descent continued. Here were monkeys—living thermometers—and ostriches standing at ease in the rare shade of a spreading tree. And at last we were out on the flat, in a landscape like nothing on earth, a wilderness of basalt boulders, strewn as far as the eye can see.

At this last stage of our journey, the Danakil made their appearance: first, a few little girls herding squads of camels and troops of goats, and then a rare warrior, equipped with rifle and cartridge-belt. According to the Danakil warrior's code, productive work is woman's work, not man's. The Danakil warrior stands idly dreaming of the number of Isa he hopes to kill—and not just dreaming either, for there is a war on at the moment between Isa and Danakil over raided cows and women.

A tribal war means hard labor for the Ethiopian police. They cannot stop the fighting, but they can cordon off the war zone, and this is labor enough, for the distances are vast and the combatants mobile. The nomads travel light, carrying arms but neither food nor drink. They sustain life by sucking a camel's udder.

Every Monday the Danakil gather at a market in Bati, the town in the foothills where the desert borders on the town. The market place is a huge grassy hill, rising just above the town, and on Mondays this hill is black with human beings and livestock.

Squatting in family groups with their wares, they are crowded so close that one can hardly thread a way among them. Their Caucasian features are as finely chiselled as a Westerner's ideal of what the human form should be, and they look more handsome carved in ebony than moulded in the bleached stuff of which Nordic skins are made. The Danakil women are naked from the waist upwards. They concentrate on their hair-do, corkscrew curls and a lacework of tresses over the crown of the head, all drenched in melted butter to keep the sun at bay.

The market hill is undulating, and each knoll is crowned with a structure like a pair of football goalposts, joined by a cross beam. These are gallows. The three sets of gallows on the knolls overtop and overawe the assembled Danakil, just to remind them that at Bati they are within reach of the arm of Ethiopian law.

Cautionary gibbets seem to be at a far remove from civilization, yet before I saw the Bati gibbets I had seen Danakil on the road to civilization at Tendaho. These were workers on the cotton plantation and in the ginning plant. The most impressive of them was a man who had spent 11 years being educated at Addis Ababa, and now he was back in Danakil land as the plantation company's chief security officer. He knows how to remove Danakil trespassers and their camels from the company's land without a fight. Only a Danakil could do that.

The conversion of Danakil warriors into workers is going to be hard and rare. The Danakil women are more promising material for the modern world, for they are workers already. The wares that the women were exchanging in the Bati market were of their own making. And those little hedgegirls whom I met in the desert—I should not wonder if my grandchildren were to see their grandchildren turn up in the world-city of the future as shorthand-typists. For the wind of change is already blowing through the elaborately braided female heads of Danakil hair.

Preposterous Painting

Voidal Simplicity

By CASSANDRA from London

PAINTING and sculpture are the most deadly of minefields and the most precarious of thin ice for the amateur rambler or the non-professional skater.

One word of criticism about these arts and you are caught in the trip-wire or plunging through into the icy water.

Many painters and sculptors cannot bear adverse comment whether informed or otherwise.

They have their own private world — although they are only too glad to be paid by the ignorant public at large — and denigration of their works is almost certainly rejected scornfully as puerile manifestations of the philistines and the barbarians. They give themselves complete licence to execute any spoof piece of pretentious nonsense and then are affronted if it is not treated with the reverence accorded to the roof of the Sistine Chapel.

When I was in New York the other day I saw some examples of so-called art that, for impudent presumption, set new records in graphic cheek.

I am told that in California — especially Southern California — they set even higher standards in the preposterous.

I have before me the catalogue of Eight New Paintings by John McLaughlin of Los Angeles.

Each work consists of only one or two rectangles of color with a single or double band of color. Nothing else.

Just that elementary geometry with color daub.

The first work is two oblongs mounted on a third. But it is Mr. McLaughlin's preface to these simple rectilinear exercises which could be executed with a ruler and set-square that give the key to this strutting pretentiousness: He writes:

"My position is based on the assumption that extended perception arises from response to the relatedness of experience. The stark, voidal simplicity of these compositions is designed to create a climate of uncompromised freedom, beyond the insistance of the particular.

"Thus, the neutral structure, devoid of the objectivism of the self-expressionistic device, indicates that cognition of the inter dependence of experience is essential to its meaning. We must agree that the parts constitute the whole. Aesthetic wholeness, within the context of epistemology, is intuitive grasp of the significance of total experience."

I don't quite know what to say to this, so I suppose I must content myself by taking my stance on the spelling of insistence.

* * *

THERE was I challenging anybody in the brevity stakes to quote me a shorter chapter in a book than that written by Somerset Maugham in "The Narrow Corner" which consists of the following words: "All this happened a good many years ago." And nothing more.

Readers, inevitably, I suppose, obliged.

Some referred me to Len Shackleton's "Clown-Prince of Soccer" in which the chapter entitled "What the average Football Director knows about the game" is followed by a blank page.

Others told me to look up Chapter eleven of "Through the Looking Glass" which reads: "and it really WAS a kitten after all."

While the winners, many of them, triumphantly told me to refer to Chapters 18 and 19 of the ninth book of Tristram Shandy by Laurence Sterne.

Both chapters are complete blanks (pages 458 and 459 in the Everyman's Library edition). Also although there is a Chapter 23 and a Chapter 25 of Book 4 there is no Chapter 24.

This literary vacuum is now closed.

New Tactics

Churches Hampered

By CECIL NORTHCOTT from London

FRESH restrictions on the Christian churches in the Soviet Union are now being reported to the World Council of Churches, of which the Russian Orthodox Church is a member.

One restriction aims at reducing their financial resources by the prohibition of collections both inside and outside the churches. Up to now the Russian churches have not been short of money owing to generous giving by congregations. All money contributions to the World Council of Churches is banned, but there can be gifts in kind.

Another restriction is the enforcement of the paper ration to the churches, which prevents the distribution of tracts, and religious information, and printed letters.

The threat to the organization of religious meetings and especially processions will become an enforcement if processions appear to disturb public order. The recent Easter celebrations which overflowed the main Moscow churches came very near to an infringement of this order.

But the biggest restriction is in the teaching of religion to minors. The Soviet Penal Code has been modified to provide for "deprivation of liberty," in place of a fine and "six months re-education." Two women have recently been sentenced to five years deprivation of liberty for running a Baptist Sunday school.

Commenting on these changes, Metropolitan Nikodim, director of the foreign office of the Russian Church, says that the Soviet Union is changing its tactics. Previously it was always "anti-clerical" and sought to make fun of the ministry and the church. But the new approach is "more scientific." The answer of the church to the new tactics would be more faithful teaching in the homes of the people. Sermons in churches could be recorded and repeated at private meetings.

Firemen's Parade

From Colonist Files

BRITISH Columbia's first major blackout test, set for May 23, "began to fall into definite shape," 25 years ago.

The 15-minute blackout was to cover the urban areas of Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster, in Victoria's case extending from Jordan River to Sidney.

"Householders in their homes and businesses will be asked to turn out all lights individually, and not at the main switches which might overload the generating systems.

"Radios may be left on, providing they show no exterior lights. Neon and other display signs must be turned off; and all vehicular traffic must draw to the curb and come to a halt, with lights dark.

"Motorists are warned that they will not be permitted to drive into urban areas during the blackout, and that while waiting at their vehicles they must not smoke or strike any form of light."

Special patrols were planned "against thieves and safe-crackers, as well as against incidental mischief."

A visitor to Victoria for a few days was Robert W. Service, the poet of the Yukon.

"Laxity in parental control" came in for a blast from Victoria's police chief in his annual report 50 years ago.

"It is patent," he said, "that parents should themselves assume the responsibility of curbing their children, instead of trusting to luck and the police to keep them out of harm's way. Parents who allow children of tender years to roam at will through the streets and parks and attend places of public amusement without a guardian are deserving of severe censure. It would seem desirable that a more or less sharp lesson should be given to those who are lax in their duty in this respect . . ."

The American barkentine Hawaii was lying in Royal Roads, loaded with lumber, having difficulty in rounding up enough of a crew for a voyage to South Africa.

Many sailing vessels had been seriously delayed in getting away to sea from Puget Sound and Columbia River ports, the Colonist noted, but this was because most of the ships were bound for the European war zone.

"The Hawaii, however, is bound for South Africa, which is far removed from the zone of submarine operations."

The first case under new legislation prohibiting the use of tobacco by minors in B.C. had been tried in Nanaimo 75 years ago:

"Eddy Hase, aged 12, pleaded guilty to having smoked a cigarette, but said it had been given to him by a man whose horse he held. Sentence was reserved, the boy promising to appear when called upon."

New, open street cars made their first appearance on the Victoria tramway line: "They run smoothly, are very comfortable, and will no doubt be popular during the summer months."

There was no mention of a May Day celebration in Victoria, but according to a later dispatch from New Westminster the day was marked there "in the grand old-fashioned manner."

"Among the notables on the ground were Hon. Edward Blake and D. T. Blackstock, Esq. Hon. Edward Blake had luncheon with Mayor Brown and a score of leading citizens. Very little speech-making was indulged in, but the usual compliments were exchanged."

The firemen of Victoria celebrated May Day with their annual parade and in the evening, a ball, 100 years ago.

Although the population had been "visibly thinned" by the attractions (gold) of the Big Bend and Cariboo, the parade was "one of the most successful from the point of numbers."

At noon the Deluge, Tiger and Hook and Ladder companies, "having observed their customary etiquette by walking upon one another," assembled in Government Street with their engines, apparatus and banners and marched across the James Bay bridge to the Government Buildings.

They were inspected and addressed by Governor Kennedy; then they marched to the council chamber, "where His Worship the Mayor and the city fathers and civic functionaries were invited to inspect the engines.

"Flags were hoisted all over the town and the day was generally observed as a holiday."

At the ball in the Lyceum Hall, the red Garibaldi shirts of the firemen considerably added to the gaiety of the scene, which was one of life and animation until the 'wee, sma' hours' warned the festive throng to their homes and couches."

Jockeying Starts for Ailing Mao's Job

Chinese Leadership Upheaval Expected

BACKGROUND

By SUNDAR RAJAN, from New Delhi

Tze-tung was a major obstacle

Russian statesmen are proceeding on the assumption that significant leadership changes may shortly be underway in Communist China.

The Kremlin thinks that before the year is out there may be a shakeup, ranging from mild to drastic in Peking.

This clue to Soviet thinking on what goes on inside Communist China was provided to this correspondent by an important member of the pro-Moscow wing of the Communist Party of India (CPI).

He indicated he was speaking on the strength of information relayed from Moscow by Shripad Dange and other Indian delegates to the recent 23rd Congress of the Soviet Communita Party.

According to reports circulating in India, Mikhail Suslov, a member of the Soviet Presidium, recently told P. Sundarayya, leader of the CPI's pro-Peking wing, that China's Mao in the path of a Sino-Soviet rapprochement but that he did not expect Mao would continue to dominate the Chinese scene "beyond the next 12 months."

Sundarayya was in Moscow for a surgical operation.

India's Communists, particularly those belonging to the pro-Moscow faction, seem to believe that Mao has suffered a marked setback to his health and that consequently an incipient leadership struggle has begun in Peking.

One Red leader told me that reports of Mao's illness cannot be dismissed as Western fabrication or, as the Chinese seem to be implying of late, Soviet-inspired. At the same time, he stressed that Mao is not on his deathbed.

Meanwhile, Tibetan sources in India say that recently Lhasa, capital of Tibet, was swept by rumors that Mao is suffering from cancer.

According to the Tibetans, the Chinese military commander in Lhasa called some lamas (Buddhist monks) to his office and asked them to organize special prayers for "the greatness of the Communitst Party and the health of Chairman Mao."

Many Afro-Asian diplomats here also are no longer inclined to dismiss reports of Mao's poor health as inspired by interested parties.

Some knowledgeable diplomats and political observers in the Indian capital think that the real contenders for power in Peking are Prime Minister Chou En-lai, 67, and Defence Minister and First First Deputy Prime Minister Lin Piao, 57.

They rate Chou's position as stronger.

Indian Communists say the Kremlin is hoping that Mao's exit may pave the way to an ultimate ideological reconciliation with the Chinese Communists.

Observers say that Moscow may even be ready to meet the Chinese halfway. In other words, the Russians may be prepared to make ideological concessions to the Chinese Communist Party. In the Indian view this could mean a hardening of Moscow's attitude toward West.

It is not just diplomats, politicians and journalists who are concerned over Mao's health.

Pandit Raghunath Shastri, an astrologer of Benares, says that "Mao will shed his mortal coils any time between August 1966 and May 1967."

Shastri claims to have correctly forecast President Kennedy's assassination.

Hong Kong Rumors Recur

By EDWARD NEILAN, from Hong Kong

Reports are again current here about the poor health of Communist China's leader Mao Tse-tung.

His apparent successors sound every bit as rigid as the old revolutionary but it is known that factions exist among the top echelons and these factions hold differing views about the future of the country.

Chiefly, the schism is between the party members and the military and is subtle enough at the moment not to cause more than subsurface ripples. But a major event like the passing of Mao could cause a rumble that would rock political seismographs.

Basically, the political leaders insist on continued rigidity and an adherence to Mao's teachings. The military, at least some of them, is believed to think that this very rigidity could spell defeat.

They believe more realistic policies are needed so the country can develop as did Russia.

This belief, according to evidence available here, stems from the China military chiefs' realization that a continued hard-line policy means inevitable open war with the United States.

And they know that China is not prepared for this, that such a war would further weaken the country.

Aldermen Confess Cluelessness

Time to Scrap Civil Defence?

CITY HALL COMMENT

By A. H. MURPHY

Primary purpose of the annual aldermanic bouts with the budget is, of course, to keep the tax rate down but there are fringe benefits to the scrutiny of departmental spending estimates.

One is that it serves as a school for new aldermen and a refresher course for old ones. The other is that it occasionally uncovers areas of ignorance.

One such came to light last week when a $20,600 estimate for civil defence came up for examination.

"What is this all about?" someone asked.

"I'm sure I haven't a clue and I believe I'm chairman of that committee," an alderman responded.

"No you're not," said another, "I am, and I haven't a clue either."

"Well I wouldn't worry," said a senior city official. "Most of the money is supplied by federal grants so I suppose it's a contentious item."

The aldermen are not named here because I'm sure about 90 per cent of the other elected representatives knew just as much about civil defence as they did.

It is one of those dead areas of municipal activity which are carried on from year to year and seem to perpetuate themselves only by the fact that they keep out of the public eye.

About the only useful piece of information which came out of the discussion was that a city employee was paid $100 a month to look after civil defence.

I'm told that there used to be a fairly effective civil defence organization operating on an area-wide basis here but that it fell to pieces and now is broken into five segments.

To quickly weld five such groups into a cohesive effective, fast-moving force in an emergency would be practically impossible.

I know that there are people who, over the years, have worked hard and without pay for civil defence and it is too bad that the public looks on the whole business the way it does but I'm afraid there are few who take it seriously.

Perhaps we ought to scrap the whole silly business.

Labor Complaint Unlikely to Be Heeded

Late Store Hours Wanted by Public

By JACK FEY

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will have a surprise waiting for him when he returns to his office tomorrow after a vacation in Mexico.

In the mail that has been piling up in his desk he will find a letter from the Victoria Labor Council telling him it doesn't like the way Victoria merchants are running their businesses.

In particular, the labor council is opposed to night shopping hours because of a trend for stores to stay open longer and longer, throwing heavier burdens onto employees and encouraging moonlighting.

I understand the letter asks Mr. Campbell what steps can be taken by the provincial government to force the stores back into uniform closing hours.

The labor council is tilting its lance at a windmill of public opinion and I don't see how it can expect to win any support from the municipal affairs department.

An old shop closing hour act passed around the time of the First World War — to safeguard the interests of employees — was blended into the Municipal Act in the form of an amendment in 1957.

This required, generally, that stores close no later than 6 p.m. five nights a week and no later than 9 p.m. one other night in the week.

But municipal councils have the power to classify certain businesses as exempt from the Municipal Act closing regulations, and Saanich took the lead in this direction several years ago.

As Saanich clerk Gordon Hayward explains it: "We had headaches all the time, trying to enforce closing hours. But we've never had such peace since we did this."

Primary reason for the new approach is that people want the stores open. But it is also noted that labor legislation passed through the years has accomplished the intent of the old closing hours law.

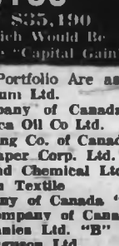

B.C. now has labor laws for eight-hour work days and 44-hour work weeks, a $1 an hour minimum wage scale and payment of 1½ times regular rates after the 40-hour mark has been passed.

Municipal councils elected by the people are allowing stores to set their own closing hours, and popular acceptance of open-shopping here is proof enough this is what the public wants.

It's almost certian the municipal affairs department won't interfere. The Bennett government has placed itself on record as favoring full democratic expression at the local level.

Big Show Marks 20th Anniversary

Victoria Operatic Society Tackles Famed Oklahoma!

By JERRY BOULTBEE

Members of Victoria's operatic society don't look much like Oklahomans—nor do they sound it off-stage.

But come May 9, when the curtain rises at McPherson Playhouse on the society's 20th spring show, Oklahomans there will be — in force.

Rodgers and Hammerstein's view of Oklahoma! has been a hit with audiences for many years — first on the stage, and later with the movie-version of the show.

REPUTATION

In short, the musical has earned the sort of reputation that has led audiences to both demand and expect first rate entertainment.

If for no other reason, it's because of this that the Victoria Operatic Society has taken on a big load in trying to live up to the show.

But they're determined to do it — and if the verve and gusto of recent rehearsal is any indication, they'll do it with honors.

NEW PREMISES

The society has found themselves new premises for their rehearsals for this spring's show — the Unitarian church hall at 109 Superior.

It's a large hall, with numerous adjoining rooms where members of the cast have been able to assemble in their various groups to work the component parts of the show into a slick, well-timed and precisioned performance.

"We've lots of fears — but then there always are," said producer Tony Wilkins.

"We seem to have ironed out all the major difficulties."

It was certainly an expression of confidence for one who has not undertaken the role of producer before.

As he was talking, the director, Allan Purdy was busy in another portion of the building rehearsing a scene with two of the principals.

Probably one of the most excited staffers is Frank Brawn, stage manager and set-builder.

Dedication he has — to the point of building the complete sets in the wee basement of his own home.

No small undertaking.

SETS MOBILE

The sets are all double-sided and mounted on coasters for easy shifting and turning.

"We've made them all in various pieces, and they'll just snap together," he said.

Not the least of his undertakings will be the switching of sets on stage in total darkness. There'll be no curtain between scenes.

There's a large cast for the show — supported by a "cast" of almost equal proportions behind stage.

PRESIDENT HELPS

Assisting Allan Purdy as stage director will be the society's president, Margaret Duff.

Howard Denike is again acting as musical director for the production — a role he has undertaken for other performances.

Loraine Travis acts as his assistant, and orchestra pianist, while choreography is being tended by Wynne Shaw and June Elsdon.

Don Esselmont is heading up properties — "seeing that everyone who should get a teacup or a knife actually gets it."

FAMILY AFFAIR

Alan Robertson sees to lighting and stage technicalities; Mimi Robertson, his wife, to costumes, and Maria McDowell will head a team of eight make-up artists.

In all, it holds every promise of being a rich and substantial production honoring the society's 20th anniversary.

It's certainly not the first Rodgers and Hammerstein show the group has tackled — but it's probably one of the biggest and most ambitious.

Rhinoceritis

College Play Now Tradition

All schools love tradition and Brentwood College is no exception.

The school's drama club, in staging Chips With Everything at the McPherson May 6 and 7, is following the "tradition" started last year with the staging of the successful Anti-gone.

The Arnold Wesker play of service life — a mild version of The Hill — was chosen by the private boys' school mainly because it has an all-male cast.

Ages of cast members in this week's production range from 14 to 17.

To inject as much realism as possible, director Robert Orr, a master at Brentwood College, called in Peter McLennan, an ex-army drill instructor, to coach the boys for the drill sequences.

Although this is a school effort, the play is being presented as public entertainment. Public support will dictate whether the tradition thrives or expires.

Lively scene from Brentwood College's production of Chips With Everything shows Archie (Arne Dahl) encouraging collegues to drink up during Christmas party in NAAFI. Play opens at McPherson Friday.

Mexicans Rap Hope

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Comedian Bob Hope is under fire from Mexican authorities who charged he ridiculed Mexicans as "bandits and buffoons" in a television show.

The attack came only a few weeks after Frank Sinatra was banned from Mexico because of his movie Marriage On The Rocks.

Edmundo Gonzalez, Mexican consul general in Los Angeles, accused the National Broadcasting Co. in a letter of presenting Mexico and Mexicans in an unfavorable manner "as a country of bandits and buffoons, usually dirty and unkempt."

Metal Javelin Shorts Power

TRAIL (CP)—Police are investigating an incident in which someone caused a blackout for 25 minutes in Trail and over two hours in outlying areas by throwing a metal javelin across a 7,200-volt power line. West Kootenay Power Co. says it will charge those responsible for power failure and all costs involved.

NORTH BREEZES

A visitor to IMPERIAL dining room told our maitre d' Les Szabo he had just been on a tour of the Gorge.

"There are few cities with such a beautiful waterway," said the visitor.

LES TOLD HIM PROUDLY THAT THE CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT COMMISSION WILL SPEND $36,000 THERE THIS YEAR, MAKING IT EVEN MORE BEAUTIFUL.

"WHAT A WONDERFUL SETTING FOR WATER SPORTS. WILL THEY BUILD MORE BEACHES?" ASKED THE VISITOR.

Les said he understood the water is tainted by septic tanks and the bottom deep in sludge.

"Then this beautification is like putting frosting on a mud pie isn't it?" asked our visitor. "Why don't they clean it up first?"

One thing about maitre d's —they shrug wonderfully.

MARY GRANT, who is heading for Halifax, said "I'm not going to win fame and fortune, I'm going to learn 83 verses of Squid Jiggin' Ground."

Mary, raised in Victoria, was singing in amateur shows when she was 12, and she's been singing ever since. But not as an amateur.

During her career in Victoria, her lungs have outlasted many of the nightspots where audiences heard her bombastic sing ing style.

★ ★ ★ —

She cut a record of I Didn't Know the Gun Was Loaded, before she was in her teens. It was part of the prize for winning semi-final on a radio show.

But that record aside, her style has been suited to a live audience.

She's worked with most of the leading Victoria musicians, Charlie Hunt, Ted Spencer, George Fairfield, Jack Carmichael, Irving Lozier's Dixieland band, and Dave Pepper, who she rates "one of the best in the country."

Recently, she has been trying to preserve her lungs. The barrel style new alternates with musical comedy numbers. "It's easier on the wind and the blood pressure."

Mary, whose husband is in the navy, will be in Nova Scotia for at least two year. She's already got contacts lining up singing jobs and television work on the east coast.

Before leaving she achieved an ambition. She worked on stage with two of her three children, Jeri, 8 and Peter, 7. They all appeared in the Solarium show.

Mary had kind words for the musician she worked with in Victoria, and people like Bebe Eversfield, who helped her.

Her one critical comment of the Victoria scene would be: "Many artists get swelled heads, which is ridiculous in a town this size. Let's face it, Hollywood it ain't!"

The Music Hall, a new coffee-house in Victoria, is doing everything possible to get on its feet and stay in the Victoria scene.

Bringing together entertainment from Vancouver and Victoria, mainly in the folk idiom, Jon York (that's how he spells it) hopes to provide something for the ethnic audience, and for those who just like to be entertained.

The Music Hall, in the basement of the Century Inn, is now running throughout the week.

It resolves itself into a club from Monday to Thursday, and regular entertainment is provided for the weekend.

Included in club activities are chess, books (remember those? They predate Playboy), coffee, talk, and listening to impromptu work of many local folk artists.

Eric Nicol's successful (in Vancouver) Like Father Like Fun, will be the opening production of the season of the Manitoba Theatre Centre.

Bastion Theatre, recently consorting with pigs, is now going to the dogs.

After exciting times with Peter the Pig in Three Parts Benedict, the company is now trying to cast a dog for Paul Osborn's On Borrowed Time, which runs May 23 to 28 at McPherson Playhouse.

What next, a rhinoceros?

What next indeed! There's nothing more prepoceros than a stage rhinoceros, and Campus Players will reach beyond the prepoceros to the absurd, in their production which opens Tuesday.

Bill West, of Changeling repute, is set designer for the Ionesco play.

DDF Finals Line-Up Offers Wide Choice

By PATRICK O'NEILL

There are only two plays you may not recognize in the Dominion Drama Final at McPherson Playhouse this month.

One is Les Bonnes by Jean Genet, which you may have missed. M. Genet is a very contemporary (i.e. homosexual, thief) playwright.

The play, to be performed Wednesday, May 18, is produced by The Contemporary Movement, Montreal.

Another reason Victoria may not have heard of it is because (despite the sweet Bi and Bi) it is in French.

But the more certainly unknown play is A Stranger Unto My Brethren, by John Burgess, produced by The Questors, Toronto.

Mr. Burgess' play is what is sometimes known as an "original Canadian" play. (Whether this term means new, or compliments the author for not copying whole from Hamlet, is not clear.)

Stranger etc. was the only Canadian play to make it to the finals this year, a rude note to plans for an all-Canadian final next term.

The other plays are a cross-section of this and that. Challenging more to the groups, perhaps, than to the audience.

For example, The Glass Menagerie, by Tennessee Williams, comes from Lakeside Productions, Ottawa, and will be seen on the Thursday night of the festival.

This play, in which Williams tempered his gift for realism with his love of poetry, has been around for some time. And for some members of the audience, may have been around and around and around.

Another American mid-century classic is Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman, Tuesday night, May 17 from University of New Brunswick Drama Society, Fredericton.

But the only play that has time's judgment, as well as man's, as a classic, is August Strindberg's The Father, from Vanouver Little Theatre.

Mother Courage and Her Children, a play the CBC had fun with (the phrase is used advisedly), will be seen Friday.

The Berthold Brecht play comes from London Little Theatre, London, Ont., and provides a lesson in epic theatre.

Probably no play will raise more eyebrows than The Knack by Ann Jellicoe.

The play comes from MAC Theatre Society, Calgary, and will be seen Monday, May 16.

Those who remember the Knack as a movie vehicle with Rita Tushingham, may be surprised at the outspoken aspect of the stage version.

Trophies will be presented Saturday night May 21 after A Stranger Unto My Brethren.

Against Heavy Odds

New Actress Standout In Guild Play

By E. D. WARD-HARRIS

If it had not been for Joan Fordham, Dead on Nine would have expired at 8:30.

Never have I seen a cast (with the exception of Joan Fordham) so effectively wreck a goodish play as it did Saturday night in the Theatre Guild production at Langham Court.

But first things first.

Joan Fordham, a newcomer from Ontario, making her Victoria debut against almost insuperable odds, scored a personal triumph.

USES STAGE

An amateur with a professional approach, she wears her extremely smart clothes excellently, uses the whole stage and lets the audience hear every word she says.

She needed all these attributes in full measure for she was compelled to carry the play single-handedly. In fact she was the only one who appeared to be involved in a murder plot.

There is no doubt she can hold her own with any cast likely to be assembled in Victoria, and I look forward to seeing her in a more presentable production.

SHORT NOTICE

Mrs. Fordham's husband, Ed, was originally cast as the detective but became sick during rehearsals. His place was taken at only six days notice by Bob Kimber.

Mr. Kimber deserves nothing but praise for learning his lines as such short notice and to criticize his performance in the circumstances would be boorish.

As the lover, we saw James Cotton who was making his acting debut. For this reason one must again make allowances. However, even allowing for nerves, his diction is poor and much of his dialogue was so hurried and mumbled that it failed to be comprehensible.

INEXPLICABLE

The important role of the husband in Dead on Nine is played by J. F. Carney and I do not know of any mitigating circumstances to explain his poor performance.

He spat out his lines without feeling. There was no love for his secretary — only lines to be spoken. And he invariably neglected the tension built up quite skillfully by his stage wife.

His diction needs much attention, as does his characterization which at present is that of a cardboard man.

CAMEO

John Britt won a round of applause as he exited after a cameo performance. It wasn't, I suspect, because he was so good, but because everyone else (with the exception of Joan Fordham) was so bad.

The reason for the failure of this production must be laid fairly and squarely at the feet of the director, Janet Smith.

The play is under-rehearsed and under-directed. In the case of James Cotton lack of direction is particularly apparent. A lot of the wooderness could have been ironed out.

The set was very good, the best I've seen in any Guild production. Designed by Dave Foster it was constructed by him, Gem Rowlett, Roger Dewell, Bud Bishop, Frank Morris and Janice Andrew.

RUNS ALL WEEK

Surely, if these people can take this amount of trouble to produce an excellent setting it is not too much to ask the director to produce something worthwhile in it.

As it turned out, direction gave this murder play the sort of tingling suspense that results from watching a tray of water gradually change to ice-cubes.

The play runs all this week.

Louder Than Life

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI) — Sicilian Francesco Cangemi rushed into the police station with tears in his eyes and cried out:

"I shot and killed my wife. I fired three shots. She was five months pregnant and our four children now are orphans."

Police went to his house and found Mrs. Cangemi unharmed. She told police her husband had drunk too much wine.

All he did, she said, was point his finger at her and shout: "Bang, bang, bang!" He apparently convinced himself that he had done the real thing.

Republicans Hit Book Storage

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republicans are unhappy over a "comic book stockpile" being kept in a Washington wareholuse by the Office of Economic Opportunity. Representative Albert H. Quie and Charles E. Goodell, who like to call the anti-poverty agency a "fuddle factory," charged storage on the 435,000 job corps recruiting booklets was $125 a month.

Memberships Honor Pair

Retiring president Lawrence Cottrell of the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded conferred life memberships on two Victorians at the association's annual meeting earlier this week.

Memberships were granted to association charter member A. E. Raymond, and to William Chisholm of the United Commercial Travellers.

Mr. Chisholm was honored because of the contribution of the Travellers' wishing wells, proceeds of which go to the retarded.

Law and the Driver

Many motorists are not aware of the clauses of the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act. For their benefit, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce traffic safety committee has prepared a list of traffic regulations with explanations where needed.

Not included are clauses which refer specifically to professional drivers.

Serving on the committee are Arthur Sharp, representing the superintendent of motor vehicles; Kenneth Reid, Victoria traffic engineer, and traffic specialists from all area police departments and the RCMP. Chairman is Cmdr. J. M. Leeming.

SECTION 127—Exception on Police Direction

Except where otherwise directed by a peace officer, every driver of a vehicle and every pedestrian shall obey the instructions of an applicable traffic-control device.

Comment

All drivers and pedestrians are to obey all traffic-control devices which include signs, signals, lines, meters, markings, spaces, barriers, etc. The only exception to obeying these devices is when other instructions are given by a police officer.

Barbra Bows Out

LONDON (UPI) — American singer Barbra Streisand, suffering from a mild bout of intestinal flu, missed her third straight performance in the musical comedy Funny Girl Saturday.

And, for the third time in a row, disappointed theatre goers lined up at the box office to ask for their money back.

Miss Streisand was stricken by what was described as a "mild form of gastric flu" Thursday. That night, about one-third of the 1,140 patrons of the Prince of Wales theatre walked out when it was announced she would not appear.

It had been expected she would return for Saturday's matinee.

Understudy Lisa Shane has replaced Miss Streisand.

Meanwhile two 19-year-old girls from Seattle, Wash., here on vacation said they hoped Miss Streisand would be well enough for Monday night's performance as they hold tickets for that day.

Jeannie McCullough and Theresa Puzzo were delaying their departure for home until they see her.

Chief Albany Raps Interdiction

Songhees chief John Albany Saturday labelled Tahsis magistrate H. A. Tasker's decision to interdict every adult in Friendly Cove "a blow against integration of the races."

"We in Canada always brag about the lack of discrimination, but this is discrimination.

"They are punishing all for the misdeeds of a few."

Chief Albany said the magistrate needs "education in how to be a Canadian."

"He's got quite a headache coming."

Chief Albany said the magistrate is "trying to make a name for himself."

Sensational Trial

Accused Next Moors Witness

CHESTER, England, (UPI) — The "bodies on the moor" trial reaches an unexpected climax Monday when British attorney-general Sir Elwyn Jones quizzes accused murderer Ian Brady about the slayings of three children.

It will be the first time in nine years that a British attorney-general has cross examined a defendant in a murder trial.

Brady surprised the court Friday by taking the stand in his own defence and pleading that although he was a killer, he was not a murderer.

THREE DEATHS

Brady, 28, and his bleached-blonde mistress, 23-year-old Myra Hindley, are on trial for the murders of Edward Evans, 17, Lesley Ann Downey, 10, and John Kilbride, 12.

Evans' body was found Oct. 7, bludgeoned and strangled, in the house Brady and Miss Hindley shared in the industrial suburb of Hyde outside Manchester. The bodies of the two pre-teen children were found later buried in a desolate moor.

Brady denied he had killed the two children though he admitted that he had forced Lesley Ann to pose nude for pornographic pictures the night she disappeared.

ARGUMENT

The former stock clerk admitted hitting Evans with an axe but said it was done in the heat of argument not out of premeditation.

As Brady spoke in the hushed courtroom, wary guards circulated through the spectators gallery as a precaution against any violent attacks against the defendant. There have been numerous threats of assassination against Brady and Miss Hindley and they have been shielded in court by a bullet-proof glass enclosure.

Brady launched into an expected attack against the Crown's star witness, 19-year-old David Smith, and tried to implicate him in the Downey and Evans slayings.

Smith, Miss Hindley's brother-in-law, testified last week that he was lured to witness the Evans slaying because he refused to believe Brady's boasts that he killed three or four persons. Police found Evans' body after Smith reported the killing.

Seeking to discredit the testimony against him, Brady said Smith hit Evans on the head with a stick during the argument. He also said that after the photographs were taken of Lesley Ann, she departed with Smith.

Stores Closed Despite Polls

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — City council has given third reading to a bill requiring stores to close half a day on Monday despite the protests of 2,200 of 3,000 people polled by telephone and ballots. The bill requires final adoption next week to become official.

WORDS SHE WILL NEVER HEAR...

A great deal is being said and printed these days about juvenile delinquency. Many prominent educators, judges, statesmen, clergymen, and others are saying that a better use of leisure time by young people could greatly reduce the delinquency. One neighbor of Johnny Green's said this: "Kids don't know how to work these days." Another commented: "Some teenagers don't grow up; they just sit."

There may be much truth in what these people say. But the comments which they are making are not directed to the mother of Johnny Green. For Johnny is a newspaperboy. He has a business of his own — and work to do. He keeps busy — building his route, keeping accurate records, figuring out better ways to serve his customers. He's learning to accept responsibility as a way of everyday living. He's using his leisure time to grow up!

with a NEWSPAPER BUSINESS of his own and his parents behind him a GREAT FUTURE lies ahead

Trustees Take Tour

Smaller Windows Keep Schools Cool

By BILL STAVDAL

Greater Victoria school trustees took an on-the-spot look at their $25,000,000-plus investment Saturday.

Among other things, they saw first-hand why apartment buildings cost ratepayers more for schools, and why school windows are getting smaller.

The day-long tour of 15 schools (the district has 48) was aimed at familiarizing the school board with both older buildings and newest construction.

Buildings and equipment in the Greater Victoria School District are valued above $25,000,000, exclusive of more than 400 choice acres.

The trustees visited the new Victor Street school for retarded, scheduled to open June 1. Trainable children of low intelligence will learn household skills in a building that looks more like a modern home than an institution.

They visited older buildings, like the James Bay area's South Park School, where a tiny cloakroom serves as a makeshift library-storage area.

APARTMENTS

The effect of apartment construction and increasing population density was on display at several long-established schools in the central city. Margaret Jenkins elementary, which started out with eight rooms, has been enlarged three times and now has 26 rooms.

Monterey School in Oak Bay had to be enlarged, and three extra acres acquired for additional playground space. Cost of buying and razing the homes: $93,000.

Families in general are getting bigger, buildings and grounds committee chairman Peter Bunn explained.

Besides, many older couples have moved out of big old homes, and young families have moved in.

School windows are being built smaller, said buildings and grounds superintendent A. H. Smith, because big ones allow the sun to heat classrooms too much.

Old-style classrooms used to be built lofty so that high windows would admit light to the far side of the room.

But the expanse of glass caused a cold draft along the row of seats closest to the windows.

In any case, schools today have uniform lighting which is on all day.

Police End Prince Hunt

WIESBADEN (AP) — Police reported Thursday they had broken off their search action for Prince Friedrich of Prussia, who disappeared April 19 from his luxury hotel on the Rhine River. A police official said investigators now will restrict themselves to following up any tips they receive. Prince Friedrich, 54, is a grandson of the last German Kaiser.

King Fisherman

Weigh-In Stations

Anglers' Contest Starts

Wherever you fish on Vancouver Island or the Gulf Islands there is a handy Colonist King Fisherman Contest weigh-in station ready to record your catch of salmon five pounds or heavier or trout and bass one pound or heavier.

Anyone who fishes on Vancouver Island can enter the contest, except commercial fishing and fishing guides. Victoria Press employees have a separate edition of the contest for themselves and may enter by writing VPL Employee at one end of the entry form.

You don't have to be a Colonist subscriber to get in on the fun of the Contest, but it sure pays. The big merchandise prizes go only to subscribers. Non-subscribers may compete for Prince Buttons and trophies.

More than 200 places on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands are taking part in the King Fisherman Contest as weigh-in stations.

Here is the complete list of weigh-in stations. We suggest you clip it out and keep it in the glove compartment of your car, your tackle box or some other handy place.

First weigh-in for Colonist King Fisherman Contest is made by Ray Deall, 1897 Carnarvon, at Oak Bay Marina. He caught salmon weighing 15, 21:12, 12:12 and 8 pounds off Discovery Island.—(Jim Ryan)

Toronto Skyline Dwarfed

Buildings of Toronto's skyline look insignificant from 56th floor of new Toronto-Dominion centre building, now the tallest building in Commonwealth. Largest steel-clad building in the world, 710 feet tall, was "topped" last week. It will be finished in time to celebrate Canada's centennial in 1967.—(Fednews)

'Slum' Forecast Fails to Come True

Development Confounds The Prophets of Doom

By JIM BRAHAN

Prophets of doom who, at a Saanich public hearing four years ago, forecast that Burnside Garden apartments would become a slum area, couldn't have been more wrong.

The nine-acre development between Burnside and Tillicum, south of the Trans-Canada Highway, has developed into one of the most compact and highly regarded neighborhoods in the municipality.

"I'll be darned if this will become a slum area as long as I am here," says manager Donald Yuskin.

350 CHILDREN

There are approximately 350 children living in the apartment community.

"This can pose problems at times," Mr. Yuskin said, "but many times we adults tend to forget that we were once children, and the basic problems haven't changed since our days.

"Most of the difficulties that arise can be squared away by using plain common sense. I find if I treat the young tenants the same way as I would like to be treated I seldom go wrong.

YOUNG IN MIND

"The development was designed for children. The completely equipped playground, including its 30-foot-by-60-foot swimming pool, is away from the streets, and is completely surrounded by the buildings. This helps to keep the tots from wandering."

The manager added that there were two elementary schools, as well as a junior high school within easy walking distance from the apartment site. Also a shopping centre adjoins the property.

An outside painting program to further enhance the buildings has been planned for this year.

This spring's garden chores for the apartments' shrubs and trees were attended to by the older resident boys.

"I hired them for the job because I found that when boys actually work hard on cultivation and planting of shrubbery they not only treat it with more respect, but also help keep the younger ones from wrecking it.

"Also some of them were school drop-outs. I hate to see a youngster quit school, and to these I explained that a shovel would be the only tool a school drop-out would be qualified to use.

"I gave the boys a pretty rough ride while they were working in hopes they might see the necessity of returning to finish their schooling."

The development's streets are cleared daily of any paper debris, and once a week are gone over with a vacuum-type road cleaner.

SPEED LIMIT

Early this year, Saanich council, because of the many children living in the apartments, placed a 15 mile-an-hour speed limit on the streets of the site.

The entire development has its own fluorescent street lighting system.

The 120 units consist of two and three bedroom suites, which rent under lease for $120 and $135 respectively.

There are 1,250 square feet of floor space in the three-bedroom units, while the two bedroom suites have 950 square feet.

Glass Pierces Girl's Heart

QUIMPER, France (UPI) — Doctors removed a glass splinter from the heart of a 13-year-old girl, a spokesman at a local hospital said Friday. The girl, Maryvonne Guillamet, who had fallen through a window, was reported in good condition after the two hour operation. Doctors said she was saved because her cardiac muscles were in excellent condition, and because she quickly received a blood transfusion.

The Stamp Packet

New Malta Issue Again Historical

By FAITH ANGUS

The small but strategic island of Malta is foremost among countries that perpetuate their history on postage stamps and few countries have a greater source of ancient and varied history upon which to draw.

St. Paul's story of his shipwreck off Melita and the kindness shown him by its inhabitants is the theme of many Maltese stamps.

The Great Siege of 1565, when Knights of the Order of St. John and the Maltese, repulsed a large Turkish army, is depicted on the ½-penny stamp of the 1956 issue.

Prior to becoming a British possession, the island was used as a Mediterranean fumigating station where mail from all over the world was exposed to vinegar fumes in order to kill germs of the plague. Specimens of these letters still in existence, are usually post-marked with a Malta impression and slit to insure fumigation.

In 1957 Malta issued three stamps to commemorate the award of the George Cross for the island's heroic contribution to Second World War efforts.

And so we come to the latest issue of five stamps released March 28, to honor the 4th century of the foundation of the new city of Valletta. Each stamp carries a different design and denominations are 2d, 3d, 6d, 1/- and 2/6.

Incidents connected with the founding of the city in 1566 are depicted on the stamps; the 2d features Grandmaster Jean Parisor De La Valette who ruled over the Order of St. John of Jerusalem during the Great Siege and who took a prominent part in raising funds for the building of the city named after him. His coat of arms is also shown on the stamp.

The 3d shows Pope Pious V, whose aid was enlisted and who sent Francesco Laparelli, to help with the plans; the 6d shows a plan view of the city and its coat of arms. The 1/- features Francesco Laparelli and some of his stonemasons; the 2/6d depicts the Maltese architect, Gerolamo Cassar and the Church of St. John.

Designs are by Chev Cremona and printing by the Austrian state printers by multicolor photogravure on unwater-marked paper, in sheets of 60.

The first airmail stamps ever issued in the Cook Islands were placed on sale April 22. There are nine denominations—6d, 7d, 10d, 1/-, 1/6d, 2/3d, 5/-, 10/-, £1.

They were prepared by the government printer in Rarotonga by overprinting ordinary and commemorative stamps with wording and an aircraft design. In some cases the old denominations have been revalued. The overprint-plates were destroyed.

The Cook Islands government has abandoned its plan to finance a pension plan by the sale of stamps to collectors. Stamp sales will continue to be handled by the Bureau of the Post Office, not by outside agencies.

Coast Lighting & Heating Appointment

D. R. Webb, Vice-President of Coast Lighting & Heating (Division of Coast Fluorescent Ltd.), announces the appointment of Donald C. Mathison as Sales Manager. Mr. Mathison has had many years' experience in the field of selling.

He is very active in community service work—vice-chairman of the Saanich Advisory Planning Commission and Director of the Community Planning Association of Canada (Capital Region Board).

As an executive member of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, he is currently Managing Director of the Victoria Exhibition.

Group Studies Rental Plan

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A special committee of city council members is studying the feasibility of building rental homes under a federal government scheme. Council acted on a suggestion by Ald. Elroy Garden.

Q. We bought an older home 10 years ago. The previous owners used a plastic coating on the kitchen linoleum which has now turned yellow. In walking and working areas, the plastic coating has worn off. I have tried lots of removers, but it doesn't help. I have discovered that by scraping with a knife, the other plastic surface can be removed, but it is too much work for a large kitchen. Any suggestions?

A. Have you tried a good paint remover, or just wax removers? Anyway, a good quality paint remover should do the job if applied to a small section of the linoleum at a time, then using steel wool as it becomes soft.

When the section is clean, wash with a mild soap and rinse with clear water, then wipe with a clean, dry cloth. Do not allow paint remover to remain on the linoleum surface any longer than absolutely necessary, because the remover will have a solvent action on the oils in the floor covering.

If this does not work, try a fine sandpaper. Otherwise, back to the scraping.

Q. We have been using bricks and boards as temporary bookcases in our home. Due to lack of ventilation, the bricks mildewed and soiled our oak floor. Is there any solvent or cleaner that will remove black mildew?

A. Scrub the wood with a solution of two-thirds cup of trisodium phosphate, available at any drugstore; one-third cup of detergent, mixed in one quart of household bleach, and three quarts of warm water. Rinse with plenty of clear water.

However, after removing the mildew, it may be necessary to refinish the wood. If the stain has penetrated into the wood, further bleaching may be necessary.

Dissolve four ounces of oxalic acid crystals per gallon of water in a nonmetallic container. Using a cloth or soft brush, apply the solution to an entire board or area at a time. When the wood dries, rinse with clear water.

More than one application may be necessary if the discoloration is severe. If the latter treatment is needed, it definitely will be necessary to refinish the wood.

Q. We have just purchased a home and the concrete driveway is badly stained with rust. Could you please tell me the solution that will remove this unsightly stain?

A. For rust stains in concrete, dissolve one part sodium citrate in six parts of water and add six parts of commercial glycerin. Mix part of this with enough powdered whiting to form a paste and spread on the stain in a thick coat. When it is dry, replace with fresh paste or moisten with remaining liquid.

A week or more may be required for complete removal of the stains. There also are some good commercial rust stain removers on the market now.

Q. I want to recane an old rocker, and want to know what kind of protective coating to apply to the cane.

A. Clean the caning with turpentine. Then apply two or three coats of fresh white shellac, thinned half-and-half with denatured alcohol, or a good grade of varnish. Clear lacquer or plastic, available in aerosol form, could also be used. It is easier than brushing.

For Offshore Oil Hunt

Steel Monster Rises For Sea Oil Hunt

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

In terms of dollar value, Victoria Machinery Depot has had bigger jobs than the giant offshore oil-drilling rig which it is currently constructing for Shell of Canada.

But in terms of sheer physical size, and the amount of steel being utilized, the rig is an easy record for the famous Victoria shipbuilding plant.

Harold Husband, president of the company, last week showed me over parts of the monster that are being put together on the launching ways.

8,000 TONS

"Eight thousand tons of steel will go into the job when it is completed," said Mr. Husband.

The interesting part of the job is that every piece of steel used is cut, shaped, welded and fabricated inside the Victoria yard.

The pieces range in size from plates a few feet long to huge trusses over 100 feet long and nine feet in diameter.

PONTOONS

The trusses both nine feet and six feet in diameter are the pieces that will hold the rig together.

At the moment, the three pontoons, on which the rig depends for buoyancy, are something like small covered scows. They are being assembled on the same launching ways from which the VMD has splashed so many of its ships into the water.

When the pontoons are completed, they will be launched separately and moved round to the fitting-out basin. Here they will become three corners of a giant triangular rig. The struts and trusses that are being built separately will then be fitted to hold them together.

SIX BUILT

Pictures have already been published showing how the finished rig will dwarf the Empress Hotel but one has to see at close range the immensity of the parts that in diagrams look quite slender pieces.

So far only six drilling rigs of this type have been, or are being built, all over the world. They are said to be the last word in efficiency by those whose work it is to search for oil under the water.

Mr. Husband is exceedingly hopeful that if oil is subsequently discovered off the B.C. coast there will be more orders for drilling rigs for VMD.

UNEMPLOYED

"With our shipbuilding practically at a stop, this type of work alone is keeping us going," he said.

"We don't complain on that score, but at present the rig is not employing all the crafts that go to make up a normal shipyard personnel."

All the men working now there are technicians, steel workers and welders. The rig does not supply jobs for such important shipbuilding crafts as electricians and carpenters—at least not yet.

FUTURE

It is because of this that VMD and the other B.C. shipyards are so worried about their future.

The local shipbuilders know that so long as the federal government calls for national tenders, no more ships will be built for the government on this coast.

Because there is a $1 an hour wage differential between the B.C. and the Quebec yards, and as freight also adds to West Coast costs, the local shipbuilders have decided it is not worthwhile bidding for government contracts so long as they have to compete with the low cost Quebec yards.

LOSING MEN

"We have made the strongest possible representation to Ottawa that they should build their ships for use in the Pacific in the B.C. yards, but so far we have not been successful," said Mr. Husband.

"We have told them that without government orders we cannot get enough work to maintain our skilled shipyard workers and that eventually we will lose many of our key men."

"Even if we get all the jobs that are going from other sources—and this included drilling rigs—we cannot maintain our positions as fully integrated shipbuilding yards without a share of the federal business," he said.

IMPORTANT

"I don't want it to be thought that VMD will go out of business," said Mr. Husband. "Because we will always manage to find some construction jobs to do, but without Ottawa giving us a share of the national business we cannot hope to remain anything like so important an economic asset to the Victoria district as we are today."

Union Carbide Canada Ltd. has become a partner in Chicoutimi Silicon Ltd., joining Aluminum Company of Canada, Montreal Engineering Company and Royal Securities Corporation.

A plant to cost $3,000,000 will be built to produce 7,000 tons of silicon a year and another $3,500,000 plant will turn out 25,000 to 25,000 tons of ferrosilicon a year.

Silicon is an iron and steel additive.

Craft Nears Completion

Prominent changing shape on Victoria's waterfront is converted American landing craft being completed for trailer and railway car transportation for Canadian Pacific Railways. Work is by McKay-Cormack on detail design by Victoria naval architect Ray Richards. When completed by mid-June, craft will be able to carry 30 trailers or 19 boxcars. She will operate out of Sidney and Nanaimo to Vancouver with an eight-man crew.—(William Boucher)

Equity Offers

Growth Plans Sparking Money Hunt

By ROBERT SULLIVAN
Los Angeles Times

Corporations are beginning to shake the investor money tree harder than anytime since 1961.

In trying to assess the outlook of the stock market, several brokers this week were struck by the explosion of plans by corporation executives to raise fresh capital through the sale of additional common stock.

To a certain extent, many analysts concluded, the diversion of investor cash to participate in new offerings will have a dampening effect on market prices in general.

EQUITIES

Tight money, near-record high interest rates and a none-too-robust bond market are important reasons for turning to equity financing.

IBM joined the bandwagon this week with an announcement that it will seek to raise $350,000,000 to meet production demand for the company's System 360 computer system. IBM's offering of common stock will be the first it has made since 1957 and only the second since 1925. In 1957, the company raised $226,000,000 through the sale of 1,050,000 shares.

Boeing, which will have to commit between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 to develop its new 747 jet airliner, sometimes described as a flying auditorium, is coming to the market with a bundle of new common stock.

United Air Lines' shareowners will be asked to buy about $100,000,000 of additional common. Occidental Petroleum has plans to raise $60,000,000 through the sale of convertible debentures. Admiral and Fairchild Camera also have offerings in the works.

These are just a few of the recently announced major stock offerings.

NEW ISSUES

Another that will probably soak up over $500,000,000 of available investor capital will be the sale of more than 6,500,000 shares of Trans World Airlines shares — the holdings of Howard Hughes. (This will not constitute a new offering, but the underwriters will have to interest hundreds — and more likely thousands — of investors in buying the shares.)

For the first time since 1961-1962, a surge of new issues of stock has developed. This week, the Wall Street Journal reported that "advertised new offerings in the first nine weeks of this year totaled $31,100,000, 76 per cent below the volume of $128,900,000 a year earlier."

But, it was pointed out, "in the past seven weeks such offerings zoomed to $524,300,000, almost a tenfold rise over the comparable 1965 period."

LARGEST

The TWA secondary will have the distinction of being the largest block of stock offered by an investment banking syndicate managed by one concern — Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc.

The reason for so much beating of the bushes for money is the fact that American business plans to spend $61,640,000,000 for new plants and equipment this year, according to a recent survey by McGraw-Hill. This is 19 per cent more than was spent last year.

Much of the money needed will come from sources other than the stock market, of course, but it is becoming increasingly apparent that common share investors will be called on for a husky share of it.

EXPANSION

Manufacturers plan to spend $27,800,000,000 for new facilities this year, or 24 per cent more than was spent in 1965. They also will devote 48 per cent of their total expenditures to expansion, a move that is expected to increase capacity 8 per cent by the end of 1966. It will mark the heaviest outlay for expansion in nearly 10 years.

The impact of new equity demand on the stock market is difficult to measure but analysts are generally agreed that it will be felt to a degree. The offering of 6,500,000 shares of TWA stock alone will be about equal to the average daily turnover of stock in 1965 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Teamsters

Union Says Accept

TORONTO (CP)—Members of the independent Teamsters union have voted 4,369 to 885 to accept the latest proposal of 55 trucking companies and end Ontario's three - month trucking strike, the provincial labor department announced today.

Ballots were counted by representatives of the labor department here during the last three days. The union, with an Ontario membership of 8,500, started voting by mail in five Ontario locals last Monday after a preliminary agreement was reached in Toronto.

Terms of the agreement include a 70-cent-an-hour wage increase, plus 17 - cents - an - hour fringe increase. The key issue in the dispute—a 40-hour week is also included in the new settlement.

NOT WORKING

The work week will decrease to 44 hours when the new three-year contract is signed, to 42 by Jan. 1, 1967 and to 40 by Jan. 1, 1968.

But the union has said its members will not return to work until a separate agreement is reached between the firms and 1,000 machinists.

WALK OFF

The strike, which has paralysed portions of southern Ontario's vital inter-city transport, started Jan. 13 when workers at two Toronto firms walked off the job. The Motor Transport Industrial Relations Bureau, representing the firms, retaliated by closing its 55 member companies.

The strike appeared to be over three weeks ago when the Teamsters' executive accepted a company proposal. But a general union vote defeated the new settlement by a 2-to-1 majority.

Second Look?

Industry Kicks Sharp's Budget

By HARRY YOUNG

Like his predecessor, Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp is finding that making up a budget is less difficult than making it stick.

As happened to Mr. Walter Gordon when he held the nation's purse strings, Mr. Sharp is now reported to be working on amendments to some of the proposals he made in the 1966 "control the boom" budget.

The main criticism of Mr. Sharp comes from the big corporations.

Executives are mad at him for putting crimps on the conditions under which firms can give their key employees stock options.

They say that this is one of the few ways in which Canadian firms can stop their most valued employees from drifting to other companies either in Canada or abroad.

SECOND LOOK

Mr. Sharp is said to be taking a second look at this proposal.

The five per cent refundable corporation tax is also running into trouble from firms which have already committed themselves to heavy capital expenditures.

These firms say that the five per cent loan to the treasury temporary though it is will affect their financing plans.

SOME RELIEF

Two B.C. lumber companies, MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Product both firmly contracted to big immediate capital expansions have publicly expressed their dissatifaction with Mr. Sharp's proposal.

Representations are being made to the finance minister that some relief from the refundable tax should be given to those companies which were committed prior to the budget to capital expenditures October 1967.

While budget revisions are not unusual, the frequency with which they are now occurring in Ottawa is indicative of government indecision right along the line.

OKANAGAN STIMULATED

The Okanagan is classified as a depressed area by the federal government and the people there are not sure they like the term, but the fact remains it is helping the Valley industrially.

Colin D. Campbell, vice-president of Okanagan Helicopters said at the annual meeting that as a result of the government's offer of assistance eight to ten companies are committed to establish new industries there.

He said this would help the company and would also round off the cyclical nature of the valley's present economy.

In the first quarter of 1966 Okanagan Telephone revenue of $911,050 was up $125,757 from the corresponding period of 1965.

Railroad Merger Heralds New Era

NEW YORK (AP) — A new ea n he histry of U.S. railways era in the history of U.S. railways dawned this week with Interstate Commerce Commission approval of themerger of the New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads.

The combination was the largest corporate merger in history and it will create the world's largest privately owned railway system.

It will mean, say the heads of the two rail systems, improved passenger and freight service and possibly lower rates and fares.

NINE YEARS

The marriage of the Central and the Pennsy has been nine years in the making. It was proposed by the late Robert Young, chairman of the Central, in 1957.

The merger, effective in June, will create a system with assets of more than $4,100,000,000 and 40,912 miles of track. It will have 4,506 locomotives, 205,224 freight cars and 5,717 passenger cars.

Officials of the two lines have estimated that annual savings in operations of $80,000,000 can be effected within five years.

The combined system—to be known as the Pennsylvania New York Central Transportation Co. —will link 14 states, the District of Columbia, Montreal and portions of southern Ontario.

The ICC directed that the Penn-Central assume operation of the freight and passenger service of the bankrupt New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad through 1966. Executives of the Pennsy and the Central said they saw no difficulties in doing so.

DESIGNED MONTHLY INCOME IN RETIREMENT is not always easily arranged, as dividends or interest on investments often fail to tie in well with the monthly style of budget to which the retired man accustomed himself during the working years.
To meet this need, Victoria Mortgage Corporation will mail a monthly cheque applying on any investent of $10,000 or over, or any AMOUNT YOU SPECIFY, to ARRIVE PROMPTLY ON THE FIRST OF EACH MONTH. This can be for interest only at 7½%, or for an amount including part principal, as well as interest.
Some of our retired clients are expressing their real desire to spend some of the capital of their retirement fund along with their earnings, rather than have it all left in their estate.
If this, too, is your feeling, perhaps you will find the following table interesting:
$10,000 at 7½% produces $62.50 earnings per month. $10,000 at monthly payments of $68 including 7½% interest would take 20 years to spend: $72 month—15 years; $80 month—20 years; $90 month—14 years; $100 month—12 years; $118 month—10 years; $138 month—8 years; $153 month—7 years; $200 month—5 years.
Terms of all 7½% Victoria Mortgage Debentures provide that the unused portion of your investment is repaid in five years—or earlier in the event of prior death, in which case your estate can cash the debenture.
To have prospectus mailed, phone Douglas Hawkes Ltd., EV 6-7122, 617 Fort.

You are invited to submit questions for inclusion in this column. The origin of such queries is kept entirely secret.

U.S. Will Study Drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most "extensive and significant" study of drug effectiveness ever undertaken will be launched by the American government this summer, Food and Drug Commissioner James L. Goddard announced Saturday.

At the request of the FDA, he said, the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has agreed to evaluate the medical effectiveness "of up to 4,000 drugs."

The drugs scheduled to undergo government scrutiny are those introduced between 1938 and 1962 which required proof only that they were safe for internal use.

However the FDA said drugs marketed after the Kefauver-Harris amendments of 1962 requiring "substantial evidence to support therapeutic claims" before being granted government approval, will not be inspected.

Goddard said the results will help the FDA in determining the effectiveness of the drugs.

After 1938 drugs which were generally recognized as safe and those already on the market, were exempt from FDA scrutiny.

Most of the drugs now in general use came on the market after 1938 due to rapid multiplication of drug products and new procedures after the Second World War the FDA said.

ONE MAN'S VIEW!
by John M. Molyard
"I would appear to me, Real Estate values have never been better in the Greater Victoria area and also on the Island as a whole. This trend would seem to have come from our booming economy in B.C. and many outsiders are finally realizing that our B.C. is one of the finest spots in Canada to live. Prices as a whole are lower here than elsewhere in Canada. That, added to our lovely climate, will no doubt keep your values well up. Keep this in mind.
I have a continuing NEED of listings in all price ranges, both here and on the islands. If you intend to sell or are inclined to purchase, why not keep me in mind. Instant, well-qualified advice is yours for the asking. Dial 385-6741 anytime.

Labrosse Scores Big One Late in Second Overtime

By JIM TANG

To paraphrase an old truism, the team that won't be beat can't even beat itself.

That was the Victoria Maple Leafs last night. Off to a bad start and compounding matters with a series of glaring defensive errors, they finally found themselves and pulled off what is becoming a typical victory by hanging a 6-5 overtime defeat on Portland Buckaroos in the first game of the best-of-seven Western Hockey League final.

CAME BACK

Before Claude Labrosse broke it up early this morning in the 35th minute of overtime, the Leafs had trailed by two goals twice and had dropped back again after finally pulling even early in the third period.

How they escaped is too long a story to tell here but playoff overtime is their forte. It's sudden death and there is no way they can lose the lead again.

The steady Labrosse clicked on what started out as one of the more - harmless looking plays of thrill-packed overtime.

JUST IN TIME

"Give it to me," the steady defenceman yelled at goalkeeper John Henderson.

Henderson did, Labrosse started off down the left side, crossed to the right side as he hit the Portland blueline, and then let go with a rising backhander. It hit Dave Kelly's glove, caromed off the inside of a goalpost and dropped over the red line. The time was 25 minutes after midnight.

With the Buckaroos having the home ice edge in the odd game if the series goes the limit, it was a tremendous start. But the Buckaroos will take back with them to Portland more than a hard-to-take defeat. They also know they are not likely to get the Leafs as ready for the axe as they were for quite a spell last night.

WEAK START

The Victoria club literally couldn't get off a dime for about 30 minutes. They were outskated and outskated and badly disorganized most of the time. That they were only one goal down at the end of each of the first two periods seemed somewhat of a minor miracle. Or it might have been a commentary on the Buckaroos. They couldn't make the kill.

The game wasn't a minute old when the Buckaroos connected for the first of the four or five goals which were directly attributed to Victoria defensive lapses.

SOFT GOAL

Cliff Schmautz wheeled down mid-ice without a checker in sight and passed off to defenceman Mike Donaldson, on his right, as he hit the Victoria blueline. Donaldson took a quick shot, the puck rolled out off Henderson's pads, between the legs of a Victoria defenceman and straight to Art Jones.

Jones, of course, didn't miss.

Andy Hebenton had about the only good chance the Leafs had in the first period but drove Larry Keenan's passout right at goalkeeper Rick Charron.

Two Portland penalties held up the Buckaroos and enabled the Leafs to escape almost unscathed in the first period although Henderson had to save the situation with a good stop on Jones while the Leafs played shorthanded late in the period.

But Gerry Goyer scored early in the second period as the Leafs failed to cover up.

SIGNS OF LIFE

That one, however, seemed to be a bit of a goad. Twenty-nine seconds later, Mike Labadie turned in Claude Labrosse's long pass and just missed two more deflections on the same shift. Then Hebenton, Redahl and Jankowski all had good chances before Cliff Schmautz got a clean break to set up the 3-1 goal.

Henderson came out to block Schmautz but Goodwin was able to backhand the rebound past Fred Hucul, on his knees trying to take Henderson's place in the goal.

Three successive penalties to Jack Bionda may have saved the situation then for the Leafs although they slipped again when Cliff Schmautz got another clean break and made good himself this time.

TWO ON POWER PLAY

Schmautz's goal came between two power-play efforts. Fred Hucul scored on Bionda's first penalty and Milan Marcetta while Bionda was serving his third penalty of the period.

Hucul finally pulled the Leafs even in the first minute of the third period with a tremendous shot which left Dave Kelly, who had been sent in to replace Rick Charron after Hucul's first goal, helpless.

It wasn't tied up for long. A penalty to Sandy Hucul saw the Buckaroos go ahead less than three minutes later when Art Jones' long slap shot deflected off Fred Hills' stick.

THE BIG PLAY

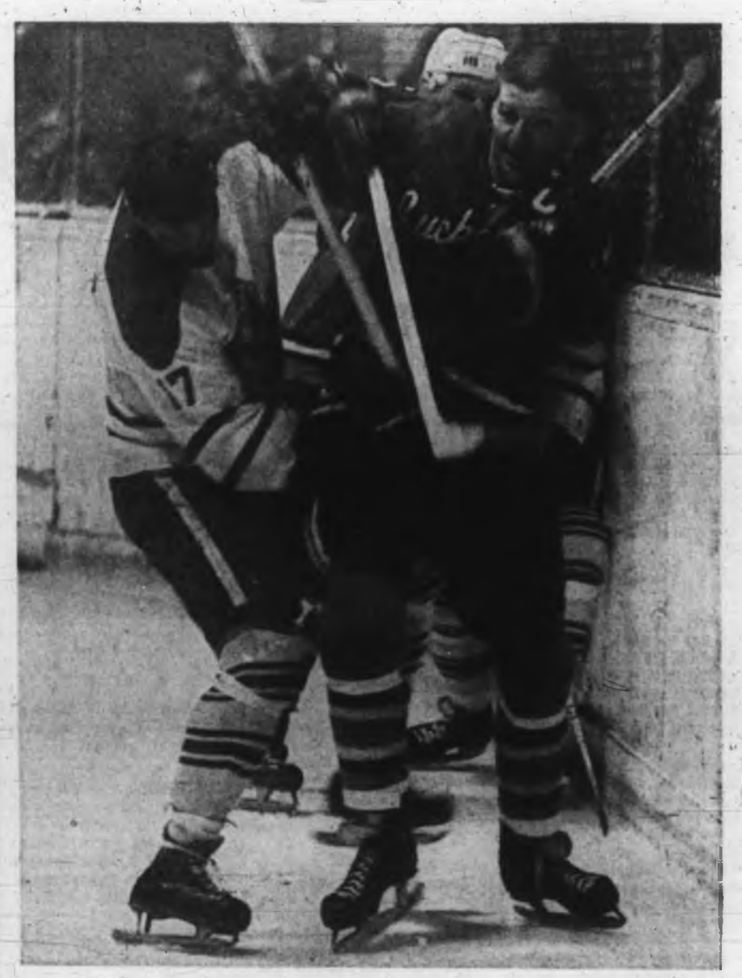

Three minutes later, after Henderson had saved the situation with a great stop, Hebenton wheeled down the right-side in full flight, left Connie Madigan reeling with a great shift and blazed the puck right through Kelly's glove.

From there until Labrosse finally got the puck past Kelly in the 35th minute of overtime, it was just one succession of narrow escapes after another.

HEART-JERKER

The Leafs were more than holding their own now but they did get away luckily in the 16th minute of the third period when Cliff Schmautz slipped a slider goalward that had Henderson beaten only to see it hit the far post and skid off into the end boards.

Henderson came up big in the first overtime with a number of great stops, particularly a grab of a drive by Dick Van Impe which had the fans gasping until the Leaf goalkeeper closed his hand on the puck.

Freeloaders Feel Guilty Due to Tremendous Show

By GEORGE GIBSON

"Hey, boys, I should go out and buy a ticket."

So said Marcel Pelletier, the affable French Canadian goaltender, to the press box at large just before the second overtime period was about to start in last night's game.

Pelletier spoke the thoughts of anybody else who was there on a free ticket. It was that kind of a game for the fans.

For the goaltenders, it was pure nightmare. Three of them saw action in the game. One of them, rookie Dave Charron of Portland, suffered the ignominy of being taken out of the game midway through the second period and replaced by Dave Kelly.

MIXED NIGHT

For Victoria goalkeeper John Henderson it was a mixed night. He assisted on the winning goal, shoving the puck up to Claude Labrosse on the final rush, but he also suffered a three-stitch gash under his mask in the first overtime.

Kelly let in the winner. Nothing could be tougher to take than that on a game that went so long and at such a tiring pace.

Charron's removal was the subject of some discussion. The Buckaroos had to send one of their players to the showers when rookie Charron was lifted for Kelly.

QUICK SHOWER

Under league rules, a club is entitled to dress 16 players, so long as one of them is a rookie. However, if the rookie is not dressed, which happened with the removal of Charron, club then is limited to only 15. So Hal Laycoe, Portland coach, sent seldom - used Charlie Holmes to the showers.

The Buckaroos were showered and out of their dressing room much faster than the Leafs after it was all over. Coach Laycoe was not downhearted — "A whale of a game," he would say to anybody.

The Leafs were tired but happy. Several of the veterans spent a long time in the showers after this one.

MOPS BROW

Leaf coach Frank Mario was mopping his brow.

"Boy that was close," was about all he could muster.

Labrosse said he had no thought of passing once he got over the Portland blueline. "I just let her go," he smiled.

Leafs were scheduled to fly to Portland this morning.

Davis Cup

Some Courts Cool; Fans Create Heat

From AP, Reuters, UPI

In Helsinki the tennis courts had to be thawed out for Canada to beat Finland in the first round of the European Zone of the Davis Cup yesterday, but in the Philippines irate tennis fans generated plenty of heat.

Canada's Henry Fauquier and Keith Carpenter defeated Reino Suominen and Pekka Saeilae of Finland, 8-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4, in the doubles match yesterday to move Canada into the second round.

TOOK LEAD

The Canadians held a 2-0 lead from singles' victories Friday.

Canada will play France in Paris in the second round.

In Manilla, 3,000 Philippine spectators threw chairs into the courts and engaged in fist fights when Japan's top player Osamu Ishiguro managed to delay the finish of his match with Raymundo Deyro of the Philippines until today.

Ishiguro, trailing 2-1, in the fifth and deciding set, complained of a leg cramp and was granted a 10-minute rest period which carried him past the 6 p.m. closing time agreed to earlier. Japan had won the other singles' match earlier.

Winning in first-round play yesterday were South Africa, France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Italy, the Netherlands, West Germany, Britain and Morocco.

Expect Rally to Be Toughest in History

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI) — The "Shell 4,000," longest auto rally in North America, got under way tonight, with firm expectations it would be the toughest in the rally's six-year history.

Sixty cars, each with a two-man crew, officially began the 4,100-mile drive to Quebec City from the Queen Elizabeth Theatre Plaza in downtown Vancouver, on dry roads with temperatures in the high 40s.

But reports received in the past few days told of deep snow on the Prairies, foot-deep mud on some roads in Northern Ontario and ice in Quebec, making for hazardous driving conditions.

The 4,000, billed "an exacting test of driving skill and car reliability," is one of five international events counting toward world rally championship.

Forty-one different models of cars, from Canada, Japan, France, Germany, Italy, Britain and the United States, are competing.

Drivers are to stop overnight at Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Sault Ste. Marie and Ottawa before reaching the French-speaking city Friday.

Bobby Edged For Trophy

TORONTO (CP)—Andre Lacroix, 20 - year - old centre for Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, has been named winner of the Albert Red Tilson Memorial Trophy for the second successive year.

Bobby Orr, star defenceman for Oshawa Generals, finished a close second in the voting by sports writers in the nine league cities.

Americans Win First

TORONTO (CP)—The Rochester Americans blanked Cleveland Barons 4-0 Saturday night in the opening game of the best-of-seven American Hockey League's Calder Cup final series.

Barons outshot Americans 36-31. At least half a dozen shots seemed labelled, but Rochester goalie Bob Perreault always managed to get a piece of the puck.

Timely Goal

VANCOUVER (CP) — A goal with two minutes remaining in overtime Saturday gave St. Andrews of the Pacific Coast League a 2-1 victory over Italo-Friuli of the Mainland League in the quarter-finals of the Province Cup soccer competition.

Two Workouts

Victoria Shamrocks of the Inter-City Lacrosse League will work out tonight at the Esquimalt Sports Centre starting at 5:30 and again Thursday, starting at 9 p.m.

Top Choice Soaks Hoof

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Kentucky Derby favorite Graustark arrived at Churchill Downs Saturday and still was counted as an entry in next Saturday's race.

Trainer Loyd Gentry said Graustark was having some trouble with his left front hoof, but expected his colt to start in the derby.

Graustark's infected hoof was being soaked in epsom salts in an effort to break up the abscess and relieve the pain. The abscess was caused by foreign matter, probably gravel that worked its way up into the hoof.

The decision on whether the Derby Dan Farm colt will run in the Derby probably will not be made for another several days, Gentry said.

Orioles Singing But Sandy Sad

Baltimore Orioles won their ninth straight game Saturday to move into sole possession of first place in the American League, but in Anaheim, California, the Angels had more fun.

Baltimore took a tense, typical, 3-2, decision from Detroit Tigers as Dave Johnson hit a pair of homers, and Dave McNally picked up his third victory of the season.

But in Anaheim, the Angels erupted for 12-run eighth inning and came from behind a 9-3 deficit to beat Boston, 16-9, in a rollicking exhibition.

Rich Reichardt, Angels' $175,000 bonus baby, tied a major league record by hitting two homers in the riotous eighth. Reichardt was the 11th player in modern history to hit two homers in an inning. The last to do it was Joe Pepitone of the Yankees in 1962.

For the Orioles, Johnson's second home run in the seventh inning provided them with the winning run against Detroit. With Cleveland Indians and Chicago rained out, the victory pushed Baltimore half a game in front of the Indians.

In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers missed a chance to sneak into first place ahead of rain-idled Pittsburgh when Sandy Koufax was handed his first loss of the season, 3-1, by Cincinnati.

HAD LEAD

Koufax had a 1-0 lead going into the top of the eighth, but Tommy Helms hit a two-run single in the eighth and Leo Cardenas contributed a homer in the ninth.

Philadelphia took advantage of the Dodger loss to move into second place as Chris Short, making his first start in nine days, blanked Chicago on three hits for Phils' 3-0 victory.

Houston cooled off the hot Atlanta Braves when John Bateman singled in the ninth to drive in a run and break a 4-4 tie after a passed ball and hit batsmen had put men on first and second.

And San Francisco Giants got a two-homer from Orlando Cepeda and six-hit pitching from Bob Bolin as the Giants beat St. Louis, 6-1.

Stu's a Swinging Bird

Miller Makes Hank Bauer's Job Easy

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—No manager in his right mind would voluntarily stand up and tell you his job is easy.

Baltimore manager Hank Bauer does, however, and he happens to be in his right mind.

Bauer makes his unusual claim essentialy because of one man, an ordinary looking 38-year-old National League retread, who automatically heads for the bullpen every day, hasn't started a game in six years and doesn't care to, but instinctively knows what to do any time he's handed the ball.

His full name is Stuart Leonard Miller. Those who know him call him "Stu" and those who wish they didn't call him "Old Head Fake."

"Miller makes it easy for me," volunteers Bauer. "Everyone knows the roughest part of managing is knowing when to change your pitcher, but if you've got a good bullpen, it's not tough at all."

Nearly lost in all the hoopla over the Cleveland's record-breaking getaway this spring has been the fact that the Orioles have stayed right on the Indians' heels with nine victories in their first 10 games.

Equally obscured has been the fact that Miller appeared in exactly half those games, picking up one victory along with three saves already.

"He has done so well," says Bauer, "that I've got three pitchers I haven't been able to use yet."

The three pitchers Bauer has been unable to use in Baltimore's first 10 contests are Frank Bertaina, John Miller and Gene Brabender, all of whom rate pretty high with Hank.

Miller makes good money as relief pitchers go. His salary is somewhere around $35,000 and Bauer, without the slightest twinge of envy, says: "Just look at what he did for us last year. He won 14 games and had 21 saves. That's 35 decisions right there. And his earned run average was 1.89. Any more questions?"

Only one. How does he do it?

"Well, I'll tell you," began Bauer. "He has this motion that gets all the hitters talking to themselves. Plus good control. And once in awhile he'll come in with that sneaky fast ball. But mostly it's his motion before he lets go of the ball. He does it with his neck some way."

Miller is like a doctor, on call any hour of the day or night. He never complains of arm trouble or of being worked too often.

"The only time I couldn't use him was the last three days of last season," said Bauer.

"He had a sore neck. I don't know how he got it. He might have slept on it wrong."

That leaves only one more question. How long can Miller go on?

"Search me," said Bauer.

The way Baure said it made it plain that Miller needn't hurry off on his account.

Act Four: Big Jean To Speak?

From AP, CP, UPI

DETROIT—The curtain goes up on the fourth act of the National Hockey League's annual Stanley Cup drama in a matinee performance today.

Although nobody nows the script, there's a good chance that one of Montreal Canadiens' principal performers will have something to say.

Big Jean Beliveau, so far confined mainly to spear-carrying roles in this spring's roundelays, had a couple of choice lines last Thursday—and he spoke them well, a goal and an assist. Perhaps it was no coincidence that Canadiens defeated Detroit Red Wings, 4-2, for their first win of the series.

And it is for this reason that Wings will give Beliveau no prompting this afternoon.

Since 1955-56, Big Jean has led his club to six Stanley Cups. Last year he won the Conn Smythe trophy as the best performer in the playoffs, scoring eight goals and eight assists in 13 games.

Only Howe, Richard Ahead

The points Thursday were Beliveau's first of the series against Detroit, but they moved him into third-place tie with retired Boom Boom Geoffrion in the all-time Stanley Cup statistics. Each has 115 points.

Detroit's Gordie Howe leads with 155 points and Rocket Richard retired with 126 on his personal list, including a record 82 goals.

Montreal coach Toe Blake says Beliveau played a large part in Thursday's victory and Red Wing coach Sid Abel agrees.

"The Beliveau goal was the one that hurt us," he admitted. "When he scored that goal just before the end of the first period (it put Canadiens ahead, 2-1), you could hear the laces open all along the bench."

Detroit still leads the series, 2-1. But they know full well that they must beat Montreal today for if they don't, the series will be tied and two of the next three games will be played in Montreal.

Blake Plays His Ace

Canadiens plan no lineup changes from the previous game which means that Leon Rochefort, from Quebec Aces of the American League, will replace Claude Larose on a line with Henri Richard and Dave Balon.

Detroit's Ab MacDonald nursing a sore shoulder, will give way to Murray Hall, top scorer at Pittsburgh of the AHL. Hall will form a line with Andy Bathgate and Floyd Smith.

So far the Red Wings are the undisputed champions of the Sunday Afternoon Television In Living Color League and they're hoping to maintain that record today.

Detroit won two Sunday games on its way to eliminating Chicago Black Hawks in six games in the semi-final.

The Red Wings bounced Chicago, 7-0, in the first game, then came back a week later to win, 5-3. Then they edged Montreal, 3-2, in the initial game of the final last Sunday.

Fifth game of the series will be played in Montreal Tuesday. If a sixth is needed, it will be held back here Thursday and if the series goes seven games, it will be played in Montreal next Saturday night.

Today's hockey game will be televised on Channels 2 and 6 beginning at 11:30 a.m., according to the CBC. Delayed broadcast, in color, on Channel 5 at 3 p.m. CBU (690) radio will broadcast the game at 11:30.

Gremlin Among Angels

Leftfielder Ed Kirkpatrick of California Angles, on ground, makes valiant try on Texas league single by Boston's Rico Petrocelli, as shortstop Jim Fregosi, centrefielder Jose Cardenal and second baseman Bobby Knopp back up play. Despite this play, Angels bombed the Red Sox, 16-9, Saturday in American League.

They Put Something Into Soccer

Gorge Setup Spells Success

By ROBIN JEFFREY

Happiness, some say, is a warm puppy. And togetherness, others claim, is going camping with your mother-in-law.

But if you're allergic to dogs and can't stand camping, you might cast an eye at the congenial harmony of the Gorge soccer club's juvenile program at Hampton Park.

"Community feeling is just fantastic at the park," says Gorge secretary Don Wakelyn. "What makes the program go is a tremendous amount of work by a lot of people."

The program of which Wakelyn speaks began as an idea in the spring of 1960. The Gorge senior team was looking for a place to go for a holiday and a couple of soccer games.

After some correspondence, they arranged a tour of San Francisco. "And," says president Ian Holroyd, "we were sort of overwhelmed by the treatment we got. Canadian soccer was really looked up to, and we were given a terrific time. It was then that the guys decided they'd like to put something back into the game."

George Kulai and Wakelyn were approached to head the operation, the players chipped in $5 each, and that fall the Gorge seniors looked after one juvenile team at Hampton Park.

This past season the Gorge had 11 teams in the seven divisions of the lower Island juvenile association, as well as an eight-team house league for boys under nine. The program involved close to 300 boys.

Wakelyn and Holroyd are quick to point out that winning isn't the primary purpose of the operation. It's very nice, of course, but it's not the lone goal.

"In the first couple of years," Wakelyn says, "some saw the possibilities of making a powerhouse and of packing teams. But the executive kept a firm hand and today we have complete backing for our policy of participation."

In the beginning, the Gorge received financial help from the lower Island association, but next season it will finance its operation independently.

A booster club was formed this year and has raised $400 on dances and other projects. The whole organization has been registered under the B.C. Societies' Act.

And if imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, the Gorge can feel flattered too. Similar operations have recently been started at Reynolds Road and Majestic Parks.

For the future, Wakelyn says the organization has no set goals. "We'll just provide teams for as many boys as want to play soccer."

Mrs. Ruth's Heart Leaps

Mays, Yanks Keep Her Busy

NEW YORK (AP) — Every time New York Yankees lose a baseball game and Willie Mays hits a home run, Mrs. Babe Ruth's heart leaps a little.

"I live and die with the Yankees," the widow of the greatest baseball slugger of them all said today. "They were the Babe's team. They're also mine.

"I am keenly interested also in Willie Mays' home run campaign. He's the only present player with even a chance of catching the Babe's lifetime total of 714, but I think it's very remote.

"He would have to hit 40 home runs a year for the next five years." Mays has 511, matching the National League record.

Ruth, immortal Yankee outfielder, died of throat cancer in 1948 at the age of 53.

Mrs. Ruth, a bouncy little woman, is active in the Babe Ruth leagues for players between the ages of 13 and 18.

"We now have 200,000 players in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Australia," she says. "These youngsters would have been dear to the Babe's heart."

Knotty Problem

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Referee Peter Duffy is wondering whether there's any special significance in the thing tossed on the ice during a championship senior hockey game here.

Out of the stands sailed a hangman's noose. What's more the rope was technically correct, with the prescribed 12 rope rings and a working slip not.

Duffy's not sure whether it was a reflection on his officiating or whether it was hurled by a fan absorbed in the Commons debate on hanging that was in progress at the time.

Littler Takes Over In Texas Tourney

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Gene Littler surged from a tie for third place to take the lead Saturday with a three-round total of 202 in the $80,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Littler shot a three-under-par 67 and was eight strokes under par for the three rounds.

The second round leaders, Phil Rodgers and Jim Ferrier shot two-over-par 72s to drop into a tie for fourth place with five others at 205.

Jerry Edwards, 29-year-old tour regular from Fort Worth, Tex., shot a 67 to go with two earlier 68 rounds for sole possession of second place with 203.

Three others vaulted from lower positions to tie for third place with 204 totals. They shot a spectacular 65; Joe Campbell, who had a 66, and Dave Marr, who shot his second 67.

They were joined by Tommy Aaron, the second-place holder Friday, who soared to an even-par 70.

Ron Faces Big Test

Ron MacLeod of Victoria can become the first three-time winner of the Vancouver Island open golf championship when he meets Lex Suteliffe of Gorge Vale in the 36-hole, match-play final at the Victoria Golf Club today.

MacLeod, summer pro at Jasper Park Lodge, has two previous Island titles to his credit, and on that basis, goes into Sunday's rounds as a slight favorite over Suteliffe, a newcomer to the final.

In the handicap final, Reg Clarkson of Gorge will give four strokes to Victoria's Cliff Horwood.

First round begins at 9:15 a.m., and the second at 1:15 p.m.

John Tops First Shoot

John Dolman of the Pacific Command Rifle Association led the way with 95 out of 100 over the 900-yard mound in Victoria and District Rifle Association's first shoot over the long distance Saturday.

Dolman fired a perfect 50 in the second half of the shoot to edge ahead of Dave Fyvie, Jack Roberts, Chuck Hobson and Gordon Gillette who all had 94.

Top scores:

Drapeau Explains

Europeans Stick Close

MONTREAL (CP) — Apparent lack of backing for Montreal by Commonwealth countries is cited by Mayor Jean Drapeau as a factor in the rejection of his city as a location for the 1972 Summer Olympics.

Drapeau said after returning home to Montreal Friday night that "while we can't say with certainty what the voting was, we have 'educated estimates' that only one (Commonwealth country) stayed with us.'

SECRET VOTE

The secret voting on the 1972 site took place at a meeting of the International Olympic Committee in Rome earlier this week.

The meeting selected Munich for the 1972 summer events.

"Our plans hinged strongly on support from the 13 Commonwealth voters with whom we felt we had the natural, instinctive bond," the mayor told reporters.

He said the "European bloc at the meeting was solidly together. From what we can learn Munich and Madrid had 37 votes between them on the first ballot while Montreal and Detroit had 25."

Detroit was eliminated and "votes swung to Munich as did many of those initially supporting Madrid," Drapeau said.

LONDON (Reuters)—Roared on by their wildly-excited supporters, the Liverpool soccer team became certain to win the English League championship Saturday, beating Chelsea, 2-1.

Needing only a point to make sure of the title, Liverpool took the lead just after half time when Roger Hunt's centre struck the Chelsea goalkeeper and went into the net.

Albert Murray tied the score after 62 minutes but Hunt got the winner seven minutes later.

LOCKED OUT

A capacity crowd of 55,000 watched the match and thousands more were locked out.

Liverpool has now won the title seven times—the last was in 1964—to equal the record held by Arsenal.

No team has more richly deserved the title. Liverpool went to the top of the standings last November and stayed there. The team hopes to bring the season to a triumphal close by beating Borussia Dortmund in the final of the European Cup winners cup Thursday in Glasgow.

NORTHAMPTON DROPS

At the bottom end of the standings Northampton lost 3-0 at Blackpool and was relegated to the Second Division with blackburn Rovers.

The promotion race in the Second Division is still undecided, though Manchester City, which beat Birmingham 3-1 Saturday, is almost certain to go up.

The second team to be promoted is likely to be Coventry City, Huddersfield Town or Southampton.

ORIENT DOOMED

Leyton Orient is already doomed to drop from the Second to the Third Division, but there is still a struggle going on to decide who else will be relegated.

Only an unexpected upset in form can prevent Hull City and Millwa., who both won Saturday, from gaining promotion from the Third Division.

In Scotland, Celtic tightened its grip on the league title with a 2-0 win over Morton, though Rangers kept up the challenge by beating Dunfermline 2-1.

GAME IN HAND

Celtic and Rangers are tied for the division lead with 53 points each, but Celtic has two games to play compared with one by Rangers. Celtic's win means that Morton goes down to the Second Division.

A 2-0 win over Third Lanark assured Airdrieonians of promotion from the Second Division with Ayre United.

Bobby Charlton England's Best

LONDON (UPI)—Manchester United's Bobby Charlton, one of England's hopefuls in the World Cup finals here next July, was voted English footballer of the year Friday.

The 28-year-old forward, the younger brother of another English star, Jacky Charlton of Leeds United, became the first Manchester United player to win the prize statuette since Johnny Carey in 1949.

Charlton, who sparked Matt Busby's eleven into the semi-finals of the F.A. Cup and the European Cup, polled just over half of the record vote.

Second spot went to George Cohen, the England right back, who has been the standout man behind Fulham's struggle to avoid dropping from the First Division.

Another Manchester United forward, Northern Ireland's outside forward George Best, who almost single-handed knocked Benfica out of the European Cup in Lisbon, was third in the poll.

Victorian in '500'

Indianapolis Opens For Practice Runs

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) —The 2½-mile track at the Indianapolis Speedway officially opened Saturday for two weeks of practice in preparation for the Memorial Day 500.

After the two weeks are over, qualifications will begin to cut the entry list from 79 to the fastest 33 that will line up on May 30.

No high-speed racing was expected for the first few days, and officials as a safety precaution planned to set a 150 mile per hour speed limit, nearly 15 miles slower than the unofficial track record, at least for the weekend.

Among the "500" veterans on hand for the first weekend were two-time winner Rodger Ward; Jim McElreath, winner of the first two big-car events on the U.S. Auto Club schedule; national driving champion Mario Andretti; former winners A. J. Foyt and Parnelli Jones; and Lloyd Ruby and Chuck Stevenson.

With few exceptions, all will drive rear-engine machines, most of them powered by Ford V-8s or conventional or supercharged Offenhausers. But defending champion Jimmy Clark of Scotland, who may not arrive until some time next week, has switched from a Ford-powered Lotus to a similar machine equipped with a 16-cylinder BRM engine.

Victoria's Billy Foster has entered, driving a rear-engined driven race car, powered by Ford.

PLACES 16th

Last year, in his first try at Indianapolis, Foster finished 16th. He was forced out on the 91st lap with a broken line in the car's cooling system.

Close to two dozen newcomers to the 500 must pass driver's tests at speeds up to 145 miles per hour before being permitted to practise at qualifying speeds in the 150-mph bracket or faster. Among them are Scotland's Jackie Stewart, third in last year's world Grand Prix standings headed by Clark, and youthful Gary Bettenhausen, son of famed Tony Bettenhausen, who was killed in a practice crash at the speedway five years ago.

NHL Still Far Apart On Draft

DETROIT (CP) — National Hockey League clubs were far apart Friday on what formula they will use to stock six clubs entering the league for the 1967-68 season. president Clarence Campbell said.

After day-long sessions with club owners, general managers and personnel directors, the NHL president said a "wide disparity of opinion still exists" and it is unlikely any decision will be reached for some time."

He added:

KEEP IT QUIET

"Those present received and discussed a confidential report and the discussions will be kept confidential until a solution has been achieved."

A further meeting is scheduled for Montreal Tuesday, May 3. Representatives of the six new clubs will attend. The final decision on the formula will be made by the current clubs, Detroit, Montreal, Boston, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

SIX IN U.S.

The league earlier granted franchises to six United States centres, San Francisco-Oakland, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Minneapolis-St. Paul which will make up a new division in 1967.

"What we're trying to do now is fill in numbers," Campbell said. referring to the number of players each of the current clubs will be forced to relinquish in the expansion draft.

"We still don't know whether the number of players to be protected by each club will be five of 15, as all we have established are the mechanics of the thing."

His Score? Well Now . . .

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — They were patting Alan Geerts on the back after he shot a hole-in-one at the Eberhart-Petro golf course.

Then someone asked his score.

Geerts carded 98-76-174 for 18 holes. It was only his third round of golf and the first time he had broken 200.

Sorry Boss Out Fishing

TORONTO (CP) — A call to the Owen Sound Sun-Times for details of how Bob Bailey of Hamilton landed an 18-pound, two-ounce rainbow trout proved frustrating Saturday.

And for a good reason—it was the start of the Ontario fishing season.

"What weight of line was he using?" the caller asked. "I'm sorry, we haven't that information. The sports editor would look after this."

"Where's the sports editor?"

"He's out fishing."

Family Trade Reason

TORONTO (CP) — Pete Manning, former end with Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference, says there are 35 reasons why he signed two one-year contracts Friday with the Toronto Argonauts.

The reasons — one mother, one brother, six sisters and 27 assorted nieces and nephews.

"During the summer I asked Stampeders to trade me to an eastern team," he said in an interview Friday. "All my family lives in the East. My mother in Washington and the rest spread out from New York to Virginia.

The 28-year-old bachelor said it meant a 5,000-mile trip every time he wanted to see his family while playing in Calgary.

But there are other reasons Manning asked to be traded.

"I wanted to go because Calgary was using me as a defensive back and I wanted to play split-end. I anticipated the trade over the winter and my main consideration was wanting to be closer to my family."

Lonely Night Hike Brings Pal's Death

VANCOUVER (CP)—A youth who said he liked the "lonely, dark atmosphere of the forest at night" told Saturday how a midnight canyon hike ended in death for his companion.

Danny Balabanov, 19, a student at City College here, said he telephoned Dan Dnielsen, 19, Friday night and suggested a hike along Lynn Creek canyon in North Vancouver.

Danielsen fell down a cliff in darkness during the hike. His body was discovered after dawn.

INEXPERIENCED

"I often go for walks in the bush at night," said Balabanov. "Dan is one of my best friends but I don't think he is too experienced in the bush.

"We were about halfway down the 200-foot cliff when Dan started to slip past me. He didn't scream and I tried to grab his jacket.

"I only got a corner but it slipped out of my hand and I started to slide too."

FACE DOWN

Balabanov said he slipped to the bottom but was not seriously hurt. He said he could see Danielsen sliding "feet first and face down."

Balabanov went for help and and all-night search continued until Danielsen's body was discovered about dawn.

Colonel Blimp Evaporates

British Actors Dominate

FIRST OF THREE PARTS

Why have British actors and actresses received such wide acclaim and popularity in the United States and Canada? Television, movies and the theatre are all gripped by Anglomania. In this series, Martin Abramson, a frequent writer on show business, reports on the impact of this new breed of English performer on the entertainment industry in a year when British actors are dominating the Oscar nominations in Hollywood.

By MARTIN ABRAMSON

A new breed of British performers and craftsmen has invaded North American show business with so much success that the latest kidding-on-the-square talk in Hollywood is that a red coat will soon become required wearing apparel on every motion picture set.

The new Britishers are contemptuous of their Colonel Blimp elders. They are volatile, passionate, uninhibited representatives of the lower class, and they often lead highly colored personal lives which add to their box-office appeal.

But there is another reason for their success: As a group, they are the best actors and actresses in the world.

The reason is training and tradition.

"Before a man becomes a recognized actor in England, he slaves through a long apprenticeship in the theatre," points out Joe Levine, the head of Embassy Pictures, which has financed and produced a host of award-winning foreign films. "He either learns his profession and comes to love it or he gets out. The top British actors and actresses are personalities with mass appeal, but they're also tremendously skilled.

"Our audience today — aside from the teen-age group — are much more sophisticated than they used to be, and they demand this combination of personality and craftsmanship."

Although the new British performers spring from the lower classes and have unbridled, often rebellious views about the government and manners, they have abiding respect for the British tradition of the theatre and for the demands of that theatre.

Peter O'Toole, the enormously-gifted, Irish-born personality who exploded into international prominence in "Lawrence of Arabia," explains:

"Before I got my first film job, I had acted in 73 different plays. If you haven't worked—really worked, over a sustained period of time—on the stage, I don't see how the hell you can call yourself an actor. I have nothing against Hollywood actors, but most of them don't have the long stage experience the British have.

"Of course, there is no repertory system in America, and another problem is that the centre of the stage industry is far removed from the motion-picture industry."

British-born comedienne Hermione Gingold recalled to me that when she started out in the theatre years ago in London, it was a tradition that even the most important stars took time to perform low-paid roles in repertory.

"I recently went back to London to film 'Promise Her Anything' for Paramount at Shepperton Studios," she said, "and I found that this tradition is still being maintained by the young stars of today.

"To do different plays in a repertory company is very demanding work, particularly if you're performing Shakespeare and you have audiences who know every line and nuance of Shakespeare and just dare you to bring it off to perfection.

"But, of course, there's no better training in the beginning and there's no better way later on to resharpen your skills."

Sean Connery, who rocketed to fame as the James Bond of the movies, is frank to admit his debt to repertory and insists that he makes Bond films principally to get the money to do more important things.

The son of an Edinburgh truck driver, Connery left school at 15, drove a milk truck, and tried his hand at cement-mixing, plastering, bricklaying and coffin-polishing before somebody told him that, with his rugged attractiveness, he could make a few quid in show business.

He latched on as chorus boy in the British production of South Pacific, then did a few small movie and television parts just for rent money. When he decided to become serious and learn acting, he did it in the traditional British way — in Shakespearean productions and legitimate road companies.

"When he was picked to play Bond, he was an unknown as far as the general public was concerned — but he was a superbly technical actor," says director Sidney Lumet.

Connery is deserting the Bond character for the moment to direct a serious play. Then he'll go back for more Bond bucks and take off again for more theatre work.

Similarly, Laurence Olivier, Alec Guinness, Peter Ustinov and even Richard Burton keep returning to low-paid turns on the cultural boards for their own kind of "sustenance" or what have you.

Movie fans think of 30-year-old Julie Andrews as an overnight success but she spent years on British vaudeville and road-company stages, starting at the age of 12.

Though Julie Christie's rise is regarded as incredibly swift for a British performer, the 25-year-old "Voom, Voom" girl insisted on playing with the Royal Shakespearean repertory at a small salary before she deigned to accept a starring role in Darling and won an Oscar. But Oscar or no Oscar, she intends to get back in theatre to discipline her art.

"I want to become the top actress in the country," she says. "Being on top right now is a fluke."

Dean Forecasts Changes

House Calls by Nurses

VANCOUVER (CP) — The prospect of nurses making the routine house calls that doctors now have to do has been raised as a future possibility by Dr. John F. McCreary, dean of medicine at the University of British Columbia.

This is already done in Sweden and could happen here with the changing role of overall health care being demanded by Canadians, he told a group of 154 graduates from the Vancouver General Hospital School of Nursing Friday night.

"I think anyone who has studied health plans in various parts of the world must conclude ours in Canada is a costly plan," he said.

"We're insisting highly-trained people perform services that could be done as well or better by people with less lengthy and less costly training.

"We may be able to continue to afford this service, but I believe we'll soon be expected to ensure a maximum return on our health dollar. And this will bring a realignment of the duties of nurses and other members of the health team."

He told the nurses their profession and the medical profession faces a number of challenges.

Hovercraft Trip

36 Skim Channel

RAMSGATE, England (UPI) —Thirty-six passengers paid $6.30 each Saturday and skimmed across the English Channel on a cushion of air to Calais as the first commercial hovercraft service between England and France opened.

Two 36-seat hovercraft are being used by the Hoverlloyd Company formed by Swedish Lloyd and the Swedish American Line to make eight trips daily between here and Calais until the end of the summer.

The time estimated for the 27-mile run is about 40 minutes, roughly half that taken by the conventional cross-channel mailboats and car ferries. The hovercraft traveled at 40 knots.

SOLD OUT

With fine weather the company reported the first trip sold out and passengers lined up for a place on the next run. The fare is about the same as that on the conventional ships.

Bigger hovercraft capable of carrying 250 passengers and 35 automobiles are expected to be in service in 1968.

Another company, Townsend Ferries, planned to have a hovercraft service operating fully by the end of next week.

DRILLS THREATEN SHIPS

About 50 ships have collided with oil-wells in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico in the last three years.

Colwood Plan

Pool Approval Expected Soon

Hopes for early financial approval of the $200,000 Colwood centennial swimming pool by the regional planning board were expressed Saturday by John Williams, Langford's newly-elected board representative.

"I feel that the regional board has changed its attitude toward our application to have the swimming pool financed under the board," Mr. Williams said.

The original application by the joint centennial committee of Colwood, Glen Lake, Langford and Metchosin had been turned down by the board.

The next meeting of the board will be on May 11, and Mr. Williams said support of the surrounding municipalities had been indicated.

"I don't see why any members of the board would withhold their approval," he said. "This will be a public pool and a recreational facility at the disposal of the whole regional district, but the entire cost will be borne by the people of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin districts."

Federal and provincial centennial grants of $20,000 will be contributed by the joint committee toward the cost of the pool, and the remainder is to be raised by 20-year debentures which will add less than one mill to property taxes, Mr. Williams said.

18 ACRES

The proposed swimming pool is 81 feet in length, and to be located on 18 acres at the old Colwood race track.

Docks Plan Denied

By TIM GLOVER

Hopes and hackles raised by reports of a $500,000 marina development at Shoal Harbor, near Sidney, were let down Saturday by a complete denial of the plans.

Gordon Washington, who with Tom Blackwood was reported to be one of the developers of the marina, denied categorically that any plans had been drawn up.

"I told the newspapers not to publish the story because there are no plans at all for such a development," he said.

YACHT CLUB

The Capital City Yacht club also denied that it was part of the plan.

"We are on the verge of expanding our premises to make us the finest yacht club in the area," said Ralph Futcher.

TWO YEARS

"We have been working on these for two years, and they are not part of any big marina complex plan.

"We are developing as a club project. It is not a commercial undertaking," he said.

1,000 BOATS

Reports stated that a marina to house up to 1,000 boats was to be constructed by Mr. Blackwood and Mr. Washington, the Capital City Yacht Club, and Clark Bros. Boat Works Ltd.

"I have spoken to Clark Bros. and they have no plans for such a development," said Mr. Futcher.

NEGOTIATING

Capital City Yacht club hopes to start work in 60 days on a $100,000 development at Blue Heron Basin, on the west side of Shoal Harbor.

"We have been negotiating with all three governments involved and have been told by the federal government that dredging will be done," said Mr. Futcher.

CLUBHOUSE

There will be moorings for 150 boats, and a new clubhouse will be constructed.

"We have zoning permission and the subdivision has been approved," said Mr. Futcher.

'Exploding' Hobby Blossoms Yearly

By NANCY BROWN

Metchosin resident Albert E. Knott has been confronted by a population explosion.

At 75, when most men are curtailing their activities, he finds that he has a continually expanding hobby.

The thousands of bulbs which make up his garden at 3908 Metchosin Road are continually splitting to make more thousands, and he has either to dig them up and replant, or allow them to deteriorate.

BOUGHT MORE

Mr. Knott bought his present home, Lincoln Cottage, 20 years ago. There were some bulbs there at that time, but he added to the collection, buying first-class bulbs.

"This is a hobby for a young man," he says. "You need to be at it all the time. I bought one special tulip bulb, and by continually lifting and splitting it, in a few years I had a whole row of them."

VISITORS

Mr. Knott has found a way to beat the tulip-fire, which plays havoc with tulips in many Victoria gardens. He isolates them in among daffodils. He doesn't know why it works, but he says it does.

At this time of year he has many visitors to his yard. The fruit trees are in bloom, and beneath them are the reds, yellows, whites and blues of daffodils, hyacinths, jonquils, tulips and bluebells.

He has a roadside stand and sells cut flowers and fruit to augment his pension.

Passmore:

Find Use For Court

A bid to review the controversial Saanich court situation will be made at Monday night's Saanich council meeting by Coun. Leslie Passmore.

The veteran councillor said Saturday that he thought the unused courtroom facilities may be suitable for a family and children's court.

He said this proposed use had been turned down earlier as not being suitable because it was located in a police building.

PURPOSE

"I feel we should bring it up again and see if conditions have changed so that at the present time it may be put to this use," he said.

"At least this would give the Saanich court some purpose," he added.

The proposed new Family and Children's Court building has been stalled at the intermunicipal level by Saanich maintaining it should pay only 22 per cent of $6,000 costs for architects' drawings, and the remainder of the intermunicipal members claiming Saanich should pay its regular intermunicipal share of 35.5 per cent of the costs.

The Saanich court has not been used since the Central Magistrate's Court was opened last fall in Victoria.

Pioneered Laboratory Here in 1948

Veteran Naval Scientist Retiring

By BOB PETHICK

A scientist who pioneered establishment of the Pacific Naval Laboratory and can remember when it was housed in two wooden buildings at HMC Dockyard will retire in July.

Dr. F. H. Sanders came to Victoria in 1948 and started the centre, which expanded rapidly. By 1952 the establishment was spread through seven buildings.

"True, some of them were small, but there were seven buildings," said Dr. Sanders, who will be succeeded by Robert F. Chinnick, 45, of Ottawa.

ADVISER

It was then plans were made to build the present 40,000-square-foot building, which was opened in 1954, but Dr. Sanders didn't get in on the opening.

In 1953 he returned to Ottawa to the post of scientific adviser to the chief of naval staff. Then in 1959 he returned to Victoria as chief superintendent of the laboratory, the position from which he will retire in July.

Sanders

Chinnick

One of his favorite chores in earlier days was getting away on a research trip on one of the laboratory's ships, but there hasn't been time for that recently.

100 EMPLOYED

"In those days we had only a handful of men. Now, with nearly 100 people, I find myself busy around the laboratory," he said.

As far as plans for retirement, there aren't many.

"I have enough hobbies to keep me going for quite a while. I like fishing, golfing and gardening, and I can't think of a better place than Victoria for any of them," he said. Dr. and Mrs. Sanders may get in some travel next fall.

The new superintendent, Mr. Chinnick, is director of physical research with the Defence Research Board in Ottawa.

$1,400 Tagged For Handicapped

Taggers for the handicapped children's clinic collected $1,400 during Saturday's tag day in downtown Victoria and suburban shopping centres.

Mrs. Helen Guy, president of the women's auxiliary to the clinic, said the proceeds from the tag day would go toward building a new clinic.

About 85 Greater Victoria handicapped youngsters attend the clinic each week, she said.

Why Can't Canadians Use Own Money?

By EILEEN LEAROYD

Now that we have our very own flag, our very own political scandals, and our very own Canadian Broadcasting Corporation row—I wonder that travelling Canadians do not use their very own money when travelling.

What's wrong with Canadian travellers' cheques? Nothing.

The money is good, it is just that foreign countries have not bumped into it often enough to know what it is. Canadians don't carry it.

I don't think one can blame the average person contemplating a trip. For example:

Mrs. John Doe of Victoria, has decided she will visit Europe. She goes to the bank—any bank—and asks about foreign currency. The bankers will immediately recommend American travellers' cheques as being the easiest medium of exchange. I have asked around, and this is the common experience.

Having recently been on a trip, it was certainly my experience that just exactly like a sheep, I converted my money to American cheques.

Thoughts in Rome

It was not until I was sitting in the airport in Rome, waiting for a flight, that I began to wonder why I had not used Canadian cheques.

I had been talking to three people beside me whom I assumed to be Americans. Not so, they said, they were Canadians from Edmonton. Having an hour or two to wait, we got to wondering how many people travelling, whom everyone thought to be Americans, were actually Canadians.

In other words, how much Canadian money was circulating abroad, under a foreign tag?

We decided from the places we had been, and those we met, at least a third of those using American money, were in fact from Canada.

I have nothing against Americans, but I would as soon be taken for a Canadian. Yet, using American money, how can we change this impression? We can't — unless we start using our own money.

There are three reasons I think Canadians should start using Canadian currency when travelling.

- The first is that we would then be accepted for what we are.
- The second is that Canada would gain a better international image. (Foreigners don't even know we are in their countries when we tip-toe in on American money.)
- The third is that it would benefit the international economy, and Canadian economy.

Helps International Trade

Doing my own small survey yesterday, questioning people I know, five out of six travelled abroad using American currency.

The sixth quite startled me.

A Scots-Canadian, he said, "No! I always ask for Canadian travellers cheques as a matter of principle. But I certainly back up your experience, the bank managers always suggested American cheques. I don't know why they do this."

My Scots friend warmed to the subject. During the past few years he has travelled in Europe and extensively in the British West Indies.

"Economically it's a good thing to use Canadian money. It means our dollar is being used, and it helps international trade.

"Furthermore, using Canadian money is NOT an inconvenience to the traveller. Let's take Jamaica for an example — the government of Jamaica uses the Bank of Nova Scotia as its official bank, and it is even called, "The Bank of Nova Scotia."

"Four Canadian banks are very strong in the Caribbean, the Royal Bank, the Imperial Bank, the Bank of Nova Scotia and BOLAM — that's the Bank of London and Montreal. Again Barclay's Bank of London, has a close connection with the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and is "related" to BOLAM. And I had absolutely no trouble in Europe."

A Canny Scot

This same man, who seems well informed, told me that he often travels abroad with a "Letter of Credit" from say, the Bank of Montreal.

"I'm a canny Scot," he said, "and do you realize that with a Letter of Credit no interest is charged until the money is withdrawn?"

I hadn't.

"Well it's obvious that with travellers' cheques, the money is cash in your hand, therefore gaining no interest, all the time it is withdrawn from the account. If you are abroad for two or three months, and using a Letter of Credit, your money is gaining interest, until the moment it is withdrawn."

All in all, his opinion was, that Canadian banks recommending American travellers' cheques to Canadians, were doing the country a disservice.

The amount of money I spent would hardly strain the resources of this country, or even assist another—however—the point is that whether we like it or not, for the image the Canadians produce abroad, we might as well stay home.

They don't know we are there.

Couple to Live In Montreal

A home in Montreal will follow a honeymoon in San Francisco for newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Brian F. Caddick, who were married in St. John's Church, North Vancouver recently.

Her attendants were Mrs. C. Badgley, Miss D. McDougall and Miss J. Morris, with Mrs. Keith Morrison as matron of honor. They were in gowns of daffodil yellow dotted Swiss over taffeta, and carried bouquets of white daisies with ferns.

Mr. Richard Lloyd was best man and ushers were Mr. Keith Garrison, Mr. Tam Easton and Mr. Dale Moranda. Mr. A. Mitten toasted the bride for Mr. W. Popham of Bournemouth, at a reception at the Coach House.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

There's more to a hat than meets the eye! . . .

Just before writing this, we attended the Women's Canadian Club luncheon at the Empress . . . and looking around at all the pretty hats worn by members . . . couldn't help but be struck with what a double-barrelled tonic a becoming hat is! . . . Makes the wearer more animated and interesting because she knows she looks attractive . . . Gives pleasure to the onlooker if she's a female . . . (and we'll leave it to your own imagination what it does to a man!) . . . Anyway, to our certain knowledge, a lot of these delicious hats we've been telling you about came from Miss Frith's . . . including our own delectable creation! . . . Later on we dropped in to Miss Frith's to see some of their new arrivals . . . and believe us, there's something new every day! . . . White hats for summer are now appearing in considerable numbers . . . one of their main characteristics is they look so light and airy . . . featherweight straw . . . organza . . . filmy mohair . . . Many of them are brimmed . . . and one we especially like has a black and white polka dot kerchief covering the crown . . . This could be alternated with other colors to match one's outfit . . . Why don't you drop in and try on some of these new hats? No parking problem . . . Miss Frith's have their own lot off Fisgard St., and a canopy-covered side entrance! . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas Street, 383-7181.

You'll notice that the "little heel" is much in evidence in today's shoes. Ranging from the cuban to the "little girl" look—to go with the youthful trend in the rest of fashion. Buckles, ankle-straps, cutout bows, buttons, laces and T-straps are the hallmarks of 1966 shoe fashion.

Don't forget Mother's Day . . .

A gift of perfume . . . or its sweet-smelling accompaniments like cologne, toilet water, bath oils and dusting powder . . . is just about the nicest compliment anyone can pay to a woman, be she young or old . . . bride or grandmother . . . and a gift we consider particularly appropriate to Mother's Day (which, as you know, falls on May 8th this year) . . . Douglas Pharmacy is famous for French perfumes . . . in fact, there isn't another place in town that carries so complete a stock of all the famous names, or examples of the perfumer's art . . . They have just recently added to their collection the Carven name . . . "Ma Griffe" and "Robe d'un Soir" . . . both of which are delightful . . . Perfume, cologne, powder, bath oil, etc., in this . . . New from Arpege is a non-sticky cream perfume called "A Veil of Arpege" . . . comes in "Arpege" and "My Sin" . . . lovely to rub into the skin . . . There's a special in Millot's Crepe de Chine cologne . . . just $1.35 a bottle (priced to suit a child's Mother's Day budget) . . . And another special for next week only is Arpege cologne and small vial of perfume for $2.50 (regularly $4.50) . . . You'll find every perfume you've ever heard of at Douglas Pharmacy, so give Mother the supreme compliment on her day . . . Douglas Pharmacy, 1673 Douglas Street, EV 5-1541.

The large handbag . . . almost the size of an overnight bag . . . is still a favorite with smart French women. Hermes is promoting a new rounded shape with large inside gussets and double handles.

Suitably suited for springtime . . .

It's suit season again . . . though to tell the truth, here in Victoria you can wear some version of the suit 12 months of the year . . . and always look perfectly turned out for most occasions! . . . which we think is one of the reasons a good suit is such a wise investment . . . Saw some mighty good-looking suits at Wilson's this past week . . . and you know there's always something about a Wilson suit that makes it stand out from the crowd! . . . One light-weight tweed in lilac, brown and beige tones, has a portrait neckline . . . buttons that look like fruit drop candies . . . the jacket is a wee bit longer than usual, which is especially good on this size 16 . . . Another size 16 is a delicious periwinkle blue mohair tweed . . . there's a blue Irish tweed with soft lines, a little more shape than the boxier jackets . . . size 10 . . . A Munrospun tweed in gold and buttery tones . . . nice wearable suit with easy raglan sleeves . . . blue-green-beige . . . size 14 . . . And for now under a coat . . . and all through summer, a handsome Italian pure silk suit beautifull tailored and detailed . . . natural color in sizes 14 and 18 . . . Also a blue and bright green in other sizes . . . Another thing, most of these suits are less expensive than we'd have imagined! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government Street, 383-7177.

Denim, that "duty" fabric, now is on the go-go with the young and sports-minded set. One New York pair of designers, Gussie and Becky, use denim for a backless evening gown with rhinestone buckles.

Dancing's the greatest . . .

Just recently we were reading how Canadians of all ages are becoming increasingly interested in dancing . . . A darn good thing, too, because dancing is just about the pleasantest and most healthful form of recreation there is! . . . Like everything else though, to really enjoy dancing, you need to know the proper steps . . . which is why a few lessons at Arthur Murray's will prove so rewarding . . . And this is an excellent time to start, on two counts: firstly, because the school is now celebrating its 10th year in Victoria by offering a $50 course for only $10 . . . and secondly, because if you enroll before May 16th you'll have a chance to participate in the forthcoming International Dance Festival . . . (six weeks of parties, prizes and all sorts of fun events!) . . . Getting back to this special $10 course . . . it consists of five private lessons and two social (studio dancing parties) . . . Whether you've never danced before in your life . . . or just want to brush up on new steps . . . this course will work wonders for you . . . And you learn the dances YOU are interested in . . . Everything from rumba to cha-cha-cha to bossa nova . . . tango to foxtrot to waltz to swing . . . Why not phone the studio on Monday? . . . Open from noon to 10 p.m. . . . Arthur Murray School of Dancing, 715 Yates Street, EV 5-1476.

The Jewelry Industry Council reports that in costume and fine jewelry, popular designs for spring and summer include whimsical birds, animal motifs and flower pins. In costume, there is new emphasis on corals—no longer coral color but white.

The orange drink that really IS! . . .

You see and read of all those drinks that taste "just like orange juice" . . . but Northwestern Creamery's Orange Drink REALLY does! . . . Not too surprising really, when you consider it's made from reconstituted orange juice, and is innocent of synthetic flavoring . . . What's more, it's chock-full of vitamins A and C . . . provides all your family's daily vitamin requirements . . . at the very low price of only 25c for a full 40-ounce quart . . . Orange Drink is all ready to enjoy the moment your Northwestern milkman leaves it fresh at your door . . . one of the most convenient, "instant" foods we know of . . . And this home delivery is an advantage not to be underrated, either . . . Not only to ensure product freshness, but to save your time and energy . . . No lugging bulky cartons or bottles from the store . . . Just another reason why you should have Northwestern Creamery home delivery (if you don't already have it) . . . Milk, cream, cottage cheese, butter, Orange Drink . . . plus many other dairy products delivered fresh to your home daily, or however often you want them . . . for mere pennies . . . About the only thing you need to get at the store is Velvet Ice Cream . . . and do try the May feature flavor, "Orange Pineapple" . . . it's delicious! . . . Northwestern Creamery Ltd., 1015 Yates Street, 383-7147.

Italian designer Baldini has an evening dress of silk poplin printed in geometric design of various colors, composed of long pants and long tunic with side slits below the waist.

Sweets to the sweetest . . .

Mirror, mirror on the wall, who's the sweetest of them all? . . . Mothers, of course . . . Young mothers, old mothers, oft-times even mothers-in-law, despite the way they're sometimes maligned! . . . A box of Welch's chocolates will bring a glow of pleasure to any mother's cheek on Sunday, May 8th . . . If your mother lives out of town, call Welch's first thing Monday morning and have them speed a box of candy on its way . . . They'll do the packing and mailing, enclose a card with your greeting . . . They'll also deliver your offering anywhere in the city if it's not convenient for you to go to the shop yourself . . . If you know your mother's favorite chocolates and candies you can specify which ones you want . . . maybe all soft centres . . . or hard . . . caramel or nuts or creamy fudges . . . rich, mouth-melting creams or something chewy or crunchy . . . Anyway, there are more than 50 varieties of delicious chocolates, candies and bonbons . . . fresh daily . . . made from only the finest and choicest ingredients . . . in Welch's attractive shop on Fort Street . . . So get your Mother's Day offerings at Welch's . . . And while you're about it, why not take some of that delectable candy home for the family, too? . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort Street, 383-6432.

There will be something for everyone at the centennial fashion show to be held Saturday, May 7, at McPherson Playhouse by the Women's Auxiliary to Family and Children's Services. Proceeds of the unique affair will go toward the fund set up for the Half Way House for Foster Children. There will be two showings of fashions featuring authentic gowns of yesteryear dating back to 1836, and modern young clothes of today which will be shown by The Bay Stylette Club. Mrs. A. W. Toone, wife of Victoria's mayor, will officially open the first show at 1 p.m. Other highlights of the afternoon include a tea, bazaar and musical entertainment. Modelling two of the oldtime fashions are, at left, Miss Sandra Milne in a hand-embroidered lawn and lace gown which was originally worn to a garden party at Buckingham Palace; and at right, Miss Elizabeth McIntyre in a cream brocade and taffeta wedding gown which Miss Kathleen Agnew's mother wore June 20, 1878. Miss McIntyre is holding an ivory-covered prayer book over a century old.—(Doug Price Photos)

Cathedral Boys' Choir Sings At Armstrong-Milliken Wedding

The Cathedral Boys' Choir sang the Wedding Prayer during signing of the register following the marriage of Patricia Anne Milliken and Mr. Robert John Armstrong in Christ Church Cathedral Saturday evening.

Dean Brian Whitlow heard the nuptial vows for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Milliken, 104 Joseph Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Armstrong, 225 Superior Street.

Given in marriage by her father the bride chose a floor-length gown of white sata peau styled with a fitted bodice and lily point sleeves. Rose appliques highlighted with crystals and seed pearls enhanced the bodice and extended down the front of the controlled skirt. Matching appliques trimmed the detachable train which cascaded from the waist in back. A crown of crystals and seed pearls held the bride's tiered veil of silk illusion net. She carried a bouquet of red and white gladiolus.

Miss Roberta Milliken, maid of honor for her sister, and Miss Beverly Gerrard, bridesmaid, were in floor-length pink gowns featuring lace bodices styled with cap sleeves, and crepe over taffeta skirts. They wore crystal necklaces, gifts of the bride, and headdresses to match their gowns. Pink and white gladiolus were in their bouquets. Mr. Ken Blunt was best man. Ushering were Mr. Dave English, and Mr. Harry Morgan.

Mr. W. J. Green proposed the toast to the bride at the reception which followed at the Olde England Inn. Pink rosebuds topped the three-tiered cake centring the head table.

Following a honeymoon trip to Vancouver, Seattle and Portland, the newlyweds will make their home at Duncan.

For travelling the new Mrs. Armstrong wore a three-piece, walking suit in shocking pink and matching hat. She wore black patent accessories and a white rosebud corsage.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a widow in my middle 60s. A gentleman who lost his wife three years ago has been taking me out for six months. He is a fine person but something about him bothers me.

This gentleman telephones almost every evening and plays tunes on the harmonica. Sometimes I stand by the phone for 15 minutes listening to several choruses of "My Wild Irish Rose." I'm on a three-party line and the other folks get mad when he ties up the phone with his musicals. He doesn't hear them holler, "Get the bum off," but I hear them and it's embarrassing.

I hate to hurt the gentleman's feelings because I know he thinks he is pleasing me. Kindly advise. — IN A QUANDRY.

Dear Q.: Invite the gentleman to serenade you in person. I'll bet he'd prefer a live audience and I'm sure the folks on the party line would appreciate it if he'd free up the phone.

Dear Ann Landers: You might think it strange that a mother of 10 children is writing to you for advice, but I need it.

My six older children are happily married—two are physicians, one is a nurse and three are social workers. My old-fashioned methods worked fine with them, but my four teen-agers at home tell me that times have changed and I must change with them.

I refuse to let my teen-agers go steady. My 15-year-old son tells me that the parents of his special girl friend want him to be her steady fellow and they feel I'm too strict.

My own sister has a son who has been going steady for eight months. He is only 15. When I asked her why she permitted it she said, "What can a mother do when a teen-ager puts his foot down? What is the answer?—OLD TIME MOTHER

Dear Mother: Put your foot down on top of the kid's foot and sing out, "This is the way it's going to be."

Time doesn't change a child's need for discipline, nor does it change his need for authority in the home. When that authority gets to be the kids themselves—look out.

You sound like a terrific dame to me and I hope you'll use on the four kids at home the same rules that worked so well with your six grown-up kids.

Dear Ann: Last night my wife and I attended a big banquet. First on the program was a soprano who sang the national anthem. The woman had a beautiful voice and she sang all four verses. When she finished I applauded with a few others.

I remarked to Olive that there was mighty little applause considering all the effort that the singer had put into it. Olive said, "Look, stupid, NOBODY is supposed to applaud the national anthem."

I say when people sing the national anthem they shouldn't applaud themselves, but when a singer sings it, she should get applause because she is a performer. Who is right?—THE SPOUSE.

Dear Spouse: If you want to let the singer know you appreciated her efforts, tell her after the banquet, but don't applaud the national anthem—ever.

At a business meeting held at the home of Mrs. Fred Ritchie, 1066 Gosper Crescent, letters were read from pupils of the chapter's new adopted school at Allison Pass, Manning Park. Mrs. I. Friendly Cove

'They Don't Want Us To Live With Them'

By JULIE MORAES

GOLD RIVER—Moving the village of Friendly Cove from its isolation on Nootka Island has been suggested as a means of improving conditions.

But Jerry Jack, subchief of the Nootka tribe, believes older residents of the reserve will not abandon their homes.

Mr. Jack, who was brought up at Friendly Cove, also blasted water and housing programs affecting the Indians.

At the same time, Mr. Jack placed Magistrate H. A. Tasker of Tahsis in the "minority" who lump all Indians together in generalizations.

The young subchief said drinking is a result of pure boredom.

Mr. Jack was educated at Christies Indian Residential School on Meares Island.

He moved to Gold River to get steady employment, and recently bought a $21,000 split-level four-bedroom home.

He is employed by Tahsis Company as a boomman at Gold River logging operation.

Mr. Jack looks with concern on a threat to interdict the Indians at Friendly Cove. But he also looks with concern on the wider and deeper problems which afflict his people.

Do you think that the Indians are sincere in their wish to improve their standard of living?

Some of the younger fellows would like to move off the reserve but the older people would not like to leave their homes.

What loans or grants are available to Indians who wish to leave the reserve and build a house in a town?

There is a grant from the Indian Affairs Department available only if buying a new house which they will live in permanently. If they sell before a certain time limit the money has to be returned. If an Indian takes this loan he will get no further assistance from the Indian Affairs Department and will then have to pay all his medical expenses.

'Indians Spoiled By Government'

Would more of the young families leave the reserve and integrate into communities if there were houses available?

As long as you have the money you can buy a house but it is very difficult to get the money from the Indian Affairs Department.

Do you think it is up to the government to provide a better life for the Indians on the west coast of Vancouver Island?

People would not get the government benefits if they moved off the reserve, that's why a lot stay there.

Do you think poor housing is the concern of the government or the responsibility of each individual?

The government does more harm than good by giving them everything. The government spoils them so they rely on the government instead of doing things themselves. I feel it is the individual's responsibility.

Would you attribute many of the deaths at Friendly Cove, especially those by fire and drowning, to excessive drinking?

No! Most of the deaths are accidental . . . drownings in high seas and the fires because of tinder dry houses and no fire protection.

Do you feel Magistrate Tasker's interdiction ruling is typical of the attitude towards the Indians by the whites?

Only a minority talk about the Indians as a group and not as individuals. You can't group a race all together and say they are all bad or all good.

What do you think causes the drinking problem at Friendly Cove?

Boredom. If they had a good community hall like Ahousat, they'd have something to do.

Will interdiction be effective to those who have drinking problems?

I don't think it will — do more harm than good because they would get liquor anyway.

Would it be possible to enforce the interdiction ruling if it was put into effect?

No. He (Tasker) told the people at an inquest at Tahsis that they would all be interdicted.

'Water is Stagnant Officials Won't Drink'

There are many jobs in the area available to the Indians. What makes them such a transient group?

No housing for their families. In the case of one Indian who tried to get an empty house in a logging camp, he was refused by the logging superintendent because he was an Indian. It's all right to work for the company, to lease them land but they don't want us to live with them.

What is the most important need of the Friendly Cove Indian?

Water. The people voted on a plebiscite to spend $2,000 for a new water system. Morris McLean went to the Indian Affairs Department in Port Alberni to see of they would help with the cost, but were turned down. Indian Affairs says nothing is wrong with the water, but officials will not accept a drink of water if asked.

The water comes from a stagnant lake behind the village and the last report on the analysis of the water showed it was contaminated, but Indian Affairs says it's OK.

This is the reason the children get sick often. The next need would be for the Uchuck to stop in the Cove regularly so they could get supplies sent in. At present it refuses to stop for the Indians, but in the summer brings all kinds of tourists into the area at $5 a head. The Indians get charged $10.

'Nanaimo Indian Hospital Should Be Closed'

What do you need to provide fire protection?

A good pump to pump water from the salt chuck would be the answer.

Do you feel the schooling at the Cove adequate?

Yes. The way it is now with Bob and Laura Marchand, they are the only teachers who have encouraged further education after Grade 8. One of the girls who is graduating this year from high school plans to go into nursing and another boy graduating also on the university program hopes to go on to UBC.

What hospital and medical care is available?

Esperanza is the hospital but it is only good for minor injuries and not if you are really ill.

The Nanaimo Indian Hospital closing is probably the best thing that ever happened to it. The Indians are more or less segregating themselves and not getting as good care as the public hospitals. The Indian Affairs nurse goes in once a month but otherwise there is nobody with first-aid knowledge living at the Cove.

Huge 'Flying Shoebox' Visited City in 1951

By TIM GLOVER

A giant spaceship shaped like a shoebox and sporting amber lights, visited Victoria early one morning 15 years ago, according to F. Harold Hilborn.

The spaceship, dark in color with between five and eight portholes scattered about its superstructure, was spotted by Mr. Hilborn hovering over the Hudson's Bay Store at 4:38 a.m. one September day in 1951.

Mr. Hilborn, of 1436 Lang, was working at that time as a night watchman for a roofing firm on Johnson Street.

OVER U.S.

"It was huge," said Mr. Hilborn. "I would estimate it as being 100 feet wide, 125 feet high and between 400 and 500 feet long."

"It was so big that when it accelerated away I could see it in the sky until it was well over into the States.

"I told people of my experience at the time, but it was not long before they started ridiculing me, so I didn't say any more about it.

CONVINCED

"It was only recent reports of unidentified flying objects over Victoria that made me want to record this incident publicly."

Mr. Hilborn said that he was not a believer in flying saucers until his 1951 sighting. Now, he said, he was firmly convinced.

Mr. Hilborn's sighting was made during the rash of flying saucer reports in the year 1949 to 1951.

PIVOTED

"This ship was definitely controlled by some intelligence," said Mr. Hilborn.

"My first view of it was end-on. It then slowly pivoted round so I saw its whole length. It seemed to be surrounded by a neon amber light."

"I must have been about quarter of a mile away when I first spotted it," he said.

'TERRIFYING'

Mr. Hilborn said that as the ship accelerated away it pivoted as it changed direction.

"It was travelling at a terrifying speed. It was over the States in quicker time than it would take me to roll a cigarette," he added.

Mr. Hilborn said he had been trying for some time to forward his report to authorities in Washington, D.C.

READ IT

It was after reading in the Colonist that there was a Victoria representative of the National Investigation Committee on Aerial Phenomena that he decided to make his sighting public.

"I would like to get in touch with anyone who has made similar spottings particularly any members of the NICAP" he said.

Cheques Drain Dollars

BOSTON BAR, B.C. (CP) — Some 300 brush-choppers literally broke the bank here Friday as they tried to cash $90,000 in cheques.

The men, brush clearing for Peace River power project lines, lined up at the bank of Nova Scotia to cash their pay cheques.

When the bank ran dry—at $18,000—the men headed for a nearby hotel.

"They cleaned us out of cash too," said hotel manager Cog Harrington.

The small branch bank here is open only on Tuesdays and Fridays.

School Strike

QUEBEC (CP) — Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie of Quebec said today a strike of 2,300 technical teachers employed by the provincial government has been settled and that classes for the 30,000 students affected will resume Monday.

Paint-In Soon Rolling

COURTENAY — A fence paint-in has been organized by the city centennial committee, with prizes offered for the best efforts.

The committee has erected a special plywood fence on Fourth Street opposite the civic parking lot and two panels already are underway.

Details of the paint-in and reservations of panels by interested painters is being handled by the Studio Arts Shop on Fifth Street.

Dairymen Angry

Milk Shipments Face Fare Boost

NANAIMO—Milk shippers on Vancouver Island are most unhappy about proposed increases in haulage rates for their product to Victoria.

A meeting was held Friday night in Ladysmith when a committee was formed, chaired by Edgar Smith of Comox to meet with the public utilities commission.

HEARING NEEDED

A member of the committee is Herb Wheat of Wellington, who said, "we feel freight rates shouldn't be increased without the farmers getting a hearing first."

He said as far as he knows the increase has not been granted yet, but producers in the Saanich area received a notice from the dairies the increase would go into effect May 1.

Mr. Wheat explained milk prices are set by the milk board, and any shipping increases would have to be met by the farmers.

"That's why we're kicking", he said.

The increase in the mid-Island area is expected to be around eight cents a hundredweight, and a 15 cent increase in the Errington-Coombs area, near Parksville.

Mr. Wheat said the proposed hike will not affect milk being shipped to Nanaimo, only that going to Victoria.

Miners Lie Under Fallen Crosses

NANAIMO — A quarter mile off the Island Highway north of Nanaimo, there is a forlorn cemetery, now privately owned by Wellington resident Bill Loudon.

Most of the gravestones lie on the ground, grass slowly creeping over them. Others tilt at drunken angles, looking as though they would like to join their brethren on the ground.

At one time, this cemetery was used as the last resting place for members of the old mining community of Wellington.

One of the early members of the Dunsmuir family permitted this acre as a burial plot.

After the First World War the Dunsmuir estate was disposed of through the soldiers' settlement board, and Mr. Loudon purchased 600 acres on returning from the war.

Over the years he had made repeated attempts to get rid of the cemetery to local churches but without success.

"Three or four elders looked after it a while back, but it never really got transferred.

"I'd like to see a deed made out to the community. My brother used to look after it and if any old timer came along he would let them choose a plot," he said.

Wellington water district thinks it has found the answer by having its letters patent changed to include cemeteries, it plans to spend some of the area's $1,200 centennial grant on the cemetery.

Centennial committee chairman Mrs. Babs Howden said a memorial gateway will be erected, a new fence installed and the grounds generally cleaned up.

"We intend to charge a nominal fee for people to use it again.

"Maybe people will take more interest in it if it belongs to an elected body," she said.

People from all nationalities and religions are buried, some had wooden markers, but most of these have been destroyed during periodic bush burning sessions.

Other markers consist of plain iron crosses set in a chunk of cement; if there ever was any inscription, it has long disappeared.

One iron cross had a square lead plate rivetted to it, with the inscription etched in a foreign language, possibly Russian.

The most splendid monument, and perhaps the oldest, marks the grave of John McMillan, aged 26, who was killed in 1893 in a mine accident in the No. 5 shaft.

Bill Loudon, himself a miner for 30 years, remembers "the time when every Sunday old timers used to come round to visit the graves."

That day may return if Wellington completes its centennial project.

Right People Back Crawford

City Nightclub Singer Scores on Two Records

Sunny weather and good news inspired Don Crawford, folk-singer to take the afternoon off from a busy rehearsal schedule and gambol among the rocks in Gonzales Park.

Wednesday he received notice from his U.S. recording company that a single record he cut last October will be released in two weeks, to be followed by an album in late June.

Don recently took up residence in Victoria to form a rhythm and blues trio called Don Crawford and the Right People.

TWO YEARS

Originally from San Francisco, he settled in Vancouver two years ago because "I've always wanted to live somewhere where there is both sea and mountain. Besides, I find Canadians, generally, are much more friendly than Americans."

He added that he would have moved to Victoria at that time if he had felt that he could make a living here.

"Victoria seems to have grown up so much in the last two years that at last I could come here to live. I really love this city more than anyplace I've ever lived, and that includes New York and San Francisco.

BEST WORLD

"But two years ago I knew it would be impossible for me, a folk singer, to work enough in this city to exist.

"Now that I'm doing more rhythm and blues-oriented music and Victoria has a place like the A-Go-Go, I feel like I'm living in the best of all possible worlds."

Don and his trio hold forth six nights a week at Wharf Streets A-Go-Go, where he says, "People come to dance and have a good time rather than sit, listen, and hear a lot of message music."

Don denied he had switched his material just to catch on to the current teen-age fad.

"No that's not what I did. It might appear that way, but you see, an honest folk singer would be somebody who sang the music he had grown up with, right?

"Well, the music I grew up with was called rhythm and blues, and now that's the kind of music I'm singing, I feel like I'm telling the truth on stage for the first time in the nine years I've been singing.

"Of course, we do Beatle songs, and Animals songs and stuff off the charts, but we do them because they're good songs.

"I used to do Beatle songs before I started playing electric guitar, because they're the folk music of our age."

So Don spends his days rehearsing the trio, writing songs, his nights singing at the A-Go-Go, where his trio has an indefinite booking, scheduled to last at least through September, and he happily adds his name to the list of artists living in Victoria.

"Victoria really inspires me, I've written more in the short time I've been here than I did in the whole of last year.

"You might mention that I wrote six of the 12 songs on that album, which, by the way is on the Verve Folkways label, and which, by the way, I hope everybody will buy, because if you don't like the music, you'll find records make for great skipping on the water."

Two Boys Pick Dump Work

POINT ROBERTS, Wash. (CP)—A 16-year-old Canadian youth from Ladner will spend his next two Saturdays cleaning up the garbage dump at Point Roberts.

He was arrested when police broke up a drinking party at the beach resort. He pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct and was given an option of a $50 fine or two days on a garbage dump work detail.

A second Canadian youth pleaded guilty to a liquor charge and also chose the work detail sentence rather than pay a fine. His sentence was deferred until August.

Three GM Models Get Adjustments

DETROIT (AP) — Chevrolet confirmed Saturday it had made some adjustments in Corvairs "to improve driveability," but insisted no safety factor was involved.

This came within 24 hours of GM disclosure that adjustments had been made on 2,600 of its Oldsmobile Toronados, a new car on the market this year, and on about 23,000 of the 1964 Cadillacs.

A Chevrolet spokesman said Corvair changes involved "Only a few cars" and a bracket, which he described as "not compulsory" to change slightly the pivot point of the front strut rod of the rear suspension." He added:

DESIGN CHANGE

"It is a production design change which improves driveability and is not considered a safety item."

The spokesman also insisted the bracket was not a rear wheel bracket as one complaining driver had reported.

GM's disclosures came as all four auto companies were at work compiling a requested list of all general defects found in their cars since 1960.

TOO TIGHT

The request was made by Senator Abraham Ribicoff, (D-Conn.,) whose subcommittee has been probing the auto safety field for more than two years.

On the Toronado, a spokesman for Oldsmobile said an automatic wrench apparently had been set too tight and overly tightened the six lug nuts which hold the wheel rim in place.

He said the condition had been discovered by Oldsmobile's own testing program and that about 91 per cent of the cars already had been called in for a minor modification which included loosening the nuts and resetting them to proper tension.

HOODS OPENED

Cadillac said hood latches had been replaced on 23,000 of its 1964 cars after some reports that the hood latch had slipped, causing the hood to fly open.

The 1966 Corvair steering problem came to light when Ton Barnes, 22, a member of the Youngstown, Ohio, Vindicator staff, took his car back to an Ohio dealer and complained the car did not handle quite as he wanted.

AFRICANS LIVE LONGER

Life expectancy in Ghana has increased to 45 years because of improved medical facilities.

India's Pensioned Princes

Their Purses Bulge

NEW DELHI (AP) — The maharajas of India and their princesses, no longer burdened with state duties, have time and money on their hands these days.

More than 600 princely rulers, each of whom had run his own state, were put on government pension in 1947, when India gained independence.

They were provided with sumptuous, income tax-free private purses and private lands. They were permitted to keep two of their palaces and all their assets in banks.

BUSINESS

Since then the maharajas and their wives, the maharanis or princesses, have been fending for themselves as best as they can. Many entered business and some of the younger rajas went into government service.

Some of the senior maharajas have become ambassadors, such as the Maharaja of Jaipur, who is in Madrid.

It has been more difficult for the maharanis to find ways of spending their time and wealth. Before independence, they frequented European health resorts, drawing freely from state treasuries and tended by a retinue of servants. The shortage of foreign exchange has cut off most of these pleasures.

POLITICS

Some of the maharanis turned to politics and three of them are now members of Parliament. They are the shapely and lovely Maharanis Gayatri Devi of Jaipur, member of the rightist Swatantra party and sharp critic of the ruling Congress party; and two Congress party members, the maharanis of Gwalior and Patiala.

Gone are the days when the Nawab of Junagadh could spend $21,000 on the marriage of his pet dog.

But old habits die hard and the affection for animals persists. In the case of Jaipur, it is the love of polo horses. The Maharaja of Jaipur is one of the best polo players in the world. In the case of of Mysore, the maharaja still loves his elephants.

DOG EXPERTS

The greatest Indian expert on dogs is the Maharaja Bajrang Bahadur of Badri in the Simla Hills. He has written many books on dog-training and personally supervised the training of police dogs in the household of Jawaharlal Nehru. Those dogs are now with Nehru's daughter, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The maharaja organized at Simla the first police dog training school in India. He is invariably the judge at all Kennel Club competitions in India.

Some of the maharanis showed a little of the old splendor at the Delhi dog show.

Coffeehouses Launch Today's Singing Stars

By MARY LEE BURROWS

In days of yore, if you were an up 'n comin' performer looking for a break, you went into apprenticeship with a band and hoped for a lucky discovery. Well, times have changed.

It seems that in order to make it big now one must follow the Byrds to the American coffeehouses.

Areas such as Greenwich Village in New York are making names for themselves as great sources of hit-making singers and groups.

The Byrds, Bob Dylan and the Lovin' Spoonful are a few of these people. The Blues Project, which is supposed to be a fab combo, is a newer discovery.

Good Manners Win Friends

June Elizabeth, June, Ann

By KITTE TURMELL

Always be thoughtful of the comfort of the person you are with.

Be conscious of the needs of others; you'll reduce your own self-consciousness.

Conform to convention, consider good taste wherever you are.

These are actress June Lockhart's ABC's for attractive manners.

MANNERS

Good manners are just that—attractive—a way of drawing others to you. They are based on simple common sense, easy to learn, a way of keeping you from being unpleasant to your neighbors.

Over a weight - watcher's lunch of ground steak, paper-thin garlic toast, sliced tomatoes and tea with lemon, slim-trim June Lockhart gave her ideas on attractive behavior. She started with table etiquette.

"The way you eat attracts or repels others. Sloppy habits won't win friends. Table manners have evolved through the years, based on what is practical. You don't reach across the table because you are apt to knock things over. You pass salt, butter, and other food. Then no one will have to reach or ask for what he needs.

"You are served from the left because most people are right handed and will want to use the right hand to put food on the plate. The napkin in your lap catches accidentally-dropped food. You use napkin deftly to wipe your lips.

"Boys show manly courtesy and consideration by pulling out the chair for mother or dinner partner. When servants are scarce or missing, you offer to help clear the table. Don't insist if hostess prefers that you eat and keep talk going.

"Don't panic at a formal dinner when you see the array of silver. Watch the hostess, follow her lead, select the fork or spoon she uses."

SET TABLE

What is the teen-ager's role at parents' parties?

"Young people can offer help with setting the table, passing canapes, greeting guests at the door.

"In my teens I was encouraged to be with grown-ups," June recalled. As the daughter of the late Gene Lockhart and his wife, Kathleen, both noted theatrical performers, and the grand-daughter of John Coate Lockhart, concert singer, she met many interesting people.

"I was part of the party. I listened. I contributed if I could. I did not impress my personality on an adult audience. There is nothing worse, to me, than a young person who tries to take over and pattern an adult party.

"I also feel that parents should not try to run things at a teen party," June continued. "They should trust their sons and daughters to be good hosts, and assume that their friends will be good guests.

"Parents should be around to greet guests, then vanish, to be on call if needed. Young hosts can take over on refreshments and entertainment."

DON'T FIGHT

What if younger brothers and sisters act up, or there is a family quarrel during a party?

"Don't try to fight it out with guests around," said June. "I believe in the well-modulated voice around the house, with or without company. I can't bear to hear shouting in the kitchen. If family discord pops up at a party, give in and settle it later."

Here's where good manners come in. Practice gives the assurance of knowing, and the habit of doing, what's right and proper. Then you can be an agreeable guest, a relaxed hostess or host. You're able to use your energy to direct imaginative entertainment, and keep all around you amused and comfortable.

Teen Letters

Honest Talk Eases Tension

"Dear Kitte Turmell: I have been going with a boy I'll call Johnny for over a month. I like him very much, and I think he likes me—at least I thought so up until a few days ago. Then he drove by with a girl sitting next to him. He's been friends with her for a long time.

"Since then, I haven't seen him for almost a week and I'm getting worried.

"He never calls me, but I've heard he never calls any girl he goes with. He just drives by my house. What should I do?—'Upset'."

Dear "Upset": First, ask yourself, honestly, whether you have any right to feel you are "going with" Johnny. Did you agree to go steady? Do you date regularly? Would he object if he saw you driving past him, with another boy? Was the other girl his date, or was he just giving her a ride home after meeting her, by chance, somewhere?

If you feel you have the right to claim Johnny's exclusive date-attention—because he asked you to go steady and you agreed—discuss how you now feel with him. If you and he did not agree to go steady, don't try to direct what he does. Date him when you wish; but don't depend on him until he proves his reliability, by giving you no cause for jealousy.

"Dear Kitte: What am I to do? I told two boys that they could both drive me home from school on the same day. I completely forgot when I accepted the second one that I had accepted the first one. I like the second boy better, but I still like the first one, too.

"The first boy will get mad at me if I explain. The second one will get hurt, but he will understand. Please hurry with your advice.—'Mixed-Up'."

Dear "Mixed-Up": Tell the truth—keep your first date. That you owe as basic courtesy. Explain to the second boy and assure him you won't get mixed up again.

Confidential to "Old Maid"—That title is obsolete; up-grade yourself as a "single woman" or "career girl" if you have cause to refer to your status—otherwise why mention it? The title "Miss" is self-explanatory. If and when anybody asks you why you didn't marry just say: "I haven't found the right one—yet."

Your chances to marry are still high—the odds are more than nine to one. So don't lower them by sad-talk about the one you lost, if you want others to be attracted to you.

Summer Swinger

Motion, motion, motion is key to summer's swinging coiffures. Secret is blunt cut that leaves crown and sides long enough to spin into variety of styles, yet short enough so back and neck require no setting. In fact, all that's needed are nine large rollers—five to curl front strands away from part, four to twirl crown tresses back from hairline. As actress Shelly Fabares illustrates, bangs and sides lend themselves to sculptured styling. Bangs are combed in pattern, while side tendrils are parted over ears and shaped into cheek-touching "spoon curls."

Mop-Haired Combos Bang Out Roman 'Beat Mass'

ROME (AP) — Three mop-haired youth combos banged out a "beat mass" in a Roman Catholic chapel Wednesday night. Listeners couldn't agree whether it was a howling success or a holy mess.

A crowd of 500, including scores of priests, jammed into the Oratory of St. Philip Neri. They stomped their feet and bobbed their heads to the rhythm of the electric guitars, drums, organ and singers.

Another 1,000 outside beat on the door trying to get in. Police had to squeeze into the crowded courtyard to keep order.

A group of Oratorian Fathers, whose religious order specializes in youth work, sponsored the program.

The 17 young musicians were lined up before a battery of microphones to perform a nine-part mass written by composer Marcello Giombini, with words adapted by an editor of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, Rev. Carlo Gasbarri. There was no religious celebration of the mass.

The Scientific Approach to Hairdressing

INTRODUCING THE NEWEST DISCOVERY IN PERMANENT WAVING

A short while ago two noted Bio-Chemists proved that Vitamin A caused cell modulations in hair, different to the action caused by the usual acids used in permanent waves. As soon as these findings were corroborated by other independent Scientists, REDKEN LABORATORIES INC. formulated a new permanent wave called PERSUADE. They reduced the amount of acid and added natural Vitamin A.

Before marketing PERSUADE, it was sent out to members of REDKEN'S HAIR RESEARCH DIVISION all across the continent, including MARGO BEAUTY STUDIO. The results were amazing. PERSUADE curls quickly, efficiently, and with less damage to the hair than any other acid type permanent wave ever tested.

PERSUADE is now available at all three MARGO BEAUTY STUDIOS. Until May 14th only, PERSUADE will be available at a special introductory price. Take advantage of this offer and gain the benefits of THE REDKEN SCIENTIFIC METHOD OF HAIRDRESSING.

Russian Fleet Busy

Fair Fishers or Foul?

PORTLAND (AP) — What about those Russian fishing boats a few miles off the Pacific shoreline? Are they fair competitors or pirates who are despoiling American fish supplies?

The answer seems to be they are some of both.

They are fair competitors if that term means they are breaking no law, international or U.S., in fishing beyond the three-mile territorial limit.

But their method of fishing indicates they will stay there until they have depleted the supply, then will move elsewhere.

How long it will take for the estimated 50 to 67 Russian vessels operating from British Columbia to northern California to accomplish this no one knows.

For perhaps the single most important fact emerging from the arrival of the Russian fishing fleet is that we know next to nothing of the fish supply along the Pacific Coast.

As Robert Schoning, director of the Oregon Fish Commission says, "We simply don't know what's out there. To be precise, we can't tell if a catch of a million pounds is going to jeopardize our source or not even make a dent in it."

Austin Magill, water resource analyst for the commission, says, "If there are enough fish there for everybody, the Russians will probably stay there until there won't be.

"The trend is for them to come into an area and fish a large percentage of the fish down to a point where there's not as many as before. Then they will move on to greener pastures. The area they've left will probably return to normal, but it may take several years."

Dayton Alverson, chief of the Fisheries Exploration and Gear Research Unit of the federal commercial fisheries in Seattle, says there were perhaps 108,000,000 pounds of Ocean Perch—the fish being harvested by the Russians on the continental shelf off Oregon and Washington in 1962. That is a minimum figure, he says, and there may be five times that amount.

Ball & Shemilt Electronics Ltd. has represented the Canadian Marconi Co. in the Victoria area for over ten years, rendering a valuable service to the community in its communications requirements. The many users of radio communications in this area will benefit from Ball & Shemilt's expansion in this field. We wish them continued success. The Canadian Marconi Co. is proud to be represented by this fine sales and service centre.

Canadian Marconi Reliability
IS A GREAT MARINE TRADITION

The tradition started in 1902, when the Canadian Marconi Company was the first organization to set up and operate a permanent wireless station in Canada to communicate with ships at sea. Canadian Marconi has been manufacturing marine radiotelephones in Canada since 1925 — when the first units were produced for service on the Great Lakes.

The first shortwave telephone service to ships at sea was a Canadian Marconi installation in 1930. Since that time, CMC marine activities have continued to grow until today Canadian Marconi operates Canada's largest marine electronics maintenance organization, with service depots from coast to coast. In fact, Canadian Marconi is Canada's only manufacturer and supplier of a complete range of marine electronic equipment.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BRANDER—In loving memory of Garry George Brander, who passed away October 30th, 1965.
I seem to see in the soft, dim light
A face I loved the best,
And think of him when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the far-off west.
I miss you no less as the time passes on
Than I did on the day of your going.
For absence can never close the door of my heart
And the lamp of my love is still glowing.
Your heart was the truest in all the wide world;
Your love the best to recall;
For no one on earth could take your place,
You are still the dearest of all.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife.

Our company has the means and experience to show you how to become an independent businessman; how to double your present income; how to activate or reactivate those precious gifts nature provided you with, but which you never used because you thought they are non-existent.
HERE IS YOUR CHANCE
If you would like to find out whether or not you are suitable for a professional career, submit your application today. We will test you, train you, assist you until your success is evident. You have nothing to lose—but everything to gain. We want you to be successful because your success is our business. Most of all—you'll enjoy being with us. All members of our organization do. Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

An opening bid of three or four can sometimes be a good tactical move even if you hold enough hardware in the form of aces and kings for an opening bid of one. Vulnerability and your position at the table can make the difference. Contrariwise, when the tactical situation is such that there is no reason to fear enemy enterprise, it can pay to open with a one bid on a hand that could qualify for a three bid.

In this quiz you have a choice between opening with one or with a preempt—and the recommended bids may not always be what you expect. Take particular note of the vulnerability and South's position in the auction.

a. North East South West
Pass Pass ?
N-S vulnerable, South holds:
♠ 2 ♡ A K J 9 5 3 2
◊ K J 9 8 ♣ J

b. East South West North
Pass ?
Neither vulnerable, South holds
♠ 10 9 7 2 ♡ 9
◊ 8 2 ♣ A K Q J 7 4

c. West North East South
Pass Pass Pass ?
E-W vulnerable, South holds:
♠ -- ♡ A Q 10 8 5 3 2
◊ A ♣ K J 9 5 2

d. West North East South
Pass Pass Pass ?
N-S vulnerable, South holds:
♠ 8 3 ♡ 7 4
◊ A Q J 7 6 5 ♣ K 10 5

e. North East South West
Pass Pass ?
Neither vulnerable, South holds:
♠ K Q J 6 3 2 ♡ 7
◊ 9 5 ♣ K J 10 8

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

a. Four hearts. The main reason we normally open one heart is so that we can investigate slam if partner happens to hold a strong hand. And since we know that North, who has passed, doesn't have a strong hand, we need not be inhibited from making a straight game bid. Admittedly, there is still some slight chance of missing slam, but there is a much bigger danger that, by opening one heart, we might make it easy for our non-vulnerable opponents to save in spades.

b. One club. You could probably divide a panel of experts with this problem, but in our experience an opening three bid too often results in a three no trump contract being missed. The better bidder your partner is, the greater is the danger, for a good North will seldom respond three no trump over a three bid without a solidifying card in your suit. And on this deal, we know North hasn't got one.

c. One heart. It is possible E-W may connect in spades, but the fact that they are vulnerable and have already passed makes it reasonable to assume we can outbid them. Therefore we like the one heart opening, for there is a chance to reach slam if North has certain key cards.

d. Three diamonds. It goes against the grain to pass out the probable diamond partial; however, there is a danger that the non-vulnerable E-W team—who probably hold as many high-card points as N-S—can outbid us in a major suit. By opening a slightly unorthodox three-bid, we minimize this danger.

e. One spade. When you hold spades, there is less need to preempt, for it is likely you can outbid the opponents. However, if you play weak two bids, a "weak" two spades would be quite acceptable here.

Miss Betsy

PRINTED PATTERN SIZES 10-18

Several exquisite versions—from regally formal gown to sleek cocktail sheath—highlight our couture wedding gown pattern. In the most formal version, the elegant Empire line is dramatized by a train that sweeps superbly back from the shoulders. Of course, it's detachable for dancing at the reception. The fabulous Original by Miss Betsy is in silk peau de soie. Another version shows the gown without sleeves and reveals the double pleat in back. The short version is ideal for a guest, member of the wedding party or any gala occasion.

Printed Pattern A901 is available in Misses' Sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 16 wedding gown and train require 7 yards 45-inch fabric.

Newest 'Pill' Retroactive With Women

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A revolutionary "morning-after" birth control pill that can be taken as late as six days after intercourse has been successful in experimental studies, the American Fertility Society was told Saturday.

Progress on scoring a breakthrough with a "retroactive pill" was announced by Drs. John M. Morris and Gertrude Van Wagenen of the Yale University School of Medicine.

They said the drugs tested were effective in preventing pregnancy in rabbits, rhesus monkeys and in limited clinical trials with women.

REVERSES SEQUENCE

Their pill reverses the pill-intercourse sequence of birth control pills now in general use. The currently available pills must be taken daily, before intercourse. They prevent the occurrence of ovulation, or release of the egg from the ovary.

The Yale University pill prevents implantation of the ovum, or female sex cell, in the womb.

Implantation normally takes place on the sixth or seventh day after the ovum is fertilized by the male sex cell.

"There are plenty of clinical applications for a pill of this type," Dr. Morris said in an interview. There are the victims of rape, mothers who bring in tearful daughters who have been indiscreet, and the world problem of population control."

The report reviewed six years of research on possible post-coital contraceptives, carried on in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Yale under grants from the Population Council of New York.

Morris, professor of gynecology at Yale, said two musts for a postcoital drug are that they be non-injurious to the women taking them and not produce any abnormalities in the fetus if they are taken too late after fertilization to prevent implantation and later pregnancy.

RELATED DRUGS

He said several related drugs meetings these requirements proved successful in the experiments.

Studies on the first such compound were commenced 2½ years ago. The compound, a carboxylic acid named ORF-3858, was effective in rhesus monkeys. However, the agent has not been approved by the Federal Food and Drug Administration for human use.

Gown Hits New High

CBC's Policy Lets Host Project Feeling

OTTAWA (CP)—Laurier LaPierre, who will be finished with the CBC's Seven Days program in about seven days, is what the corporation calls a Permanent Program Personality.

Among the program staff, which refers to the Ottawa headquarters of the publicly-owned corporation as the Kremlin, this kind of television host is nicknamed PPP.

At the hearings of the Commons broadcasting committee, Douglas Leiterman, executive producer of the television program This Hour Has Seven Days, tabled a hitherto-confidential document about program hosts. He said the document's definition of Mr. LaPierre's job makes nonsense of CBC management's reasons for not renewing his contract when it runs out.

The document says a PPP is ". . . a person of some standing or reputation in his own right, established from such professions as journalism, academic life or politics, who handles the presentation of a particular item or several items in a number of different contexts."

Mr. LaPierre, associate professor of French Canada studies at Montreal's McGill University, has said that he was told his contract is not being renewed because management questioned his loyalty and said he expressed personal views as a host on the program.

The confidential document says nothing about loyalty. But it has quite a lot to say about a PPP's behavior on the air.

The PPP, it says, "may conduct interviews or express views current in the public mind, some of which may be provocative.

"The success of such program personalities will depend on their ability to stimulate audience interest in the subjects at hand and their capacity to demonstrate the importance, urgency or high interest of a particular subject or situation.

INDIVIDUALITY

"A Permanent Program Personality will, therefore, project a considerable degree of individuality."

The document says nothing about crying, another objection to Mr. LaPierre stated by CBC president J. Alphonse Ouimet. He disliked Mr. LaPierre's shedding tears following an interview with Mrs. Dan Truscott whose murder conviction is being reviewed.

SCRIPT

Under the definition of a classic host, the policy document says that as television styles change over the years the host "would convey his own feelings to the audience about some controversial issue, but by and large be restricted himself to the script."

The committee members are planning to toss the document at management—which approved it last fall—when executives appear before the hearings.

Mountie Gets His Man, Cariboo-Style

LILLOOET, B.C. (CP)—A young RCMP constable, dressed like a typical Cariboo cowboy riding through bush country, captured an armed mental hospital escapee Friday night.

The two struggled briefly and one shot was fired before John Guzin, 30, gave up.

The dramatic capture ended Guzin's six days of eluding posses of armed riders through the rolling hills of the southern Cariboo.

"He must have thought I was a rancher," Constable Norman Harvey-McKeen said in an interview today.

RODE UP

"He could see me at least a mile off. I rode up like I was going to water my horse and got to within four or five feet of him before he grabbed for his rifle."

As Guzin, who had been sitting on a log watching for the approaching "cowboy," reached for the rifle the policeman jumped on him.

The rifle went off, the slug sailing harmlessly into the air. Two more "cowbys"—an armed RCMP constable and a game warden—raced up on horseback and aided Constable Harvey-McKeen.

Until his capture Guzin had outfoxed 15 RCMP men in posses, sleeping little, scrounging the countryside for food and running hard.

Guzin escaped from the Riverview Mental Hospital near New Westminster.

Eight Killed, Seven Injured In Oregon Highway Crash

SEASIDE, Ore. (AP) — An early morning highway crash Saturday killed eight teen-agers and adults and seriously injured seven young children.

State police said it was a head-on crash between a station wagon, carrying two adults and the children, and a passenger car carrying six youths in their late teens and early 20s.

Police said the collision happened on a short, straight stretch of U.S. Highway 26, which winds through the Coast Range between Portland and this coastal resort.

FIVE CHILDREN

Hours after the crash, some of the victims still were not identified.

Police said the two adults killed in the station wagon were Earl Anderson, 49, Vernonia, Ore., and his wife, Shirley, 35.

Five of the injured were their children. The other two injured were the children of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Butler of Gerhart, Ore. The Andersons had been visiting the Butlers and were eastbound on their way home when the crash occured.

Police said there were no witnesses but skid marks indicated the other car was westbound.

It was one of the worst crashes in Oregon history. Fourteen were killed in a bus accident near Medford last December. In 1946, a bus-car collision killed eight.

Fatal Caves

Second Man Killed

BERGAMO, Italy (AP) — A second explorer who was trapped with five others in a mountain cave died Saturday.

Luigi Donini died after being hauled up from the bottom of a pit 850 feet below ground in the Buco del Castello Castle Hole Cave. He had plunged to the bottom of the pit with another explorer, Giancarlo Pelagalli, who died of injuries Friday.

Donini was hauled Saturday to a ledge 600 feet down where he lay on a rubber mattress alongside Pelagalli's body. He apparently died of injuries after reaching the ledge.

Their four companions were pulled up Friday through a gushing waterfall from the pitch-black darkness of the pit. They suffered from exposure, but were recovering.

Four of the six became trapped in the labyrinthine passages of the cave last Sunday.

The other two went down in a rescue operation and became trapped themselves.

Waterfalls that washed away guide lines and safety ropes hampered the work of rescuers who went down to find the trapped men.

Watch Your Tongue

LONDON (Reuters)— A newly-published book here enables tourists to deliver insults in five languages.

The Insult dictionary, issued by Wolfe Publishing Ltd. and covering English, German, Italian, French or Spanish, provides hundreds of phrases with phonetical pronunciations including:

Telling a woman wearing a big hat at the theatre to "please remove that monstrosity from your head."

Requesting the too-friendly party guest to "keep your wandering hands to yourself."

Telling the maitre d'hotel of a restaurant: "That fly looks extremely well cooked."

Writer's Book Reissued

Garden Notes

White Flowers Free

By M. V. CHESNUT

Hang on to your hats, girls—I have some more free seeds for you.

Away back last month, when we were distributing free seeds of the new buttercrunch lettuce, I told you to keep one eye cocked on this column as I was expecting a shipment from Europe of some more interesting seeds, and these have now arrived—seeds of the Giant Hyacinth-flowered Candytuft, a particularly lovely and easy-to-grow white flower. This is a repeat of an offer made several years ago, and the search for these seeds was sparked by a letter:

"Dear Mr. Chesnut: I have been an avid follower of your garden column for many years now, and I have sent in for every one of your free seed offers. These seeds have been most successful—those German marigolds and the Multiflora sweet peas were particularly outstanding and the envy of all my neighbors—and I still have two fine clumps of the perennial Gloriosa Daisy grown from your seeds.

"I have been wondering, though, why it is you never seem to offer seeds of a white flower. There are so many highly colored flowers in the garden these days and so few really good white ones, yet they are needed for church decoration and for weddings, and the colored flowers always look so much prettier when mixed with white ones. I do wish you would write about a good white flower, long-stemmed and good for cutting, and one that any novice could grow."

This letter rang a bell, for I remembered that we never seem to have enough white flowers in our own garden. Neighbors are always scrounging our white blooms for wedding receptions, church altar decoration, or for various social occasions, and we never seem to have enough for ourselves, so I started on a search for seeds which would be good enough to distribute to our Colonist family.

The specifications I set for our white flower were pretty rugged. It had to be easy to grow from seed. It had to come into bloom early, without a long wait, and it had to remain in bloom for most of the summer. It had to do well in almost any kind of soil. It had to be good as a cut flower, graceful and lasting well in water, and it had to be a pure, immaculate white, without blotch or blemish.

It took a bit of doing, but I finally came up with seeds of a flower which comes pretty close to meeting all these specifications. The botanical name of this chaste white beauty is Iberis coronaria hyacinthiflora, or Giant Hyacinth-flowered Candytuft.

These, then, are the seeds I have for the Colonist's third free seed offer of 1966. The plants are of the easiest possible culture, blooming in about six weeks from a simple outdoor sowing, and making a plant about 18-inches tall, each one with three or four straight-stemmed spikes of bloom resembling oversize white hyacinths. The flowers will last a week in water—longer if the room is cool—and shed no pollen or sticky sap on the polished furniture.

A free packet of these seeds is waiting for you, yours for the asking. Just drop me a line enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope, or use the order coupon at the foot of this column.

Next week I'll be giving some pointers on how to grow these seeds. If you are not a regular Colonist subscriber, I suggest you make arrangements to take the paper for the next four or five days anyhow, so you can clip and save these how-to-grow articles.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Ustinov as Henry VIII

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Peter Ustinov was born to play Henry VIII in his middle-aged, swaggering, plump period. And that is a very likely event some time this year. Director J. Lee Thompson has bought the re-make rights to the late Sir Alexander Korda's great Henry the Eighth, which starred Charles Laughton if you remember, and if you saw the performance you can never forget it. Lee has asked Ustinov to play Henry, the bearded star told me, "I am, of course, very interested." Peter's Henry will have more comedy, that I can guarantee.

A gentleman with a persuasive voice called to wonder whether I would be interested in playing the columnist in The Women, with Marge Champion, Dagmar, Hermione Gingold, Marilyn Maxwell, Jane Withers, Meredith MacRae, etc.—four weeks at the end of July. Well, it was like a war horse scenting the battle. I said I would think about it. I could get a column a day from these women.

If the Italian courts do not recognize the validity of the marriage in France of Sophia Loren and Carlo Ponti, they might sell the $2,000,000 dream palazzo they own near Rome, and buy a chateau in France where their children, if any, will be considered legitimate.

Gert "Goldfinger" Frobe has a good role in Riple Cross, the story of safecracker Eddie Chapman—for Terence Young. Along with Claudine Auger, the delectable French actress of Thunderball, Yul Brynner, Chris Plummer, Romy Schneider and Trevor Howard.

Ursula Andress says that the reason she gets roped into making new pictures when she would rather take a vacation is that "everyone calls and says, 'This one will be the most important of your career.' And when I say I'm booked up, they say, 'We'll wait until 1971.' Then you begin something and it's rude if you don't finish."

I was surprised at the extra marital romance in Cast A Giant shadow between Kirk Douglas, playing the late brave Colonel Mickey Marcus, and Senta Berger as a beautiful Israeli girl in the Israeli war for independence. There was no such incident in the book by Ted Berkman. Mrs. Marcus, as good a soldier in her way, as her husband was, gave permission for this bit of fakery when assured it would add some commercial value to the film. They went much further than she expected, and she has been very embarrassed. Actually, the movie, which is doing good business, did not need a false love story.

Sophia Loren has a different kind of love scene in Arabesque—using 40 pairs of shoes with which to tantalize an admirer. The Dior-created footgear includes some sexy thigh-length white leather boots. Michele Morgan was a screen sex symbol 30 years ago when she was 17. She is still at it—she has a romance with Anthony Quinn in The Last Command—this was The Centurian. And in case you are saying, "Wel', he's older than she is," Michele gets a lad of 19 in her recent Wells of Fear.

Those men from U.N.C.L.E., Robert Vaughn and David McCallum, will be in fierce film competition later in the year when the movie each is making now in Italy will be released at the same time—David in Three Bites of An Apple, Robert in The Venetian Affair. Their paths crossed in Venice last week—David and his picture were on the way to Cortina in the mountains.

Jeremy Slate, who is slated to marry Tammy Grimes in Cortina during the first two weeks of May, might have to go somewhere else. Jeremy, who converted to the Jewish faith, insists on being married by a rabbi. And there simply isn't one in Cortina. He'll have to bring one in, or come down to Venice, or wait.

Now that he's a big Oscar winner, Lee Marvin is determined to be a character as well. For years, Lee was going about his business of being a good actor and leading a quiet life. Now he's separated from his wife, and saying some funny things. Like on the set of The Dirty Dozen in England, Lee told producer Ken Hyman, "I'll become more neurotic than ever." The point is, he was not neurotic before Monday night, April 18. Or perhaps he always was, and it is now showing.

ART BUCHWALD Reviews Tourist Fashions

Come as You Are!

WASHINGTON—The new summer fashions for American tourists visiting Washington have just been released and from all indications the clothes are going to be more formal than in previous years.

The source of this information was Sophie Glutz, the famous Washington tourist fashion expert, who said, "It appears now that women will be wearing more stretch pants than Bermuda shorts when visiting the public monuments."

"How do you explain it?" I asked.

"I guess they've all been influenced by Lady Bird's beautification program."

"Does this mean that women tourists visiting this town will no longer be wearing blue jeans and sweat shirts?"

"Oh, I wouldn't rule that out completely. In the daytime you may find a certain amount of women in blue jeans and sweat shirts, as well as shorts, but in the evening they will probably change into slacks, stretch pants, and blouses."

"Is it true that the short shorts are out?"

"They are after four o'clock. Of course, many tourists will still visit the White House, the Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials in short shorts, but we're recommending longer shorts for the Senate and House of Representatives.

"I think that's wise," I said. "What about skirts?"

"Skirts are awfully dressy for sightseeing in Washington, but some women will wear them with halters and bare midriffs and open-toed sandals."

"What about dresses and suits for women?"

"Heaven forfid. A woman tourist wouldn't be seen dead in a dress or suit. All the other tourists would laugh at her."

"What about styles?"

"Keeping your hair in curlers while sightseeing still seems to be the rage. The large colored plastic curlers which stick out all over your head are coming back in again."

"How about face cream?"

"It's optional. Many women tourists prefer it to suntan oil as suntan oil doesn't show up as well."

"I suppose socks and stockings are out?"

"They have been for some time now, unless you're going to a state dinner at the White House."

"What's new in colors?"

"In shorts we're recommending plaids for women who weigh more than 150 pounds. They look so much better from the rear. Also, stripes are back in, at least as far as sweatshirts are concerned. The simple black toreador pants of a few years ago are definitely out."

"What about men's tourist fashions?"

"There hasn't been too much change in men's fashions this year. They'll still wear Army fatigues, bright colored sports shirts, sneakers and baseball caps."

"And children?"

"We're not laying down any hard and fast rules as to what children should wear in Washington. The National Gallery of Art has asked that children not wear bathing suits when visiting it, but you have to remember the Gallery is a very stuffy institution."

"I'm delighted to see how the standards in clothes have gone up in the nation's capital this year," I said.

"Yes, its amazing how clothes-conscious Americans are when they visit Washington these days. It's as though they know that they're on display, and they want to look their best for the Great Society."

ONE DEFINITION OF SUCCESS

By J. K. WATERMAN

Success is an elusive goal. This may be illustrated by the proverbial donkey with a carrot. The carrot swings from the end of a stick attached to the donkey, and dangles tantalizingly in front of his nose. As he moves forward to grasp the carrot, it moves ahead of him. A feeling of consternation comes through his mind. "What in blazes is happening? Try it again, old chap," he thinks. "Right! Here we go." The same performance is repeated. Blasted thing!" he thinks, "I'm going to get that carrot if it's the last thing I do." A look of craftiness steals over his face, and he eyes the morsel with considerable cunning. "Ah, the darned thing swings to and fro." Some thought ensues. "Perhaps if I were to set it swinging in the right direction, I might be successful." A few oscillations are now in order, and soon forthcoming. The carrot swings ever closer. Snap! "By Jove! That was close. I believe I'm on the right track." He tries again. This time a modicum of success is achieved. As he munches the tasty tidbit, the initial feeling of elation passes. He realizes there is yet more to come. He has only nipped the end of the carrot, and his goal is still before him. He expends more thought on the subject. "How can I get it?" He notes that the carrot is now shorter than it was. Obviously, the first method will not be successful a second time. Something more drastic will be required. "Aha! I have it" he gloats. "I'll take a run at that tree over there, break the stick, and get the carrot." No sooner said than done. A high speed approach, and impact is made. As he slips into oblivion, the carrot firmly clenched in his teeth, he realizes that his goal has been achieved. He is successful. Advt.

Lures Out On Six Fronts

The Daily Colonist King Fisherman Contest broke out on six fronts Saturday, as the annual six-month fishing spree for valuable hidden-weight prizes, trophies and buttons was launched in B.C.'s centennial year.

The contest breaks down into six monthly contests for hidden weight prizes and King Fisherman Prince Buttons, and the full contest for trophies and merchandise prizes for the biggest fish and the main hidden weight prizes. There are six classifications of fish — tyee, coho, spring (chinook), lake and river trout, and bass.

Main prize is an all-expenses-paid trip for two by Canadian Pacific Air Lines to Chile for a fabulous fishing holiday. All salmon five pounds or heavier and all trout or bass one pound or heavier are eligible.

Other major prizes are a Vancouver Island Helicopters weekend camping trip for two, and a Pioneer trailer-tent, plus an Elizabeth Arden cosmetic case for women anglers.

Big new feature of the contrast will be a special centennial aircraft campout prize for youngsters 16 years and under.

The prize is being sponsored by the Victoria Flying Club and president Vic Dawson will fly the winner and a companion for a weekend of fabulous fishing and outdoor living at his cabin in the wilderness on Nahmint Lake. Mr. Dawson has produced three King Fisherman winning trout from that lake in mid-July of past years — last year's trout leader, the trout leader for Righton Parker and a Prince Button winner for Bob Wright to clinch his Compleat Angler trophy.

The centennial aircraft campout will be a hidden weight prize for trout and bass entered by youngsters in May and June.

Youngsters should be sure their ages are marked on the entry forms in bold printing. The household in which they live must subscribe to The Daily Colonist.

There will be a special centennial Fish of the Year trophy awarded for the outstanding quality catch of the year and anglers who make a spectacular catch should phone or write to King Fisherman officials at the Colonist so they may be noted and turned over to the judges at the end of the contest.

More than 200 weigh-in stations from Oak Bay to Port Hardy and west to Tofino, Ucluelet and Gold River are now prepared to record entries. (See Page 10.)

The contest is on until Oct. 30. All that remains is for anglers to go out and catch fish, anywhere on Vancouver Island or Gulf Islands.

CBC: 'Situation Unchanged'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson acted as a labor-management mediator throughout the weekend in an unusual effort to avert a strike by CBC producers. (See also Page 40.)

The prime minister had an intensive round of talks Friday and Saturday with the producers and CBC executives, but there was no sign of a settlement.

"The situation is unchanged," commented Tom Koch, president of the Toronto Producers' Association, Saturday.

The 72 members of his association have voted to strike at 10 p.m. EDT today unless the CBC suspends its decision to drop Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre as hosts of the program This Hour Has Seven Days.

The producers have asked for outside mediation of their grievances against the CBC management, which centre on alleged interference with controversial programs on politics and public affairs.

CBC President J. Alhponse Ouimet has replied that the Seven Days co-hosts violated program policies, resisted instructions from the top and aired their personal opinions. He said repeatedly their removal is final and irrevocable and he was backed up by the CBC board of directors.

Mr. Pearson met Mr. Ouimet for an hour Friday and kept in touch with him Saturday.

'Early Bird' Fugitive

Burglary Suspect Now Castro Aide?

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says it has learned that Georges Lemay, wanted for a bank burglary here, is in Cuba and believed to be an adviser to Fidel Castro.

Lemay, 40, escaped last Sept. 21, from the Dade County jail in Miami, Fla., and has not been seen since. He was arrested in Florida after his picture flashed on television screens via the Early Bird satellite as a wanted man resulted in identification.

Lemay

La Presse says Lemay and his wife are living in a sumptuous residence at Havana.

KNEW NOTHING

Although police officials here are tight-lipped about the case, the newspaper says a Montreal police spokesman confirmed the report on Lemay's whereabouts Friday.

Local police and the FBI in Miami said Saturday they knew nothing of Lemay's being in Cuba, and an officer of the criminal investigation bureau of the Montreal police said the same thing.

UP TO $4,000,000

The Montreal bank burglary in 1961 for which Lemay is wanted netted those responsible anywhere between $500,000 and $4,000,000.

Authorities have said they are not able to give precise figures on the size of the loot from the burglary because depositors are not required to tell banks what they place in safety deposit boxes.

Britain Given Week To Act

LUSAKA (UPI) — Zambian students demanding tougher British action against Rhodesia attacked the British high commission building Saturday. President Kenneth Kaunda said later he had given Britain "seven days to make a move."

Police arrested more than 100 of the screaming youths who hurled stones at windows and tore the Union Jack to shreds outside the high commission. Police released them later but they were to appear before a magistrate Monday and Tuesday.

The students were demanding forceful action following Friday's shootings of seven African nationalists by Rhodesian security forces at Sinoia, across the border from Zambia.

CROSSED BORDER

The Rhodesians claimed they were terrorists belonging to the Zimbabwe African National Union party, which is banned in Rhodesia. They claimed the terrorists had crossed into Rhodesia from Zambia.

President Kaunda, who has long called for British military action against the rebel white regime of Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith, spoke at a mass rally at Nchanga, near the Rhodesian border and scene of recent disturbances during the Zambian copper mines strike.

WAITING FOR LION

In stating he had given Britain "seven days to make a move on the Rhodesian issue," Kaunda said if no move came he would "make Zambia's position clear."

The president did not spell out what action he expected from the British government or what position he would make clear. lion to bite," he said.

Pilot on Record Flight Overdue in Far North

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP)—A search by Canadian and American aircraft started Saturday for pilot Frank Hern of Seldovia, Alaska, unreported on a long-distance flight in a single-engine aircraft from Fairbanks, Alaska to Miami, Fla.

Hern, an experienced pilot with 10,000 hours of flying time, was last reported over Snag in the Yukon at 5:42 p.m. Thursday. He had hoped to land at Miami about 40 hours after leaving Fairbanks on the 3,959-mile flight.

An RCAF search and rescue spokesman said in Edmonton that RCAF Albatross and Dakota aircraft were being joined at Whitehorse by two United States Air Force planes to join in the search.

Air Sea Rescue in Vancouver said an RCAF Albatross search and rescue plane has been sent from the Comox base on Vancouver Island to Whitehorse to assist in the search.

The spokesman described the mountainous terrain of Hern's route as "pretty rough country." Hern was reported to have not filed a flight plan.

Whitehorse is about 490 miles southeast of Fairbanks and about 940 miles northwest of Edmonton.

SURVIVAL GEAR

Hern was trying to break a record set by a Czechoslovakian in 1956 for aircraft in the 1,102 to 2,204-pound class. He was flying a 100-horsepower, Cessna 150.

The aircraft, which Hern had named the City of Seldovia, carried water, high-protein food concentrate, survival gear and was fully equipped for instrument flying.

Hern planned to fly over Canada to the Dakotas and then down the Mississippi Valley.

HE'S NOT A BOY

The RCAF spokesman said: "He's in bad country but with over 10,000 hours flying time and being 39 years old, he's not a boy. We assume if he runs into trouble he'll try to land and await rescue."

Hern's flight was sanctioned by the U.S. National Aeronautics Association.

Moscow Moons Over Tune

An 'Upsurge' May Day For China

TOKYO (AP)—Red China is ready for one of its biggest May Day celebrations today, jubilant over an "unprecedented upsurge in industrial and agricultural production," the New China News Agency reported.

A celebration also is planned in Moscow, and the Luna 10 satellite in orbit around the moon will radio back to earth with electronic beep tones, the "Internationale," the anthem of the Communist movement, to mark the holiday.

In Saigon, 10,000 police and paratroops were alerted for any attempt by Communists to use a May Day parade by organized labor to stir up rioting and other violence. All Americans not on duty were urged to remain off the streets.

DECKED WITH FLAGS

Red Chinese cities were decked out with flags, flowers and slogans for the major Communist holiday. A huge portrait of Mao Tse-tung hung in Peking's main square along with somewhat smaller portraits of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin.

The Soviet government on the eve of the holiday gave Soviet citizens something to cheer about. An announcement promised a big increase in the supply of food and other consumer goods this year.

Dutchman Lost No More?

Nugget Samples 'Almost Pure'

Rivals 'Would Take Your Very Life'

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP) — Glenn Magill says he really couldn't blame folks for being skeptical of his claim of having found the legendary Lost Dutchman gold mine. Not long ago, he didn't believe the mine existed.

"It is almost unbelievable," said Magill, who told of locating the long lost mine in Arizona's Superstition Mountains, "right where the Dutchman told everybody it was."

"I didn't believe there was a mine," Magill said. "I didn't even believe there was a Dutchman. But the more I tried to disprove it, the more proof I found."

Magill said he and five associates located the mine by interpreting four maps, three of which were obtained in the past two years from Dr. Erwin Ruth of Washington, D.C., son of Dr. Adolph Ruth who was mysteriously slain while searching for the mine in 1931.

He said he had been working on the project the past 10 years. He said it took considerable time to locate Ruth, to gain his confidence and obtain the maps, and to interpret the documents.

"It's sort of a freak mine," Magill said. "It's in a region where no miner would ever go to look for gold, according to the Dutchman."

Magill said he and his group had photographed the mine and obtained nugget samples that were "almost pure gold" but declined to pinpoint the location or show the photographs until legal rights are determined.

He said his group was the third this year to claim the find, but there was no doubt in his mind that he had located the mine. He said the mine was in a rattlesnake-infested government wilderness area on land originally granted to the Catholic church, and the church might still have some claim to the property.

Magill said it also might be dangerous to disclose the mine's location prematurely.

"There are several hundred people in these mountains today searching for that mine," he said, "and they're there all the time. There are people who would take your very life if they thought you had something."

Magill said his group keeps the maps and nuggets locked in a safety deposit box and never carries them.

Levee Collapses, Farmland Swamped

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—A temporary dam thrown up on swift Bayou Canal on a highway north of Shreveport broke today, sending flood waters racing across farmland toward Oil City some five miles to the west.

Sheriff deputies said they were not sure how much water the dam released, and they were uncertain as to how many homes were in the path of the floodwaters.

There were no immediate reports of death or injuries. Deputies said the flooding would probably reach the edge of Oil City, and there was speculation that the water could reach the northern outskirts of Shreveport.

As the level broke, the Red River continued to push toward an expected crest of 30 to 31 feet by Tuesday. Flood stage on the river here is 30 feet.

Sunk in Action

Athabasca Survivor Remembers Fallen

TORONTO (CP) — A wreath was thrown into Toronto harbor Friday night after a shipboard service to honor 128 crew members of HMCS Athabasca who died April 29, 1944, when their destroyer was sunk in action against two German destroyers in the English Channel. James Aikins, a survivor, tossed the wreath from the deck of the Haida, a sister ship of the Athabasca which took part in the same action.

A small group of navy men, former seamen and relatives of seamen who served aboard the Athabasca took part in the ceremony.

TRIBAL CLASS

The Athabasca and Haida, Tribal class destroyers, were screening Royal Navy mine layers off the French coast when two German destroyers were sighted.

In the attack, the Athabasca was hit by shellfire forward of her bridge. A short time later her magazine exploded.

The Haida sank one German ship and damaged the other after the Athabasca was hit. Of 132 Athabasca survivors, 46 were picked up by the Haida and 86 were taken prisoner by the Germans.

GUN CREW

Mr. Aikins said that during the attack he was working as a member of the gun crew on the forward deck. He said the explosion of a shell blew him into the water, burning his hands and arms and injuring his legs.

He was rescued by the Haida. The Haida, now decommissioned, has been converted into a memorial museum.

Grits Name Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—Allan O'Brien a 34-year-old corporation lawyer and little-known campaign worker, is the Liberal federation's new national director and chief organizer.

He succeeds Senator Keith Davey, 39, at a time when the Liberals face major tasks: preparing a national convention set for Oct. 10-12 in Ottawa, and revamping nearly all federal riding associations in line with the new electoral map.

Mr. O'Brien, an urbane man with three university degrees, was formally appointed at a meeting of the party's national executive Saturday.

DELEGATES

Sunday he was to attend a meeting of more than 30 top Liberal officials from across Canada to plan the October conference, expected to draw between 1,000 and 2,000 delegates.

The new national director was born and raised in Windsor, N.S., lived in Edmonton six years and moved to Toronto two years ago.

He said in an interview he hopes to move to Ottawa with his family in about one month. He married the former Nancy Roscoe of Halifax and they have two children, Timothy, four, and Catherine, two.

KEEP BUSY

Since 1958 he has been a solicitor and assistant to the general counsel of Interprovincial Pipe Line Co.

He said the redistribution of riding associations likely will keep him busy for many months. He plans to travel extensively to meet party officials at the provincial and riding level, especially on the prairies where the Liberals hold only one seat out of 48.

Campus Eases Liquor Rules

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—If they are 21 or more, Stanford University students will be allowed to drink alcoholic beverages in campus residences starting May 10. President Wallace Sterling, announcing that policy Sunday, said no alcoholic beverages will be sold on the campus.

Ad for Husband 'Kind of a Joke'

BOSTON (AP) — A Radcliffe girl who advertised for a husband so she could escape dormitory life said Friday she has had 220 offers, "but I'm staying single."

And she confessed to being "a bit shocked" at the number of serious proposals prompted by her advertisement that ran in the Harvard Crimson two weeks ago:

"One-year marriage? Seems to be the only way for a Cliffie to get out of the dorm. I'll share expenses, am a good cook. Other details? can work it out. Contact Crimson Box 2000."

"It was kind of a joke," said the 20-year-old student. It was also to protest Radcliffe rules that will require her to live in a dorm next year instead of in the "peace and quiet of an off-campus apartment."

Harvard men were quick to apply for interviews.

She said she has received about 60 letters from men stationed in Viet Nam.

"They all point out that I could live off campus and receive an allotment and that they would be collecting more pay and could live off base," she said. "But I don't think I want to get married by proxy."

"A married graduate student and his wife have offered to adopt me and I'm meeting them next week."

Suk Pak meets the Mairs

* * * * * *

17 Months Coming

It's New Holly Sue!

TORONTO (CP)—The baby was 17 months in delivery, and the waiting room was the Toronto International Airport instead of a hospital.

But Richard and Gloria Mair of Burlington, Ont., got their daughter just the same.

For a moment Friday night, two-year-old I Suk Pak, a Hong Kong orphan, wasn't too sure how she liked the idea of a new family. But by the time she met brothers Stephen, 6, and David, 4, the deal began to look a little better.

For the Mairs it was the end of months of negotiation with three governments and an international social service.

Suk Pak was one of four Hong Kong orphans delivered to Canadian families Friday. One went to a Vancouver family and two others were adopted in Quebec.

Dick Mair, 30, a professional engineer, and Gloria, 28, got the idea of adopting the girl from newspaper pictures of misery and starvation in Asia.

The four children were escorted from the Far East flight by Vancouver social worker Mrs. Laura Fowler who had been on a field trip to Hong Kong.

Suk Pak, the Mairs said, is to be renamed Holly Sue.

U.S. Phantom Jets Claim Super MiG Shot Down

SAIGON (AP)—United States Air Force Phantom jet pilots shot down another MIG-17 fighter Saturday in a dogfight 100 miles northwest of Hanoi.

The Americans claimed it was the 11th to fall, against a loss of only three U.S. planes, since last spring in aerial combat.

They said two other planes—a U.S. Navy Crusader and a U.S. Air Force Thunderchief—were shot down by anti-aircraft fire on Friday.

A dispatch from Hanoi by the Soviet news agency Tass, however, said seven American planes were shot down that day.

Meanwhile, Communist fire from neutralist Cambodia stirred up U.S. 1st Infantry Division troops who for a week had been methodically wiping out enemy base camps and supply depots northwest of Saigon on the Vietnamese side of a frontier river, the Rach Beng Go.

About 50 guerrillas shot from their sanctuary across the 50-foot-wide river in a diversionary action as Americans pursued about three platoons that had been spotted in Vietnamese territory.

The troops lashed back with machine guns and artillery but stayed on their own side of the river to avoid a graver international incident. American losses were termed light. There was no estimate of Viet Cong casualties.

Air action remained dominant otherwise both north and south of the border, but American spokesmen said U.S. Marines had killed four Viet Cong while patrols of the 25th Infantry Division accounted for 14.

Within Saigon, 10,000 Vietnamese police and paratroops were mobilized against a possibility that Communists would use a unionist May Day parade today to stir up rioting and screen grenade attacks. The U.S. armed forces radio urged all Americans not on duty to stay off the streets.

Rhodesia Talks Welcomed

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The word that Britain and the rebel regime of Ian Smith in Rhodesia have agreed to informal talks about prospects of a negotiated settlement was welcomed here.

The United States government has morally backed Britain in the prolonged showdown—in trade embargoes, on the British-Canadian-U.S. oil lift to Zambia and in the United Nations.

But there have been deep reservations ranging from the danger of losing face among African nations if Rhodesia muddles through, to alienating further such white allies as South Africa or Portugal.

PARTY IRE

While British Prime Minister Wilson has invited left-wing labor party ire in supporting the U.S. in Viet Nam, President Johnson faces thunder from his right on Rhodesia.

Some of this reflects anger about British-flag vessels still trading with Cuba and particularly North Viet Nam. Some represents the conviction the white Rhodesian rebels are the spiritual 20th-century successors of the American revolution of 1776.

The U.S. has 20,000,000 restive Negroes of its own to keep in mind—a factor in UN Ambassador Arthur Goldberg's statement Wednesday that failure to resolve Rhodesia "with justice to the African (Negro) majority would undoubtedly strengthen the forces of extremism, violence and racism in the heart of Africa."

As Congress resumed, a series of Republican and southern Democrat members attacked U.S. support for Britain's Rhodesian policy on grounds Britain persists in trading with enemies.

STOP SHIPS

British-flag vessels calling at North Viet Nam have been explained here unofficially as a dwindling element, representing Hong Kong ownership that Britain has difficulty regulating.

But Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, chairman of the armed services committee, this week told an interviewer from the weekly magazine U.S. News and World Report:

"In the case of Britain, we have fallen over ourselves to accede to their requests in their difficulties in Rhodesia—which certainly are minor compared with what we face in Viet Nam. But, at the same time, they claim they can't stop their ships going into North Viet Nam.

'ANOTHER CHANCE'

"Well, I'd give them another chance to stop them . . . then if they can't or don't, we have the means of stopping them."

Russell, a Democrat, went on about Rhodesia specifically:

"Of course, I am opposed to our having anything to do whatever with this Rhodesian situation . . . it's a rather remarkable commentary on present-day history—when men are supposed to be getting soft—that 220,000 people in a nation of about 4,000,000 would undertake to maintain themselves not only there but against their mother country and against the power of the UN and the U.S. as well.

"Their courage may exceed their judgment but they have at least shown a considerable desire to run their own country as they wish."

Elements as moderately-minded as columnist Walter Lippmann have suggested Britain may have burdened the UN with a Rhodesian situation which is highly volatile just to escape some hard decisions by itself.

Father right, there is a newly-organized National Co-ordinating Committee for Friends of Rhodesian Independence which seems to lump together assorted elements including the John Birch Society.

It has published full-page advertisements in Washington newspapers urging U.S. support to break the Rhodesian trade embargo.

DDF Finals Line-Up Offers Wide Choice

By PATRICK O'NEILL

There are only two plays you may not recognize in the Dominion Drama Final at McPherson Playhouse this month.

One is Les Bonnes by Jean Genet, which you may have missed. M. Genet is a very contemporary (i.e. homosexual thief) playwright.

The play, to be performed Wednesday, May 18, is produced by The Contemporary Movement, Montreal.

Another reason Victoria may not have heard of it is because it's in French.

But the more certainly unknown play is A Stranger Unto My Brethren, by John Burgess, produced by The Questors, Toronto.

Mr. Burgess' play is what is sometimes known as an "original Canadian" play. (Whether this term means new, or compliments the author for not copying whole from Hamlet, is not clear.)

Stranger etc. was the only Canadian play to make it to the finals this year, a rude note to plans for an all-Canadian final next term.

The other plays are a cross-section of this and that—challenging more to the groups, perhaps, than to the audience.

For example, The Glass Menagerie, by Tennessee Williams, comes from Lakeside Productions, Ottawa, and will be seen on the Thursday night of the festival.

This play, in which Williams tempered his gift for realism with his love of poetry, has been around for some time. And for some members of the audience, may have been around and around and around.

Another American mid-century classic is Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman, Tuesday night, May 17, from University of New Brunswick Drama Society, Fredericton.

But the only play that has time's judgment, as well as man's, as a classic, is August Strindberg's The Father, from Vancouver Little Theatre.

Mother Courage and Her Children, a play the CBC had fun with (the phrase is used advisedly), will be seen Friday.

The Berthold Brecht play comes from London Little Theatre, London, Ont., and provides a lesson in epic theatre.

Probably no play will raise more eyebrows that The Knack by Ann Jellicoe.

The play comes from MAC Theatre Society, Calgary, and will be seen Monday, May 16.

Those who remember the Knack as a movie vehicle with Rita Tushingham, may be surprised at the outspoken aspect of the stage version.

Trophies will be presented Saturday night May 21 after A Stranger Unto My Brethren.

Unique Theatre Screens Only Old Silent Movies

By PHILIP SCHEUER

HOLLYWOOD (LAT) — Its 25th anniversary is coming up soon — and still there is nothing in the world quite like it.

That's the Silent Movie Theatre in Hollywood. "And so far as I know," says John Hampton, who with his wife Dorothy is the whole show, "we're the only house in the world running consistently with silents."

The Hamptons opened their theatre — 250 seats — on Feb. 25, 1942. They have been going ever since.

John takes care of the posters and the projection and Dorothy presides at the box office. The charge for adults (two shows nightly) is 90 cents, kids free when accompanied.

How have the Hamptons managed to keep supplied with silent films?

"There were few silents in libraries when we started," John relates. "We rented what we could. Now we have access to around 500, most of them not our own and still on leasing arrangements. We get an awful lot these days — not from original sources but from someone who has a print in his or her home and sells it or sometimes gives it to us.

"I make a copy — all our prints are shown in 16 mm. — after I obtain permission of the copyright owner. Sometimes they won't give it. There are some pictures I still can't get. An example is Mary Pickford; we have her early shorts for Biograph but none of her great features like Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall, Sparrows, My Best Girl or Tess of the Storm Country.

"Unhappily, the basic material — the negatives — rapidly deteriorates. Charley's Aunt with Syd Chaplin was one picture I particularly wanted. I found no prints in libraries so decided to buy one. To my dismay, negative and prints were almost entirely decomposed.

"I have put together a picture from as many as eight prints. The job also involves bleaching and re-developing to save faded portions.

"The old films," he explained, "were on nitro-cellulose, which is not only chemically unstable but us capable of spontaneous combustion. A lot of people may not know it — but if they are keeping any old flims in storage they have a time bomb on their hands.

"Since the Second World War, of course, the movies have used acetate cellulose, which is non-flammable.

"As for music, I still use transcriptions and phonograph records at the old 78 rpm speed — on two turntables. They are easier to handle than long-playing 33s when I have to make changes on cue — which is often. It's hard to hit the right groove on 33s."

What are the biggest favorites?

"De Mille's King of Kings — people just beg for it—Intolerance — a steady — The Birth of a Nation, Way Down East — Chaplin, Clara Bow, Valentino, Pearl White serials. Those that were popular in the old days seem to remain popular.

"We generally show a feature, a serial and a comedy or cartoon; or, an all-comedy bill with Chaplin, Ben Turpin, Will Rogers, Mabel Normand, Laurel and Hardy, Charley Chase and Max Davidson."

The Hamptons and their silent movies go along quietly enough year in and year out, and the prospects aren't too bad for another quarter-century in this last stronghold of the great art of pantomime. Meanwhile:

Tomorrow! Douglas Fairbanks in The Gaucho — and selected short subjects.

Two Survive Plane Crash

CRESTON, B.C. (CP) — The pilot and his passenger walked away from the crash of a single engine two-seater plane near here.

Pilot Hans Grunwald and Robert James Hall, both of Nelson, were uninjured but the plane was damaged extensively, RCMP said.

Republicans Hit Book Storage

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republicans are unhappy over a "comic book stockpile" being kept in a Washington wareholuse by the Office of Economic Opportunity. Representative Albert H. Quie and Charles E. Goodell, who like to call the anti-poverty agency a "fuddle factory," charged storage on the 435,000 job corps recruiting booklets was $125 a month.

Fee Reduction Recommended

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reductions in night school fees were recommended at a Vancouver school board meeting. Night school prinoipal Sherry Walmsley told trustees fees are increasing at a rate that may soon prevent adults from completing high school through the night school system.

U.S. Will Study Drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most "extensive and significant" study of drug effectiveness ever undertaken will be launched by the American government this summer, Food and Drug Commissioner James L. Goddard announced Saturday.

At the request of the FDA, he said, the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has agreed to evaluate the medical effectiveness "of up to 4,000 drugs."

The drugs scheduled to undergo government scrutiny are those introduced between 1938 and 1962 which required proof only that they were safe for internal use.

However the FDA said drugs marketed after the Kefauver-Harris amendments of 1962 requiring "substantial evidence to support therapeutic claims" before being granted government approval, will not be inspected.

Goddard said the results will help the FDA in determining the effectiveness of the drugs.

After 1938 drugs which were generally recognized as safe and those already on the market, were exempt from FDA scrutiny.

Most of the drugs now in general use came on the market after 1938 due to rapid multiplication of drug products and new procedures after the Second World War the FDA said.

ONE MAN'S VIEW!
by John M. Molyard
"I would appear to me, Real Estate values have never been better in the Greater Victoria area and also on the Island as a whole. This trend would seem to have come from our booming economy in B.C. and many outsiders are finally realizing that our B.C. is one of the finest spots in Canada to live. Prices as a whole are lower here than elsewhere in Canada. That, added to our lovely climate, will no doubt keep your values well up. Keep this in mind.
I have a continuing NEED of listings in all price ranges, both here and on the islands. If you intend to sell or are inclined to purchase, why not keep me in mind. Instant, well-qualified advice is yours for the asking. Dial 385-6741 anytime.

Nearly 5,000 Fans Can't Believe It

Leafs, Buckaroos Heading Into Second Overtime Frame

Playoff hockey is not always the close-checking, wait-for-the-breaks game that it is supposed to be. It certainly wasn't last night at Memorial Arena.

Portland Buckaroos and Victoria Maple Leafs, meeting in the first game of the best-of-seven Western Hockey League final, were still at the loose, wide-open hockey at press time this morning. They were locked in a 5-5 tie and heading for the second period of overtime as the 4,873 fans watched unbelievingly that the two clubs had only managed 10 goals between them and had failed to score in a wide-open 20 extra minutes.

UPHILL FIGHT

It had been an uphill struggle for the Leafs to get that far. Slow to get started, they trailed three times by two goals and once by one before gaining overtime on a brilliant goal by Andy Hebenton.

Showing the effects of their layoff after their gruelling semi-final series against San Francisco Seals, the Leafs didn't really get started for 30 minutes.

Their defence like a sieve, the Leafs gave up a goal within 21 seconds, dropped behind, 2-0, early in the second period on another defensive lapse.

They showed signs of coming back then but each time they got a goal they gave up another and the Buckaroos took 3-1 and 4-2 leads in the second period. But the Leafs pulled even at 4-4 in the third period, gave up another goal on a Portland power play, then came back again on Hebenton's great rush.

FIRST RUSH

Art Jones scored on the first Portland rush, being left by himself to cash the rebound off Mike Donaldson's harmless-looking shot.

The Leafs somehow staved off further scoring in the first period but Gerry Goyer, the third Buckaroo to get an undeserved chance in front of the Victoria goal, scored early in the second period.

But Mike Labadie cut the lead in two by deflecting in Claude Labrosse' long pass. Labadie just missed two more deflections on the same shift, then Arlo Goodwin made it 3-1 after Cliff Schmautz had missed on a clean break.

OUT OF NET

John Henderson was out of the nets when Goodwin lofted the puck past Fred Hucul, who was trying to act as a goalkeeper.

Three successive penalties to Jack Bionda started the Leafs back although the Buckaroos sandwiched a scoring shot between the two Victoria power play goals.

Fred Hucul scored on Bionda's first penalty and after Cliff Schmautz had scored on a clean break Milan Marcetta clicked while Bionda was serving his third penalty.

Fred Hucul tied it at 4-4 in the first minute of the third period with a tremendous shot but Sandy Hucul drew a penalty and Fred Hills got credit for Portland's fifth goal as Art Jones' long slap shot deflected off his stick right in front of Henderson.

Then Hebenton came roaring down the right side, deked Connie Madigan with a great shift and blasted the puck past Dave Kelly, who had replaced Rick Channon in goal when Fred Hucul scored his first goal.

And there it stood at midnight with both goals having one escape after another in the thrilling action which went into a second overtime period.

Caribbean Island Readies For Empire Games Boom

4-17-2— SAPORT P.14 — —

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP) — This Caribbean island is gearing for a summer sports extravaganza that will bring 1,400 athletes and officials from at least 39 countries.

The event is the eighth British Empire and Commonwealth Games scheduled for this sun-drenched city Aug. 4-13.

Prince Philip will open the Games in the 35,000-seat National Stadium. He is also expected to bring a polo team with him for exhibition matches during the festival.

IN HIGH GEAR

"The machinery is really ticking and we're in high gear," says Herbert Macdonald, chief games organizer.

Sitting in a bustling office atop the oval-shaped stadium opened in 1962 to honor Jamaica's attainment that year of full independence, Macdonald telephoned orders to a staff of 21.

He reported that bookings of reserved seats—there are 5,000 of them in the stadium — are going well and that none will be left by Games time.

The setting for the Games is spectacular. One side of the scene is dominated by huge green hills. The other side stretched off into a view of Kingston town and the tropical sea beyond.

Summer temperatures in Kingston average 76 to 94 in the mornings and early afternoons and from 92 down to 73 in late day and into the evening.

For this reason, most track and field events will be held in evening or night hours.

This city of 500,000 is not rich in hotels but Macdonald's committee figures to manage nicely by putting up athletes and officials at the bright new campus of the University of West Indies in the Kingston suburb of Mona.

The university, four miles from the stadium, will be in summer recess at the time and its four residence halls will be free.

The crowd-pulling track and field events will be held in the stadium, as will cycling and the finals of the boxing.

Virtually next door is the swimming pool with accommodation for 2,500 reserved-seat spectators.

NEW HALL

By June, construction work on a new convention hall in the same sports complex should be finished. The hall then will be used for badminton and wrestling.

Cost of putting on the Games is expected to be about $750,000 "but we are trying to come up with ways of saving the government itself the need for spending anything," says MacDonald.

His committee is putting on a national fund-raising drive, a song competition and is selling souvenir programs.

Walls and bulletin boards throughout the country are covered with flashy posters showing Jamaican air hostess Yvonne White, a beauty contest winner, in smiling welcome in front of the stadium's multi-colored reserved-seat section.

Match Play For Millar

TORONTO (CP)—The Millar Trophy golf championship, Canada's last remaining match play tournament for professionals in recent years, will switch to medal play this year.

The tournament will be a 72-hole medal play event at Markland Wood Country Club here July 27-30.

Davis Cup

Some Courts Cool; Fans Create Heat

From AP, Reuters, UPI

In Helsinki the tennis courts had to be thawed out for Canada to beat Finland in the first round of the European Zone of the Davis Cup yesterday, but in the Philippines irate tennis fans generated plenty of heat.

Canada's Henry Fauquier and Keith Carpenter defeated Reino Suominen and Pekka Saelae of Finland, 8-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4, in the doubles match yesterday to move Canada into the second round.

TOOK LEAD

The Canadians held a 2-0 lead from singles' victories Friday.

Canada will play France in Paris in the second round.

In Manilla, 3,000 Philippine spectators threw chairs into the courts and engaged in fist fights when Japan's top player Osamu Ishiguro managed to delay the finish of his match with Raymundo Deyro of the Philippines until today.

Ishiguro, trailing 2-1, in the fifth and deciding set, complained of a leg cramp and was granted a 10-minute rest period which carried him past the 6 p.m. closing time agreed to earlier. Japan had won the other singles' match earlier.

Winning in first-round play yesterday were South Africa, France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Italy, the Netherlands, West Germany, Britain and Morocco.

Americans Win First

TORONTO (CP)—The Rochester Americans blanked Cleveland Barons 4-0 Saturday night in the opening game of the best-of-seven American Hockey League's Calder Cup final series.

Barons outshot Americans 36-31. At least half a dozen shots seemed labelled, but Rochester goalie Bob Perreault always managed to get a piece of the puck.

Brian Conacher, Jim Pappin, Mike Walton and Gerry Ehman scored the Rochester goals.

Title Shared After Tie

Twenty minutes of overtime wasn't enough to decide the Combination Soccer League championship.

Island Tug and Barge and Colony Inn Lions will therefore share the Legion Cup, as both clubs fought to a 1-1 tie at Naden Field yesterday.

Two Workouts

Victoria Shamrocks of the Inter-City Lacrosse League will work out tonight at the Esquimalt Sports Centre starting at 5:30 and again Thursday, starting at 9 p.m.

LACROSSE WORKOUT

Red Lion Inn of the senior "B" lacrosse league will hold a practice Sunday at 6 p.m. at the Hampton Park box. Team members and interested players are invited to attend.

Orioles Singing But Sandy Sad

Baltimore Orioles won their ninth straight game Saturday to move into sole possession of first place in the American League, but in Anaheim, California, the Angels had more fun.

Baltimore took a tense, typical, 3-2, decision from Detroit Tigers as Dave Johnson hit a pair of homers, and Dave McNally picked up his third victory of the season.

But in Anaheim, the Angels erupted for 12-run eighth inning and came from behind a 9-3 deficit to beat Boston, 16-9, in a rollicking exhibition.

Rich Reichardt, Angels' $175,000 bonus baby, tied a major league record by hitting two homers in an inning. The last to do it was Joe Pepitone of the Yankees in 1962.

For the Orioles, Johnson's second home run in the seventh inning provided them with the winning run against Detroit. With Cleveland Indians and Chicago rained out, the victory pushed Baltimore half a game in front of the Indians.

In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers missed a chance to sneak into first place ahead of rain-idled Pittsburgh when Sandy Koufax was handed his first loss of the season, 3-1, by Cincinnati.

HAD LEAD

Koufax had a 1-0 lead going into the top of the eighth, but Tommy Helms hit a two-run single in the eighth and Leo Cardenas contributed a homer in the ninth.

Top Choice Soaks Hoof

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Kentucky Derby favorite Graustark arrived at Churchill Downs Saturday and still was counted as an entry in next Saturday's race.

Trainer Loyd Gentry said Graustark was having some trouble with his left front hoof, but expected his colt to start in the derby.

Graustark's infected hoof was being soaked in epsom salts in an effort to break up the abscess and relieve the pain. The abscess was caused by foreign matter, probably gravel that worked its way up into the hoof.

The decision on whether the Derby Dan Farm colt will run in the Derby probably will not be made for another several days, Gentry said.

Expect Rally to Be Toughest in History

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI) — The "Shell 4,000," longest auto rally in North America, got under way tonight, with firm expectations it would be the toughest in the rally's six-year history.

Sixty cars, each with a two-man crew, officially began the 4,100-mile drive to Quebec City from the Queen Elizabeth Theatre Plaza in downtown Vancouver, on dry roads with temperatures in the high 40s.

But reports received in the past few days told of deep snow on the Prairies, foot-deep mud on some roads in Northern Ontario and ice in Quebec, making for hazardous driving conditions.

The 4,000, billed "an exacting test of driving skill and car reliability," is one of five international events counting toward world rally championship.

Forty-one different models of cars, from Canada, Japan, France, Germany, Italy, Britain and the United States, are competing.

Drivers are to stop overnight at Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Sault Ste. Marie and Ottawa before reaching the French-speaking city Friday.

Bobby Edged For Trophy

Noon Practice

A midget lacrosse workout at Stevenson Park will begin at 12 noon today and will be followed by a junior B workout to be conducted by Nirmal Dhillion at 1 p.m. Equipment is desperately needed by players in the midget to junior divisions and anyone wishing to donate or loan equipment is asked to phone Mrs. Munro at 384-1769.

Timely Goal

VANCOUVER (CP) — A goal with two minutes remaining in overtime Saturday gave St. Andrews of the Pacific Coast League a 2-1 victory over Italo-Friuli of the Mainland League in the quarter-finals of the Province Cup soccer competition.

Stu's a Swinging Bird

Miller Makes Hank Bauer's Job Easy

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—No manager in his right mind would voluntarily stand up and tell you his job is easy.

Baltimore manager Hank Bauer does, however, and he happens to be in his right mind.

Bauer makes his unusual claim essentialy because of one man, an ordinary looking 38-year-old National League retread, who automatically heads for the bullpen every day, hasn't started a game in six years and doesn't care to, but instinctively knows what to do any time he's handed the ball.

His full name is Stuart Leonard Miller. Those who know him call him "Stu" and those who wish they didn't, call him "Old Head Fake."

"Miller makes it easy for me," volunteers Bauer. "Everyone knows the roughest part of managing is knowing when to change your pitcher, but if you've got a good bullpen, it's not tough at all."

Nearly lost in all the hoopla over the Cleveland's record-breaking getaway this spring has been the fact that the Orioles have stayed right on the Indians' heels with nine victories in their first 10 games.

Equally obscured has been the fact that Miller appeared in exactly half those games, picking up one victory along with three saves already.

"He has done so well," says Bauer, "that I've got three pitchers I haven't been able to use yet."

The three pitchers Bauer has been unable to use in Baltimore's first 10 contests are Frank Bertaina, John Miller and Gene Brabender, all of whom rate pretty high with Hank.

Miller makes good money as relief pitchers go. His salary is somewhere around $35,000 and Bauer, without the slightest twinge of envy, says: "Just look at what he did for us last year. He won 14 games and had 21 saves. That's 35 decisions right there. And his earned run average was 1.89. Any more questions?"

Only one. How does he do it?

"Well, I'll tell you," began Bauer. "He has this motion that gets all the hitters talking to themselves. Plus good control. And once in awhile he'll come in with that sneaky fast ball. But mostly it's his motion before he lets go of the ball. He does it with his neck some way."

Miller is like a doctor on call any hour of the day or night. He never complains of arm trouble or of being worked too often.

"The only time I couldn't use him was the last three days of last season," said Bauer.

"He had a sore neck. I don't know how he got it. He might have slept on it wrong."

That leaves only one more question. How long can Miller go on?

"Search me," said Bauer.

The way Baure said it made it plain that Miller needn't hurry off on his account.

Dairymen Angry

Milk Shipments Face Fare Boost

NANAIMO—Milk shippers on Vancouver Island are most unhappy about proposed increases in haulage rates for their product to Victoria.

A meeting was held Friday night in Ladysmith when a committee was formed, chaired by Edgar Smith of Comox to meet with the public utilities commission.

HEARING NEEDED

A member of the committee is Herb Wheat of Wellington, who said, "we feel freight rates shouldn't be increased without the farmers getting a hearing first."

He said as far as he knows the increase has not been granted yet, but producers in the Saanich area received a notice from the dairies the increase would go into effect May 1.

Mr. Wheat explained milk prices are set by the milk board, and any shipping increases would have to be met by the farmers.

"That's why we're kicking", he said.

The increase in the mid-Island area is expected to be around eight cents a hundredweight, and a 15 cent increase in the Errington-Coombs area, near Parksville.

Mr. Wheat said the proposed hike will not affect milk being shipped to Nanaimo, only that going to Victoria.

New School Inspected

DUNCAN — School trustees inspected the new Khowemun School on Cliffs Road Saturday and expressed satisfaction with the new unit.

D. G. Johnston, representing Greenwell Bros. Construction Vancouver, pointed out some of the modern inovations as the party toured the three room unit.

Gerald Paterson, chairman of the building committee, Will Dobson, chairman of the school board, and school principal J. J. Gillast were in the party.

PICTURES UP

The rooms were occupied Friday by 87 pupils in three units of Grade Three. They lost no time decorating the walls with pictures illustrating their current projects.

Each room has the latest in electrical heating units, with an individual thermostat. Office and storage space across the wide hall way drew favorable comment. The washrooms have a new type of rubber flooring.

The instant lawns surrounding the building, made possible by transferring turf from the vocational school site at Cowichan high school, made the five acre site most attractive. The plan is to seed the remainder.

Appeal Prepares Second Meeting

PORT ALBERNI — Jim Robertson, who will chair the second meeting to probe possibilities of an Alberni Valley United Appeal, is hopeful of good attendance a Wednesday's meeting.

"Union representatives, service clubs, church and youth organizations, groups concerned with health and welfare problems, and civic officials are all being contacted for the meeting," Mr. Robertson stated.

TAX PROPOSAL

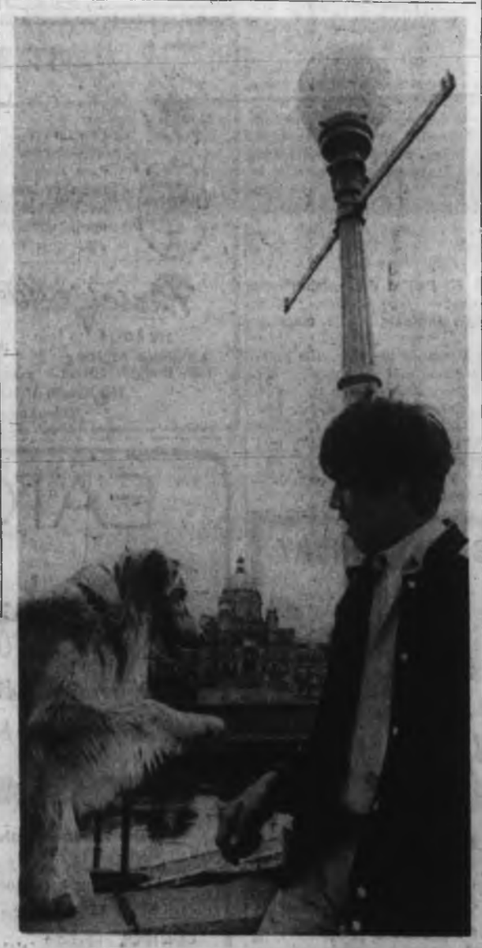

Many citizens, most of whom agree that health and welfare needs should be tax supported, are hoping that a representative from the labor council will also be on hand to explain the feelings of the council, and to hear any suggestions they may have had for maintenance of essential services until some change can be made.

"We don't deny things should be different but how can we drop our various welfare projects now, without something to replace them?" Ask groups such as Red Cross, cancer, arthritis, handicapped and retarded children's associations.

QUESTIONS WELCOME

If those who give to such drives, as well as the groups who receive from them, will turn out in a generous cross-section to discuss the problem at Wednesday's meeting, Mr. Robertson indicated, some problems may be solved and a lot of questions answered.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the education centre at third and Dunbar, and is open to the public.

Home Far Away

Boy and dog are a long way from home. Bernard Charleston and Laddie sit near Victoria's Parliament Buildings. Bernard, who has been down from his Tofino home for three months, is attending vocational school. He will become a cook. — (William E. John)

Egyptian Diamond Nude Wins Prize in Contest

NANAIMO — More than $400 was raised Saturday afternoon when the 60 fence paintings in Simpsons-Sears parking lot were auctioned off for the Lions Club group home for retarded children.

Average price a painting was seven dollars, and the top price was $30 for a portrait of Mayor Pete Maffeo.

The event was so successful the club intends to hold another fence painting contest next year.

Tina Travis and Don McMillan won the fence painting contest.

Judging was done by three high school staff members, Ces Young, Gino Sedola and Ron Marshall.

Simpsons-Sears has donated $50 for the winner, $30 for second and $20 for third.

The winning painting was of a modern nude with Egyptian features, carried out in a vibrant diamond pattern.

In second place was another teen-age artist, Jean Compton, with a modern motif of stark faces.

A Harmac pulp mill worker, Jim Kelly was third with a seated woman.

Honorable mention went to Mrs. Jack Whitlam with a Picasso-styled painting; Linda Ellstrom, a colorful abstract; Mrs. Gerd Bodin, a mermaid; Laurel Karjala, an inlet and a fishing village.

Comox Valley Appeal Works Out Publicity

COURTENAY—Randy Klaver, chairman of Comox Valley United Good Neighbor campaign, has appointed a special committee to direct publicity and advertising for the fall program.

Mrs. G. W. Stubbs, Mrs. Ede Anfield, Mrs. Bent Harder and a representative from the airbase will this week contact the agencies registered to participate in UGN funds, seeking cooperation in compiling a series of articles.

GROUP NEEDS

These articles will be designed to bring to the attention of the public the needs of each group. Particular attention is to be given to the local aspects of each agency with a detailed review of special needs within the district.

The committee is asking that all information be in their hands before May 19 when a meeting well be held following a preliminary discusion Thursday, April 21, at Mrs. Harder's home.

Mr. Klaver will attend the May meeting.

PLANNING SESSION

Members of the committee will attend a UGN planning session called by Mr. Klaver for May 4.

Date of the 1966 fund-raising campaign has been tentatively set for the week of October 3.

Court Sits Monday

PARKSVILLE — A Court of Revision for the sewer frontage assessment roll will sit at Parksville Municipal Office on Monday, May 2 at 10 a.m.

This will deal with additions to the roll and with changes caused by subdivisions or extensions of service.

Miners Lie Under Fallen Crosses

NANAIMO — A quarter mile off the Island Highway north of Nanaimo, there is a forlorn cemetery, now privately owned by Wellington resident Bill Loudon.

Most of the gravestones lie on the ground, grass slowly creeping over them. Others tilt at drunken angles, looking as though they would like to join their brethren on the ground.

At one time, this cemetery was used as the last resting place for members of the old mining community of Wellington.

One of the early members of the Dunsmuir family permitted this acre as a burial plot.

After the First World War the Dunsmuir estate was disposed of through the soldiers' settlement board, and Mr. Loudon purchased 600 acres on returning from the war.

Over the years he had made repeated attempts to get rid of the cemetery to local churches but without success.

"Three or four elders looked after it a while back, but it never really got transferred.

"I'd like to see a deed made out to the community. My brother used to look after it and if any old timer came along he would let them choose a plot," he said.

Wellington water district thinks it has found the answer by having its letters patent changed to include cemeteries, it plans to spend some of the area's $1,200 centennial grant on the cemetery.

Centennial committee chairman Mrs. Babs Howden said a memorial gateway will be erected, a new fence installed and the grounds generally cleaned up.

"We intend to charge a nominal fee for people to use it again.

"Maybe people will take more interest in it if it belongs to an elected body," she said.

People from all nationalities and religions are buried, some had wooden markers, but most of these have been destroyed during periodic bush burning sessions.

Other markers consist of plain iron crosses set in a chunk of cement; if there ever was any inscription, it has long disappeared.

One iron cross had a square lead plate rivetted to it, with the inscription etched in a foreign language, possibly Russian.

The most splendid monument, and perhaps the oldest, marks the grave of John McMillan, aged 26, who was killed in 1893 in a mine accident in the No. 5 shaft.

Bill Loudon, himself a miner for 30 years, remembers "the time when every Sunday old timers used to come round to vist the graves."

That day may return if Wellington completes its centennial project.

Friendly Cove

'They Don't Want Us To Live With Them'

By JULIE MORAES

GOLD RIVER—Moving the village of Friendly Cove from its isolation on Nootka Island has been suggested as a means of improving conditions.

But Jerry Jack, subchief of the Nootka tribe, believes older residents of the reserve will not abandon their homes.

Mr. Jack, who was brought up at Friendly Cove, also blasted water and housing programs affecting the Indians.

At the same time, Mr. Jack placed Magistrate H. A. Tasker of Tahsis in the "minority" who lump all Indians together in generalizations.

The young subchief said drinking is a result of pure boredom.

Mr. Jack was educated at Christies Indian Residential School on Meares Island.

He moved to Gold River to get steady employment, and recently bought a $21,000 split-level four-bedroom home.

He is employed by Tahsis Company as a boomman at Gold River logging operation.

Mr. Jack looks with concern on a threat to interdict the Indians at Friendly Cove. But he also looks with concern on the wider and deeper problems which afflict his people.

Do you think that the Indians are sincere in their wish to improve their standard of living?

Some of the younger fellows would like to move off the reserve but the older people would not like to leave their homes.

What loans or grants are available to Indians who wish to leave the reserve and build a house in a town?

There is a grant from the Indian Affairs Department available only if buying a new house which they will live in permanently. If they sell before a certain time limit the money has to be returned. If an Indian takes this loan he will get no further assistance from the Indian Affairs Department and will then have to pay all his medical expenses.

'Indians Spoiled By Government'

Would more of the young families leave the reserve and integrate into communities if there were houses available?

As long as you have the money you can buy a house but it is very difficult to get the money from the Indian Affairs Department.

Do you think it is up to the government to provide a better life for the Indians on the west coast of Vancouver Island?

People would not get the government benefits if they moved off the reserve, that's why a lot stay there.

Do you think poor housing is the concern of the government or the responsibility of each individual?

The government does more harm than good by giving them everything. The government spoils them so they rely on the government instead of doing things themselves. I feel it is the individual's responsibility.

'Tinder Dry Houses Lack Protection'

Would you attribute many of the deaths at Friendly Cove, especially those by fire and drowning, to excessive drinking?

No! Most of the deaths are accidental . . . drownings in high seas and the fires because of tinder dry houses and no fire protection.

Do you feel Magistrate Tasker's interdiction ruling is typical of the attitude towards the Indians by the whites?

Only a minority talk about the Indians as a group and not as individuals. You can't group a race all together and say they are all bad or all good.

What do you think causes the drinking problem at Friendly Cove?

Boredom. If they had a good community hall like Ahousat, they'd have something to do.

Will interdiction be effective to those who have drinking problems?

I don't think it will — do more harm than good because they would get liquor anyway.

Would it be possible to enforce the interdiction ruling if it was put into effect?

No. He (Tasker) told the people at an inquest at Tahsis that they would all be interdicted.

'Water is Stagnant Officials Won't Drink'

There are many jobs in the area available to the Indians. What makes them such a transient group?

No housing for their families. In the case of one Indian who tried to get an empty house in a logging camp, he was refused by the logging superintendent because he was an Indian. It's all right to work for the company, to lease them land but they don't want us to live with them.

What is the most important need of the Friendly Cove Indian?

Water. The people voted on a plebiscite to spend $3,000 for a new water system. Morris McLean went to the Indian Affairs Department in Port Alberni to see of they would help with the cost, but were turned down. Indian Affairs says nothing is wrong with the water, but officials will not accept a drink of water if asked.

The water comes from a stagnant lake behind the village and the last report on the analysis of the water showed it was contaminated, but Indian Affairs says it's OK.

This is the reason the children get sick often. The next need would be for the Uchuck to stop in the Cove regularly so they could get supplies sent in. At present it refuses to stop for the Indians, but in the summer brings all kinds of tourists into the area at $5 a head. The Indians get charged $10.

'Nanaimo Indian Hospital Should Be Closed'

What do you need to provide fire protection?

A good pump to pump water from the salt chuck would be the answer.

Do you feel the schooling at the Cove adequate?

Yes. The way it is now with Bob and Laura Marchand, they are the only teachers who have encouraged further education after Grade 8. One of the girls who is graduating this year from high school plans to go into nursing and another boy graduating also on the university program hopes to go on to UBC.

What hospital and medical care is available?

Esperanza is the hospital but it is only good for minor injuries and not if you are really ill.

The Naniamo Indian Hospital closing is probably the best thing that ever happened to it. The Indians are more or less segregating themselves and not getting as good care as the public hospitals. The Indian Affairs nurse goes in one a month but otherwise there is nobody with first-aid knowledge living at the Cove.

Faller Given Gold Cup

MESACHIE LAKE—A happy man was snag faller Stanley Deren as he received the gold cap award from B.C. assistant chief forester I. D. Cameron at Mesachie Reforestation camp Thursday.

This safety award goes to men who have been saved from serious injury or death by wearing a hard hat at the right time.

MOST SNAGS

"We think Stan Deren has felled more snags than any other man on the coast. He always works carefully. It is a very dangerous profession," said Mr. Cameron. Before placing the gold plastic hard hat on the 61-year-old faller's head and presenting him with a gold cap tie clip and framed certificate.

ACCIDENT

His work hat, with a piece broken out, bore testimony to the accident at Squamish last March.

Falling a big fir on a sidehill in snow, the snag hit another as it fell swinging around and hitting the faller on the head and shoulder.

INJURY AVOIDED

E. S. Martin, representing the safety supply company that presented the award said, "It is the company's pleasure to be manufacturers of a hat worn by a man who avoided serious injury by it."

Mr. Deren was guest of honor at lunch in the camp dining room where officials of the B.C. Forestry Service, Victoria, W. B. Whiteker, Nanaimo, Workmen's Compensation Board, fellow fallers and members of the press gathered to congratulate him.

B.C. forester George Silburn was luncheon chairman. In charge of reforestation division, he said the snag fallers were a permanent crew of highly-trained men.

FIRE HAZARD

They go all over the coast removing dangerous snags, which are a fire hazard, from logged-off land.

Reforestation is now practically complete in the Robertson River Valley, about 6,000 acres having been planted with Douglas fir over the past six or seven years.

The guests were taken on a field trip to see the men at work in the morning.

Don't Tamper

PARKSVILLE — A warning about tampering with practice projectiles which might appear on the beach at times was given by Fire Chief W. G. Wheeler.

The warning followed discovery of such an object recently by Ed Irving, chairman of Parksville village council.

The projectile was half discharged and could have been dangerous if handled unwisely. It was defused by a bomb disposal squad from Comox.

Early Trial Planned

NANAIMO — The famous coastal vessel SS Beaver may this year re-enact one of the first jury trials in the province.

The B.C. government is already recreating this well-known vessel as a centennial year project.

The trial was held aboard the Beaver, Jan. 7, 1853.

Two men were hanged off Gallows Point on Protection Island.

Frank Ney, chairman of Nanaimo centennial committee, said June 11 is the date for erection of two totems at Nanaimo to mark the Route of the Haidas.

To celebrate the occasion, west coast artist George Clutesi will be invited to come, with groups of dancers, from the Alberni.

The band from Kuper Island school is also to be invited.

Mr. Ney's group is planning, for the evening of June 11, a ball, with dancers in period costume.

Hourston Heads Executive

NANAIMO — Dr. Allan Hourston, a scientist at the Nanaimo Biological Station, was elected the new president of the local branch of the World Federalists Organization.

He succeeds Ian MacAskie of Lantzville.

Other members of the 1966 executive are Ralph Hutchinson, vice-president; and Robin LeBrasseur, secretary-treasurer.

Mr. MacAskie said those present decided "to explore the ideas of the 45 members for more effective meetings, and to obtain authoritative speakers."

VICTORIA, B.C., SUNDAY, MAY 1, 1966

Navy training yacht HMCS ORIOLE under sail in Juan de Fuca Strait.

After hundreds of thousands of miles – 46 years – in the service of their country, two of Canada's busiest seagoing watchdogs have entered semi-retirement. Recently two Royal Canadian Navy ocean escorts, Ste. Therese and New Glasgow, were relegated to "hot reserve." The 23-year-old frigates, veterans of the Second World War, finally have been idled by a shortage of trained naval personnel . . .

GLASGOW SANK ENEMY SUB BY ACCIDENT

By T. W. PATERSON

HMCS New Glasgow was born at Esquimalt in the shipyard of Yarrows Limited. Named for the Nova Scotian town, the River-class frigate was commissioned Dec. 23, 1943.

New Glasgow completed her acceptance trials in Juan de Fuca Strait, and sailed for active duty at Halifax in company of the armed yacht, HMCS Sans Peur. She began her apprenticeship in war at the nerve-wracking task of anti-submarine patrol.

The new frigate then became senior ship of Escort Group C-1, which spent the hectic summer of 1944 running the U-boat gauntlet as convoy escort between Newfoundland and Northern Ireland.

Later, the same year, she joined EG-26. This flotilla of frigates—Glasgow, Ribble, Sussexvale, Jonquiere and Beacon Hill — patrolled battle-torn European waters, supporting threatened convoys and meeting the U-boats on their own terms of seek and kill.

Late March 20, 1945, EG 26 stumbled upon U-1003 near Lough Foyle, Ireland. It was misty that night, but the bright moon burned through the haze to betray the German's air-breathing schnorkel.

Wheeling to the attack, gallant New Glasgow bore down on the submarine, lurking just beneath the surface. Glasgow lurched violently. With a scream of tearing, twisting steel, her slim bows knifed into the invisible raider. The frigate climbed up the U-boat's back, her bottom clearing the water. Then she passed over, and settled back into the sea.

Still making good speed, she put about and with her sisters began a blistering depth charge and hedgehog attack. For hours the ships criss-crossed the area, their asdic probing the depths.

HMC Ships Strathadam, Thetford Mines and La Hallloise sped from Londonderry to assist.

New Glasgow, her performance impaired by the damage resulting from ramming the submarine, limped into port.

The others hunted on. For 48 hours they scoured the seas. But no further contact with the U-boat was made, and they could find no evidence to confirm a kill.

On the third day, off Inishtrhuill, Strathadam and Thetford Mines encountered "an unhappy group of 31 Germans riding life rafts." It was the crew of U-1003.

They told their captors of the agonizing eternity they had suffered after New Glasgow had suddenly come upon them and sliced into their thin-skinned craft.

The frigate had caught the U-boat squarely amidships, smashing her periscope and, worse, her schnorkel . . . now she could not replenish her already scant air supply . . . the collision had ruptured her hull . . the seas poured in through her wounds . . her laboring pumps could not hold their own . . .

Lying on the bottom, the frightened Unterseeboote crew listened to the high-pitched whirring of propellers overhead, followed by the heavy slamming of depth charges and hedgehogs. The hours dragged by. A day passed. Two days.

The attacking frigates caused no further damage, but U-1003 was lost. Her men were fast running out of air, and when her batteries died they would be unable to surface.

They would be entombed in their ship at the bottom of the sea.

Finally, at midnight, March 22, the German skipper gave the order to surface. With her last power, the U-boat slowly struggled to the top, where she was abandoned. The frigates had widened their search, the Germans were alone. When they pushed off from her slimy side, U-1003 slid under for the last time . . .

The following day, they were picked up by New Glasgow's sisters, Strathadam and Thetford Mines.

It meant weeks in drydock for Glasgow, but it was worth it. She had attacked and sunk a U-boat!

At least, that's what the earlier RCN histories say!

Actually, what happened was this: When Glasgow lookouts had spotted the enemy schnorkel dead ahead, there had not even been time to think. Unable to alter course had she wanted to, "in no way prepared for sudden action," the frigate steamed into the equally startled U-boat!

But, if Glasgow's crew could not honestly boast it was their skill that won the battle, they had consolation in the fact this probably is the only instance in history of an enemy sumbarine being sunk by pure accident.

Returning home, New Glasgow entered the Reserve Fleet at Shelburne, N.S., Nov. 5, 1945. Almost a decade passed before she was recommissioned. Completely rebuilt and modernized, she found herself no longer a River-class frigate, but of the modern Prestonian class.

April 1, 1954, HMCS New Glasgow returned to her birthplace, Esquimalt, after an absence of 10 years. Since, she and sister Prestonians have performed "yeoman service in the '50s and '60s as training vessels."

Her service in the Second World War earned her the battle honor, Atlantic 1944-45.

Launched in October, 1943, HMCS Ste. Therese is named for the town of Ste. Therese de Blainsville, Quebec. Commissioned in May of the following year, the frigate saw considerable action in the Atlantic. Like New Glasgow, Ste. Therese began her career as an escort vessel, later joining a "hunter-killer" pack. She, too, served in Irish waters and became senior ship of her own escort group in the Western Atlantic.

After heroic duty in these roles, she was paid off into reserve when the war finally ended. Completely modernized in Saint John, N.S., Ste. Therese rejoined the fleet Jan. 22, 1955. The following month, she sailed for Esquimalt, where she has been stationed since.

Upon arrival here, the frigate participated in Operation Norpac, then the largest oceanographic survey ever made. With ships from the United States and Japan, Therese spent six weeks in the North Pacific, mapping currents relating to fish migrations.

In 1959, to increase her efficiency as a training vessel, a "bump" was added to her sturdy lines. This addition to her superstructure provides messing and classroom facilities for cadet officers . . .

Aug. 21, 1965, New Glasgow entered "hot reserve."

Said the RCN; "The ship will be maintained alongside the naval dockyard in a state that will enable her to be manned speedily by personnel in training and serving ashore at Esquimalt if required to meet emergencies."

Four months later, HMCS Ste. Therese joined New Glasgow in reserve. She, too, was laid up by lack of trained personnel.

Still in active service with the Maritime Command Pacific are the Second World War veterans Beacon Hill, Stettler, Antigonish, Sussexvale and Jonquiere.

Also in reserve here are the four Bay class minesweepers Cowichan, Miramichi, James Bay and Fortune, the supply ship Cape Breton, gate vessels Porte de Quebec and Porte de la Reine, and the old Algerine, Oshawa.

Porte de la Reine since has been designated as a training vessel for naval reservists, and the 'sweepers Fortune and James Bay have been offered for sale.

Poor coastal escort Oshawa has been in reserve most of her 23 years. Commissioned July 6, 1944, she cleared Port Arthur, Ontario, her birthplace, bound for Halifax. Among her ports of call en route was Oshawa, which welcomed its namesake in a grand manner.

The whirlwind visit "was marked by the formal adoption of the ship by the city and by a full and generous program of hospitality of the citizens of Oshawa. The opportunity was also taken to hold "open house" and show the ship to residents of the community.

"When the Oshawa proceeded on her way, she carried numerous gifts from the city, local organizations and private citizens. These included a well-stocked library, phonographs and recordings, a piano, public address system and other comforts and amenities . . ."

Her visit ended, it was back to work for Oshawa. After working-up exercises at Halifax, she was off to Bermuda for further exercises with Canadian warships and British submarines. Back at Halifax again, she got down to the business of war.

For eight exhausting months, the little escort fought winter and spring storms and enemy U-boats in the Western Atlantic, while on convoy duty.

GARDENS in MINIATURE

By MARGARET SHARCOTT

Fascinated, I studied rhododendrons two inches high, rose trees three inches tall, and 20-year-old evergreen trees seven inches high. For anyone interested in gardening and plants, Anne Ashberry's Miniature Gardens is well worth a visit.

Housed beside the Netloft dining room on Montreal Street, they were flown to Victoria in the spring of 1965 from England where Anne Ashberry breeds her tiny plants and designs her formal miniature gardens.

World famous since 1949 when Miss Ashberry designed a garden for Queen Elizabeth, the Gardens were shown in Victoria last summer for the first time on the North American continent. Included in the 22 gardens on display is a copy of the garden Miss Ashberry designed for the Queen.

The hundreds of miniature plants represents years of careful selection, breeding and cross-pollinating. Starting with the smallest specimens available Miss Ashberry cross-pollinated her tiny plants so that they would reproduee even smaller plants. Taking the smallest offspring from each generation she cross-pollinated again and again until her facinating collection of Lilliputian plants resulted.

The miniature plants are in formal gardens that are tributes to the landscapers art. For example, an English country village makes a charming scene. In a container about three feet by two feet cottages, a grocer, a church and an inn are grouped around a pond. At the rear of the buildings a snake fence of tiny wooden rails encloses some minute shrubbery which shades little pottery cows.

ASSISTANT GARDENER Mark Clark examines miniature iris.

Several of the gardens depict English country estates. Many have tiny statues, replicas of famous pieces in England. One has a wishing wells. Others have flagstone walks, stone fences and hedges, each put together with exactness. One garden is an Oriental scene, another contains only small succulents. Infinite variety and authenticity are keynotes of the whole display.

Two-inch rhododendrons with leaves no larger than a baby's finger tip form one of the hedges in a formal English garden. Evergreen trees brought from alpine areas where poor soil and cold weather has stunted their growth tower over scaled down carnations, miniature yellow-flowered shamrock and countless other plants.

Although the Gardens were air-freighted complete from England their arrival in Victoia brought problems. First, it was discovered that the masonry containers were cracked and chipped. Before the gardens could be displayed new containers had to be made locally and the plants carefully transferred in their original landscape designs.

Overhead, two-by-four rafters had to be erected to provide partial shade. The containers were set upon masonry blocks to raise them to a comfortable viewing height.

Everywhere the theme is minuteness. A dozen fully-rigged ships in bottles had been designed in the traditional manner outside the bottles, collapsed, inserted in the bottles and pulled back into shape with threads. A shelf of miniature china dating back to 1886 includes a one and a quarter inch clock that still keeps time.

About now my seven-year-old son Leslie and his friend Mark were showing signs of boredom, but they perked up at sight of the miniature Bleeka shark from Borneo and Java. "Doesn't he ever eat the little fish in his tank?" they asked.

The guide told us that on rare occasions he had been known to make a snack of his little exotic fish companions, but that now they were careful to keep him well-fed.

For the children, however, the highlight of the visit was the miniature ponies. Stella Cappella, the smaller, was born in Denmark. She weighs only 168 pounds and is 28 inches tall. Creme Cafe stands like a giantess beside Stella; she weighs 300 pounds and is 34 inches tall.

A collection of balsa wood birds carved by the late Mrs. Lillian Sweeny who worked for many years at the provincial museum interested us all. Until it fluttered off its perch, we mistook a bird which quarrels with its companions in one of the two avaries of prize-winning exotic birds and hence is kept in a cage among the carvings, as a balsa wood figure.

Bottled gardens, hand-blown Japanese fishing floats that have drifted across the Pacific Ocean and driftwood from Victoria beaches complete the decor. We were told that these extras were changed frequently because many visitors return for a second or third look.

In their first season Anne Ashberry's Miniature Gardens attracted both tourists and local residents by the hundreds. Future plans will probably include the expansion of the Victoria gardens and the opening of similar exhibits elsewhere.

BERT SMITH by stone pillar . . .

. . . and with B & K wagon and horses.

The Stone Pillar at Fort and Broad

By MAURICE WILKINSON

There is a small stone pillar near the edge of the sidewalk at Fort and Broad and probably thousands of Victorians pass by it every week without knowing why it is there.

I can't tell you myself for sure but I have a fairly good idea. That pillar has been there for probably 54 years and it was erected to keep horses out of the Yarrow Building.

I can't vouch for the story from personal knowledge but I was told it by my late brother-in-law, Bert Smith, who lived in Victoria in 1912 and worked for Mr. Ker of Brackman and Ker.

It seems that one day Bert was driving a team of horses making a delivery to the old Balmoral Hotel on Douglas near View. The two horses in the team were a contrast in temperament. Star was high-spirited and Brownie was quiet and docile.

But on this day both of them bolted and took off down Fort heading back to their stable at the Outer Wharf. When the team went racketing down Fort and reached Broad, one horse tried to keep straight on down to Government and the other started to pull to go south on Broad.

By pulling in different directions they got off the road and crashed head-on into the plate glass window of the old Pemberton Building, now known as the Yarrow Building. The team apparently was badly cut up but both horses recovered and were back in harness in a few weeks.

It was only after this incident that the stone pillar was put up at the intersection. No one knows if the owner of the Pemberton Building put it up for self-protection or, as I was told once, that Mr. Ker was responsible for it.

QUALICUM GOLF COURSE GETS FACE LIFTING

by JEANNETTE FORRESTER

When manager Alex Smith announced the closure of the Qualicum Beach Golf Course late last summer, due to a full scale renovation program, the lamenting had begun. For those who were on the staff of this popular 5,088-yard layout, it became apparent by the daily expressions from all and sundry of the deep interest displayed due to the forseen preparations which ensued on this nine-hole paradise.

Survey work, rototilling and laying of the water pipes and sprinklers made great strides shortly after the course closed Sept. 20. Sighs of relief were noticeable when the No. 2 hole, better known among tournament players as "the nightmare" was levelled off and streamlined.

This 305-yard monster devoured more golf balls than the dreaded barrancas at Torrey Pines. The swamp was so full of these golf pills that the frogs quit croaking, and yet the sport-minded golfer gambled over the forbidden area.

Although the golf course was in dire need of fairway sprinklers and reseeding, much planning went into effect before the final word. This feat was far from easy, to recarve a course, bring variety to some of the greens and diversity to the holes and strategy to the fairways. Although being blessed with a creek, it took skilled engineers to make this project successful and if so it would mean a possible saving in water supply. Actually this was the main event.

Everything else fell into place as time went on. For a golf course so well situated and tremendously popular with tourists, its closure was heartbreaking as it meant taking a season's loss of green fees, cancellations and much correspondence. According to records this little bonanza ranked tops on the Island. The parking area lined up continually, beginning with Easter and right through the Labor Day tourney. But as the over-all picture was to be considered, many a sacrifice had to be made.

Now seven months later the undertaking is beginning to fulfill a dream. The deep undulations evened off give the fairways a parklike appearance, and more so as tree-planting progresses. Fairways have taken on a new sculptured look which will go well with the plush greens. Keen interest sprung up with the pleasant weather as the local men's club came out in full force, headed by top brass, rakes and rock-pickers, showing a decided improvement on the fairways.

Noticeable, too, were a ladies' group who volunteered to help with the rock-picking, which the rock-picking machine was unable to gather. As soon as the rocks were eliminated from the fairways, seeding commenced.

The past few months have proved to the community that the golf course is the lifeblood of this tourist mecca, and unfavorable remarks have been met with scorn, regarding its importance to business existence. If a Founder's Day is to be celebrated, then General Noel Money is entitled to head the list. For it was way back in 1912, under the impetus of that intrepid hotel operator that a full scale 18-hole golf course was laid out. Some years later it was reduced to nine holes as demand for this rich property was overwhelming.

The operation of these scenic links was then more difficult and horses were used for hauling freight and machinery from Nanaimo. East Indian and Chinese work crews numbering in the twenties were hired to clear the land and level the earth by hand. This was a painstaking ordeal which was done with railroad irons with men at both ends, smoothing the soil, and making other preparations before seeding. Present day techniques and modern machines were unheard of then. Walter Ford and Parker Belyea played a big role in land clearing.

After the death of Gen. Money, the course was owned by a large syndicate, with George Walker as manager. In the mid-40s J. A. Montgomery came to work as greenskeeper and D. MacLeod was golf professional who apparently did a lot of instructing in that capacity.

After MacLeod's death the genial Mr. Montgomery became the head in the pro shop. He served faithfully and well over a long period of years becoming somewhat of a legend with the golfing public. Approximately eight years ago the golf course was sold to R. A. Brown and associates from Calgary and during the first four years the course was leased to the Qualicum Beach Inn, later reverting to the owners with Alex Smith as manager. Two years ago "Monty" Montgomery retired from the pro shop and Jon Leyne became golf professional and has also been assisting with the construction of the present day renovation. The other member of the pro shop staff for the past two seasons was Jeannette Forrester, who gained much of her experience from Monty in dealing with the golfing public. He taught her the tricks of the trade, and she was his protege in fact.

Due to past connections between the Qualicum Beach Inn and the golf course many guests are still under the impression that the two are joined. Numerous golfers arrive from Victoria each season as well as other parts of the

On March 30 last the Anglican Church of St. Peter's Quamichan, just outside Duncan, observed its 100th anniversary. The occasion was quietly marked, although a special service was held, taken by the Rev. W. R. Jeffcott, who was officiating until the arrival of the recently-appointed rector, the Rev. Neil Robinson.

WORK BEES BUILT QUAMICHAN CHURCH 100 YEARS AGO

All Cowichan Parishes Stemmed from St. Peter's

By DAVID R. WILLIAMS

A visitor might experience difficulty in finding the church, though it is not isolated. It lies about two miles to the east of Duncan in the direction of Maple Bay, between the Maple Bay Road and Tzouhalem Road. On exactly the same spot 100 years ago, a log church was built by volunteer help, and it served as the parish church until, in 1877, it was replaced by a frame church. The latter still forms the larger part of the present structure, and such later additions as have been made were all executed in the same style, which, in the words of the church committee in 1875, was intended to be "Early English."

The church sits atop a wooded knoll at the centre of 17 acres of church land—or glebe, as it is properly called—which is all that remains of the original holding. As with so many other B.C. Anglican parishes, the combination of money from Baroness Angela Burdett-Coutts, English benefactress of the Anglican church in B.C., and the zeal of Bishop George Hills, whose appointment to the diocese she secured, resulted in the establishment of a church in Cowichan, as the parish was first called. A rectory was built first; then followed the log church; and then, in 1877, the naming of the parish as St. Peter's Quamichan, the latter word, of course, being the name of the nearby Indian village, which is but a stone's throw from the church.

Bishop Hills, who had arrived in Victoria in 1860, did not visit the Cowichan area until 1862, although from his diocesan reports we can conclude that he obviously had a favorable opinion of the area. In his report for 1862 he painted a glowing picture: "The valley is extensive. Some land I passed over today is admirable in quality, rich black soil, grass three to four feet high, fern six feet, much open land. Capt. Verney and I came back by Quamichan village, where we got a canoe and were paddled down the beautiful river, through rapids and windings and wooded banks and rich pastures and salmon weirs, by the pale moonlight, to the entrance of the stream, where the ship's boat was waiting for us." He summed up his visit as follows: "I consider the Cowichan district very eligible for settlement; the soil is generally good; in some cases of rare excellence."

However, it was not until 1865 that definite plans for the foundation of the parish were made on a visit to Somenos that year, and after lunching with the settlers on venison, potatoes and tea, Bishop Hills held a meeting to organize the settlers towards construction of a church. As a direct outcome of this gathering, the diocese purchased 98 acres of land from William Beaumont, of Maple Bay, for $800, and the Rev. (later Archdeacon) W. S. Reece, of Victoria, was appointed to the parish. He arrived in March, 1866, and on March 30, in the still unfinished rectory, he held his first service, attended by five parishioners. Following the harvest service later that year, the decision was made to build the log church.

The log church was the first church of any denomination in the Cowichan Valley. A combined chapel and school house had been built in 1863, also of logs, on the shores of Somenos Lake, but it was never thought of by the settlers of the district as a church. The Stone Church, on Tzouhalem flats, was not started until 1869 and, incidentally, was used only until 1880. The log church, built during a series of work bees represented a real achievement of the settlers, and, although for some unexplained reason it was never consecrated, it remained the centre of Anglican worship in the whole Cowichan area for nine years.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH at Quamichan with Rev. W. S. Reece in foreground.

The parish was a missionary one, and it is this fact which gives it distinction. The first rectors were the administrators of the Church of England in the whole mid-Island region. From the main vine at Quamichan, roots were sent out to Somenos, the area later to become Duncan, Cowichan Station, Cobble Hill and Shawnigan independent parishes, but they all stemmed from St. Peter's, Quamichan. The rector principally responsible for this growth was the Rev. David Holmes, who had succeeded Archdeacon Reece, who had left some months after preaching, in 1872, a controversial sermon at the Cathedral in Victoria. Holmes it was who built the new church at Quamichan, consecrated in 1877; he built the church of All Saints', at Westholme, now part of the Chemainus parish, and also the church at Somenos. None of the later rectors were to equal the flurry of his church-building activity.

Probably the zenith of the parish was during the period from 1900 to 1910, when all great occasions of national importance were observed by services at St. Peter's. The last such occasion was in 1919, when the War Memorial — a rough granite stone with superimposed cross — was dedicated. This large rock, weighing between 10 and 12 tons, was hauled by horses pulling greased skids to the churchyard from a distance of about a mile. On it was placed a plaque containing the very long list of men from the parish killed in the war. The dedication was attended by 450 people. Another plaque was placed on the stone after the Second World War, and the relatively few names on it testify eloquently to the far greater casualties of the First World War. Among those few names, however, is that of C. F. Hoey, VC, the only native son of Cowichan to have won the Victoria Cross.

Not only did the parish minister to the settlers, but also to the Cowichan Indians. The Anglican church 100 years ago had a strong grasp on the loyalty of the Indians of southern Vancouver Island, but failed to maintain it. At Cowichan, W. H. Lomas, an Indian catechist, as he was called, labored mightily, learning the native language, translating the Bible and prayer book into it, organizing agricultural fairs. On a corner of the glebe — in fact, right at what is now the corner where Maple Bay Road strikes off from Tzouhalem Road — an Indian mission chapel was built in 1868. Here Mr. Lomas carried on many of his activities. He taught the Indian girls by day, and three evenings a week he held classes for the boys. Besides Scripture, he taught them singing and natural history. Among the many frustrations of his work were the absence of any physical aids to teaching and the habits of the Indian children in leaving school to accompany their parents while fishing and hunting. He grew discouraged, however, and he gave up in 1874 after seven years.

The burden of ministering to a couple of thousand Indians, as well as to all the scattered settlers was simply too much for the rectors of the day, and it was the Indian work that suffered as a consequence. The Roman Catholic church, having more manpower, became the church of the natives, and so it has been ever since. Neither church, Anglican or Roman Catholic, has done anything to assimilate the Indian into the community as a whole, and, in this sense, both have failed their mission to the Indians.

The feature of the present-day church that will strike most response i a visitor is the extraordinary blending of the church building with its churchyard. Indeed, it is doubtful whether any other parish church in B.C. achieves such harmony. The church was deliberately sited to take full advantage of the superb oaks and conifers near the rising ground on which the building stands, and the graves lie among these venerable trees, some of which,

ROGER SPURLING stands in Tsusiat Falls almost at the brink of cliff and takes in west coast grandeur.—(Andy Lord).

SHANKS PONY along the WEST COAST

Shreds of stratus cloud scudded past our port wing tip as we banked sharply over the village of Bamfield at the head of Barkley Sound and headed southwest toward the Tsusiat (Soo-see-at).

It had not been too difficult to persuade my friend Andy Lord of Mill Bay to forego the dubious pleasures of a weekend gardening and join me in a little adventure exploring the beauties of our lovely Vancouver Island. Time as usual was the limiting factor so with only a stretched weekend at our disposal we decided to fly into the Tsusiat to get a quick, fascinating peek at our wild west coast.

By ROGER SPURLING

In 1890 a rough trail was built along the west coast from present-day Port Renfrew to Bamfield. This trail was originally built to assist shipwrecked sailors who found themselves stranded on this wild stretch of coast known as the graveyard of the Pacific. Originally this trail boasted cabins every five miles and a telephone line. Over the years the Clo-oose to Bamfield portion of this trail has been kept more or less open. In recent years many people have taken advantage of this trail to enjoy its scenic beauties. As the entire trip would take five days, Andy and I decided to compromise and cut onto the trail at the Tsusiat. This way we could see the best of the scenery and still only be away two days.

Tsusiat Lake, one of the little known beauties of the Island, lies in the next valley northwest of the Nitinat. The Tsusiat River drains into the Pacific with a real flourish, ending a two-mile run by tumbling over an 80-foot cliff right into the surf. A little foot bridge on the west coast trail intercepts the Tsusiat River a couple of hundred yards upstream from the falls.

As our little Cessna skipped along 1,500 feet over Bamfield we could see the surf breaking around Cape Beale to our right and ahead saw the sandy sweep of Pachena Bay. Four minutes later we were waggling our wings to a couple of wee figures on the ground at Pachena Point Light.

Ten minutes later, after following the rugged coast, we wheeled left over the Tsusiat Falls and followed the river winding among the bush below us for two or three minutes and then down to a smooth landing on the sombre brown surface of Tsusiat Lake. At this time we little realized that the last three minutes of our flight would take up five to six hours to retrace by foot.

At our request our pilot taxied to the western shoreline and we stepped from the plane's floats right into the bush. Our pilot hoisted our packs ashore and with rather a pitying look said: "Is this where you want to go?" We nodded, he shook his head and took off probably consoling himself that the world was full of people.

You have to see it for yourself to appreciate the absolute impenetrable jungle that the rain forests on the west coast presents. Well as I know the Island, we were both rather stunned at the density of the bush. After a rather thoughtful smoke we shouldered our packs, glanced at our watches and struck off into the bush.

Our plans called for us to skirt the lake for a few hundred yards to strike a slough which in turn empties from the lake into the river and follow the river down to intercept the west coast trail above the Tsusiat Falls, a distance of one and one-half to two miles indicated by map, a two-hour trip according to plan and in reality six hours of hard work.

The lake dropped straight from solid bush into deep water. Andy started out cutting trail with his Kukri, a razor-sharp curved machette, a souvenir of Burma. Although he assured me his kukri was ideal for cutting train in the Burma jungle, it was no match for solid head-high west coast salal. The salal had all the toughness and resilience of barbed wire and to add to our discomfort the rotted undergrowth was liberally studded with huge windfalls left undisturbed over the centuries.

An hour of pitifully slow progress brought us to the edge of the slough which had to be circumvented to reach the river outlet. We brewed a cup of tea and tried to figure a less strenuous way to beat the bush.

As no materials were readily available to build a raft we thought we could possibly wade the edges of the slough. We stripped off our clothes, tied them to our packs and stepped bravely off into the muck. Andy disappeared up to his shoulders in mud thereby ending this experiment. There was no other recourse than to take to the bush.

Two hours of back-breaking crawling, sweating and hacking brought us to the river. Here again we were thwarted in our plans to follow the river down as the banks were steep, the underbrush full of devils club and rotted moss-covered windfalls straddling 10 or 15 feet above ground. A very easy place to break a leg or ankle.

An accident such as this can have very serious consequences in the bush. The only solution was to wade right down the river which fortunately was not in flood. The water was swift and icy cold, the footing slippery and varying in depth from knee to above waist.

However despite having to climb over log jams every hundred yards or so we managed to make better progress and we were very pleased two hours later to sight the little foot bridge crossing the river signifying the west coast trail. From here on things would be easier.

Eighty-foot Tsusiat Falls tumbling over the cliff into the restless surging surf was indeed a pretty sight. Bits of sandy beach lying at the foot of the cliff were cluttered with driftwood and sullied only by animal tracks and the odd glass fishing float. No orange peel or beer bottles here.

An easy two and a half mile walk along the trail which follows the top of the bluffs gave us fascinating vistas of our wild west coast beaches. The trail gradually dropped us down to the shore line and the mouth of the Klanawa River. There was a good cabin here so we decided to stay the night.

Dry clothes and a good hot meal of ham and pancakes cooked on the little wood stove in the cabin put us in a receptive mood to appreciate the beauties of the Klanawa. It is quite an impressive stream. Its final reaches run clear, wide and deep, shallowing up at a sandy little delta as it enters the sea. Some seal were fishing the river almost in front of the cabin. They were probably commuting from their home on seal rocks which lie just a few hundred yards beyond the surf from the mouth of the Klanawa.

A rather dilapidated high aerial cable car spans the Klanawa ¼-mile upstream and is the continuation of the west coast trail. We appraised the rusty condition of the cable and sprockets and the dilapidated remains of a boat on the other shore then decided to review the crossing problem in the morning.

Morning dawned damp and foggy and it was with some reluctance that we left our cosy cabin. The tide was low and after another glance at the aerial cable situation we elected to ford the river just above the surf line which can be done at a low tide. Better to be half wet than all wet.

The fording proved easy as the water was only waist high. We were ready to thoroughly enjoy the next day. This portion of the trail had deteriorated rather badly and was very overgrown. We headed on through stands of giant Sitka spruce, magnificent trees. One indeed feels very humble in the presence of such creation.

As we were being constantly soaked by wet underbrush we decided to beach walk for a couple of miles. This is always great fun particularly at low tide. From here to Tsocwitz Creek, the beach is formed by great flat shelves of rock which makes for easy walking and interesting marine study. Here and there in the rocks would be pools of clear sea water trapped by the outgoing tide and each pool would contain a miniature city of the sea life indigenous to our coast.

By 11 a.m. the sun had burned off the morning fog which is so common to this coast and we could see miles of shore line stretching up to Pachena Point. This is indeed an inhospitable coast to shipping as it abounds in ragged rocks and reefs with no harbor between San Juan Bay and Pachena Bay, but to the casual beach comber on a sunny morning it is paradise.

As we walked toward Pachena the bluffs began to rise so we cut back onto the overgrown trail and pushed through using fragments of telephone line and old glass insulators still on the trees as markers for the almost indistinguishable trail.

The trail followed the rising ground and we soon came to a beautiful little suspension bridge which bridged Tsocwitz Creek. The creek wound out of a grassy nook in the hill and tumbled in a beautiful fall to the beach below. With the lush ferns and moss abounding the whole scene could have been taken from a travel folder of Tahiti.

Just over the bridge we stumbled onto Tsocwitz cabin and decided to lunch on the beach near by. As we brewed our coffee over our little beach fire at the foot of Tsocwitz Falls we could not help but think of the tragedy that had occurred here on a stormy December night in 1895, when the Janet Cowan went down. This section of coast abounds in colorful history and anyone curious enough to make this walk would be well advised to read Vancouver Island's West Coast, by George Nicholson, before setting out. His book provides much interesting detail on the history of this coast.

Four miles of mixed beach and trail walking took us to Pachena Point. Both Darling River and Michigan Creek were so low that we waded across rather than bother with the primitive aerial ferries which are still there and in working order. As we climbed the trail to Pachena Point light we had some glorious views of the coast line all the way down to Carmanah Point below Clo-oose.

Our friends lightkeeper Margaret and Bill Milne and assistant keeper Clarence and "Mac" Collins gave us a friendly welcome and showed us about the light station. This was a very interesting insight into the magnificent work these lonely lightkeepers do, day in and day out, the year around. We spent a most enjoyable evening listening to them discuss the problems and experiences they had shared while on the Pachena Point station.

The next morning we broke camp and a brisk five mile walk through a well-travelled woodsy trail led us out to Pachena Bay. We walked the length of this lovely sandy strip of beach then thankfully removed our packs, brewed up a coffee and indulged in a siesta.

At 2 p.m. my dependable wife, June, showed up in my dependable Land Rover to drive us home. The total cost of our weekend was $20 each for the chartered plane plus a little grub and a little shoe leather. If any of you city buffs have a yen for the outdoors remember the wilderness is at your doorstep but we don't recommend the Tsusiat approach.

Qualicum Golf Course Gets Face Lifting

continent, and the Qualicum Beach Inn has been accepted as their second home. The greater percentage of these staunch supporters are golfers. In the year of 1919 the Duke of Windsor graced the establishment with his presence. He was then the Prince of Wales and some of the old-timers still remember him as of that era. His name remains in the golden book of time in the famous inn. The past three years Bob Hope and his family have been guests of the local golf course as have Andy Bathgate the famous hockey star, and John Poyen, Alberta provincial golf champion.

The golf course is still lacking in buildings as the presently used clubhouse and pro shop belong to the Qualicum Beach Inn. A modern clubhouse will be a future must to go with the new course and it is then the Qualicum Beach Golf Course will stand on it's own feet and take on a new meaning.

For a privately-owned golf course there is no feeling of stiffness as is often the case. The atmosphere and friendliness among members and visitors alike create a bond or a type of a fraternity one does not find anywhere else. Fortunate, too, are some of the members to have a playground within walking distance and in the hands of an enterprising group with progress as its key word.

Needless to say, this tricky sprite of a golf course produced some of B.C.'s top-notch players who are able to give any low-handicapper a battle. For it's size the club has a good share of better-than-average players. And those who come to the popular May 24 and Labor Day tournaments will undoubtedly agree. The two big tournaments which have been held in Qualicum over a long period of years bring hundreds of visitors to the community. Some of the business houses have been hard hit due to the closure of the golf course, and it's opening is looked upon with eager eyes.

If a golf course gained such popularity in the past, with its adverse conditions, it will most certainly have a great future, with its new lush turf, smooth fairways and some of the best greens on the Island. It is already pleasing to the eye and a year hence it will most definitely be a scene-stealer. Which brings to memory a sign posted in New Mexico at the entrance of their plush course: "Yours to enjoy and not to destroy."

May Meals De
Upon Spring M

"In pride of May, the fields are gay,
The birds do sweetly sing.
So nature would that all things should
With joy begin the spring."

Thomas Woolton, 1597

JIFFY FOODS

Who's for spring? now spades are trump and the chickweed never looked healthier.

May moods are kaleidoscopic . . . full of lovely colors. Just when you begin to see a pattern an impish whim jogs your elbow and everything changes. You start out on a sunny May morning full of dizzying exuberance and then . . . almost without warning, your energy tends to dissipate and you may lapse into an acute attack of spring fever. Work gets pushed aside in favor of chewing on a grass stem . . . or a pencil; or you may find yourself gazing vacantly out of the window while you aimlessly bend paper clips.

In May anything can happen . . . you may fall in love, you may plant cucumber seed in the sunwarmed earth, you may eat lunch in the park or move the furniture in your living room. You may catch a fish or buy a new hat. You may take flight on some delirious dreams . . . in May the world is full of fast flowering possibilities. Practically anything wonderful may happen to you . . . and I hope it does.

May meals in our house will depend on spring moods . . . when I feel bustling with house cleaning on the agenda, I am apt to lean toward the "quick and easy". A favorite lunch is a sort of club sandwich with a bubbly cheese sauce. Toast enough bread to make three deckers. Butter the toast and put together with crisp lettuce, tomato slices, broiled bacon and mayonnaise. For the cheese sauce just heat Cheez Whiz and spoon over. Chopped parsley on top and dill pickles on the side. The whole thing put together in minutes.

Next day I might feel creative . . . then watch out, kitchen, here I come. I see an elegant recipe in a new magazine and I can't wait to try it, and I don't. Christmas brought me personal recipes from the East Coast, Ontario, California, New York and Florida. I am gradually trying them out. One of these days I plan to share them with my readers.

Today we'll talk about "Jiffy Food" and suggestions for days when housewives succumb to that prevalent malady—spring fever.

Let's start with a few short-cut suggestions . . . take salad dressings. There is a tremendous family of salad dressings now and they have far more uses than just to dress salads. They make quick glazes and marinades for meat, dressings for our lovely spring vegetables. They add spicy zip to open-faced sandwiches and without the addition of a single ingredient make a zesty sauce for seafood cocktails. And, of course you can ring the changes on salads with a different dressing for every day in the week.

There are two lovely new dressings now on the grocery shelves —one is a heavenly flavor-blend as cream and the other a creamy Italian style dressing with its sophisticated blend of garlic, bright flecks of herbs and spices, homogenized to remain creamy, thick and smooth. It is almost impossible to duplicate these salad secrets at home and certainly time consuming to even try. This great family of ready mixed salad dressings are truly "finger-tip" conveniences.

Potato Salad is always a family favorite. We are all familiar with the cold version but how about trying a hot German style?

HOT POTATO SALAD . . . 2 Tbsp. finely chopped onion, ⅔ cup creamy French dressing, 4 cups sliced cooked potatoes, 4 strips crisply cooked and crumbled bacon, 1 tsp. salt, dash of seasoned pepper. Cook the onion in the creamy French dressing in a skillet. Cook till soft. Add the potatoes, bacon, salt and pepper. Toss together lightly until potatoes are well coated. Serve hot in a lettuce-lined bowl. Serves four. Have the potatoes fresh cooked and hot before combining with other ingredients.

Try tossing hot cooked vegetables with a small amount of Italian style salad dressing . . . little new carrots and cauliflower, tiny beets or small whole onions. Experiment.

The man who invented the can opener deserves an orchid from busy homemakers. Canned foods are tops for convenience.

SPEEDY CHICKEN CASSEROLE . . . 1 can (10-oz.) condensed cream chicken soup, ¼ cup liquid from canned vegetables, ¼ tsp. onion salt, dash pepper, 2 cans (7-oz.) chicken, or 2 cups left-over cooked chicken, 1 cup drained canned peas

CARROTS and CAULIFLOWER combine in this happy duo of carrots and cauliflower Italienne. Simply combine hot cooked vegetables and toss lightly with a small amount of Italian-style dressing for an easy and interesting vegetable dish.

DEAR HELOISE:

Being a retired paper hanger, I would like to tell you a few tricks about hanging wallpaper:

When people have to patch wallpaper around light switches or over crayon marks and grease marks, tell them to tear — NOT CUT WITH A PAIR OF SCISSORS — the wallpaper from the wrong side of the paper, and then glue it to the wall. The patch will be almost invisible!

Also, after applying this piece of patching paper over the stain, take a clean sponge, wet it, wring it out well, and wipe over all of the patch, going a little beyond where the paper is torn. The paper will stretch beautifully and the patch will be even less noticeable.

Another little trick I have used often when hanging paper: If a flower is not perfectly matched on the seam, you can tear out a little flower (again tearing from the wrong side of the paper) and paste it over the mismatched spot. This makes your mistake hardly noticeable.

Happy Hanging!

I just learned another little trick from a friend. When she papered her bathroom, and the old woodwork had blisters (that's a bubble under the paint), she took a knife, broke the blister, and peeled off as much of the paint as possible.

Then she cut a design out of her wallpaper and pasted this onto her rough woodwork with wallpaper paste.

Not only was it a dilly of an idea, but it added individuality to her bathroom.

CASSEROLE . . . 1 can m chicken soup, ¼ cup tables, ¼ tsp. onion salt, .) chicken, or 2 cups left- cup drained canned peas or frozen peas, 1 cup drained, whole kernel corn, 1 cup crushed potato chips and ½ cup grated cheese. Combine soup, vegetable liquid, onion salt and pepper. Add chicken, peas and corn. Turn into a 6-cup casserole and bake in a 350-degree F. oven for about 20 minutes. Sprinkle with the combined potato chips and cheese. Continue baking until cheese is melted, about 15 minutes longer. Six servings.

Here is another, a "budget dish" casserole, combining canned vegetables and sausages. To serve six.

SAUSAGE AND CORN CASSEROLE . . . 1 pound pork sausage, ⅓ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup diced green pepper, 2 Tbsp. flour, 1 tsp. salt, a good dash pepper, 2 cans (15-oz.) whole kernel corn, 1 can (20-oz.) tomatoes and ⅔ cup crushed cereal flakes or Chinese Chow Mein Noodles. Fry sausages slowly until evenly browned, about 15 minutes. Pour off excess fat but leave enough to saute the onion and green pepper. Saute until the onion is transparent, about 5 minutes. Stir in flour and seasonings. Add corn and tomatoes. Simmer until liquid is partially evaporated, about 15 minutes. Turn into 6-cup casserole and arrange sausages on top. Sprinkle with the crushed flakes or noodles. Bake in a 350-degree F. oven until lightly browned.

Casserole are fine for busy days because they can be put together in the morning then placed in the refrigerator until about 30 minutes before serving time. If the casserole is to be made ahead leave off topping ingredients (cheese, crumbs, etc.) until just before baking.

Use frozen mixed vegetables in place of usual vegetables called for in a stew.

Meat loaf bakes in half the time if meat mixture is pressed into custard cups or muffin tins instead of cooking in one large loaf.

Let us finish on a sweet note—a 2½-minute Cherry Crisp.

HASTY CHERRY CRISP . . . 1 can cherry pie filling, 1 cup white or yellow cake mix and 3 Tbsp. melted butter. Pour the pie filling into an 8-inch pie plate. Sprinkle with cake mix, then dribble melted butter or margarine over top. Bake in 400-degree F. oven for about 30 minutes. Don't have the oven rack too high or the topping will brown too quickly. Serve hot or cold. Serve plain or with pouring cream, ice cream or whipped cream. Apple pie filling and spice cake mix for topping can be used in the same way.

For those who are trying to mend a knitted garment, such as a sweater or a man's heavy sock . . . place the damaged area over the bristles of a hairbrush.

NICK STEVENS

Trouble Shooter for Fishermen Came From Salt Spring Island

By BEA HAMILTON

"Little man, may all your life be full of sunshine and may the snows rest lightly on your head as it does on Mt. Tuam when you grow older." Auntie-Granny held the newly-born babe out in the warm sunshine of a September day in 1891, as she stood on the beach at North Saanich. The "little man" was Nick Stevens, currently of Ladner, B.C., and formerly of Beaver Point on Salt Spring Island.

His mother had brought him into the world on a lovely sunny day—and he was yelling blue murder. He stopped crying as his nurse gave him her blessing, soothed by her gentle voice. Auntie-Granny acted as mid-wife and was Nick's mother's aunt. "But we all called her Auntie-Granny when we grew older," said Nick.

The blessing bestowed upon his head by his kindly nurse seems to have followed Nick through his very active and busy life.

All this happened on the beach during the hop-gathering season when a number of the early Salt Spring Islanders used to go to the hop fields to work. They travelled by canoe and rowboat mostly in those days from Salt Spring to other places on Vancouver Island.

The hop season came at the end of summer at Saanich.

There were two large hop ranches called the Towner and Downey Ranches. The pay wasn't much — $1 a box and the box to be filled with hops was very large — so large that families went en masse and all pitched in to fill a box.

A good picker could just about pick one bowful a day so the family plan was the only answer. Pay was prompt. Each box was paid for on completion.

They were a happy lot and camped out in two long rows of shacks with stoves in them. People brought their own pots, pans and dishes.

When the Stevens arrived at that particular time, all the shacks were occupied.

"Which is the reason I first saw the light of day in a tent on the beach, and I've been on or near the water ever since," said Nick.

Nick's father, a Greek sailor and fisherman, had deserted his ship in Vancouver in 1876 when he was very young. John Stevens he was called, though his proper name was John Giannaris, pronounced with a "Y" and thought too difficult for the Canadian fishermen, so they called him Stevens.

At that time, Nick's father met another Greek, John Georgios Koudradikis, later called John King of Beaver Point.

That's how, in a roundabout way, Nick came to Salt Spring Island, because his father married Emma, a step-daughter of John King. Emma's father was an Irishman whose name had been forgotten, and her mother was of Indian stock.

John King was the father of the late well-known Leon King, husband of Mrs. Sophie King who makes such lovely driftwood animals and birds. So Nick Stevens is very much a part of Salt Spring Island and they named him Nicholas Davies Stevens, on Sept. 3, 1891, the day he was born.

NICHOLAS DAVIES STEVENS, known to all as Nick, age 74, and still active in community affairs at Ladner, B.C. — Mid West photos.

Nick spent most of his childhood on the Fraser River during summer months, moving from place to place on a floating scow-house. They travelled from New Westminster to Steveston, and to Canoe Pass near Ladner. "Father was a good fisherman," said Nick. "He seemed to know when and where to locate the fish runs and always seemed to be in the right place at the right time. We followed the locations on our floating home — here, there, everywhere."

Life on the scow had its adventures — Nick's first was nearly his last. At the age of three he fell off the scow into the river when his auntie's back was turned.

Workmen at the Steveston Cannery heard the hullabaloo made by his frantic aunt and saw the little bundle in the water. A carpenter hooked onto the bundle with a pike pole and pulled Nick ashore, waterlogged and more dead than alive. His little silk shirt had buoyed him up but he had floated face downwards. An old Newfoundlander took charge and soon had Nick over a barrel while two men grabbed him by the arms and legs and rolled him to get the water out of his lungs. Then for 10 long minutes they applied artificial respiration and finally, Nick decided to live. One of the men then carried Nick back to his family.

At the end of each fishing season, John Steven brought his family back to Salt Spring Island where his wife Emma had four acres given to her by her stepfather, Joseph King. They had built a house on the property.

From the middle of September to the following June, Nick attended the little red schoolhouse at Beaver Point, built in 1885, and about the oldest red schoolhouse on the island. "I think it is the oldest school in B.C., next to the Craigflower schoolhouse at Victoria, reported to be the oldest," said Nick. His teacher, around the turn of the century, was a Mr. Kirkendale. At the age of 11 Nick passed his high school entrance exams.

The exams were taken at Sidney, B.C., and Nick remembers the school inspector, Mr. Netherby, saying Nick was the youngest student there.

That ended Nick's school days for at that time there was no high school on Salt Spring Island. But it did not end Nick's studies — he took correspondence courses in bookkeeping with the Rochester Correspondence School and finally was sent a beautiful certificate. "I don't know what I did with it, but I couldn't get a copy as the school in question went out of existence," said Nick.

At the age of 16, Nick went fishing with his father.

After a few summers of this, Nick tried his hand at fish buying on the Fraser River.

"Fish were cheap and plentiful. I would buy salmon, big ones, at three cents each and sell them at Steveston at six cents each," said Nick.

The ups and downs in fishing started; Nick tried fishing for salmon at Rivers Inlet, herring in Barkley Sound; he seine-fished, gillnetted herring off Point Grey, seined around Salt Spring Island and even drag-trawled in Fulford Harbor. He tried halibut fishing around Sidney Island, went salmon seining in the northern areas and one winter had a captain's job, minus papers.

Nick took towing jobs out of Nanaimo, "and for a while was called Captain Stevens," chuckled Mr. Stevens.

In 1919 he had a fish-buyer's camp at Dodger's Cove and he still gloats over the finest biggest coho he had ever been fortunate enough to catch. At the entrance to Barkley Sound as the King Islets and here Nick went rowboat trolling, explored the caverns that are an intriguing part of this fascinating group. He found caves large enough to row through and he heard the sound of the waves thundering on the west side facing Bamfield on the Pacific Ocean—"the roar of pounding breakers was defening at the eastern entrance," said Nick.

He found one cave that had been used in past by Indians as a burial place. There were caskets made of poles and split cedar, covered with the same and lashed around with cedar bark ropes. Some were canoes with covers. Feeling like an intruder, Nick did not stay long in the mausoleum.

On Salt Spring Island are Nick's two brothers, Andrew and Pete, both former fishermen, but also farmers at Beaver Point. There is a brother Beni-Demetri, who is warden at Banff National Park. Beni was overseas in the machine gun section in France 1914-1918. Beni had declared when he had returned home that he "could play Home Sweet Home on a Lewis gun!" A brother George died in 1929. He had served in the RCN in the First World War.

Among his many experiences in his colorful marine life, Nick tells of the time when he and his brother Andy, and son-in-law Frank, went sealing at Sand Heads. The seals become pretty wary after several encounters with slaughter and they station a watch at the head of their band and keep well away from any sea-going craft, he explained.

Nick and his brother thought they would outsmart the seal. Nick and Frank were elected to play seal dummies. They cut a hole in an old grey blanket to see out of, and lay on the sands "making like a seal."

It didn't work, but it did cause a panic for a long half hour. While the two men were lying on the sands, Andy waited half a mile away where he anchored the launch.

No seals came in but the tide did. Soon the two men were in water up to their knees. They signalled Andy that they had had enough. No seals were bothering to come near but then, neither was Andy. Nothing came but the tide, which was rushing in higher and higher. That's when panic came too. The two "dummy seals" suddenly realized Andy wasn't just being cruel. He couldn't get the old car engine to run!

By the time Andy did manage to get the engine to show fitful co-operation and chugged towards them, things were pretty sloppy and frantic. "All around us were miles and miles of sea—I have never before or since felt so helpless or scared," declared Nick.

"I didn't feel so good myself," said Andy. He finally came alongside and pulled the "human seals" into the launch. They were scared, grateful and wet. The Stevens vow they will never forget that experience. Oh, well, the seal at least had the last laugh there.

Nick was at Bute Inlet in 1918 and he told how they would trade Salt Spring Island apples for two tons of herring when he bargained with 21 Japanese fishermen—apples were more appreciated by those fishermen than cash. Two boxes of apples were exchanged for the two tons of herring.

Nick owned a fishboat, the May Queen, and he and his partner, Archie Miller, were rammed amidships by a passenger ship, the B.B., which cut through the launch between Nick and Archie. The latter got through the door, and Nick bolted out the window. They were towed to Coal Harbour to estimate damage.

Their repairs came to $200. The B.B. sent them $15 to help out.

"A fisherman's life is full of dangers and surprises," Nick says. "It is not an easy life; too many ups and downs—and mostly downs. Long hours, bad weather, often very poor prices and terrific competition."

But there were many compensations and one finds friends at sea. "It is a great challenge, battling against heavy odds at times. Caught in unexpected storms, there is much to admire in the bravery of many fishermen who risk their lives to save others," he says. Mr. Stevens knows what he is talking about and has had first-hand experience.

It happened when Nick and three other men were en route from Clayoquot to Ucluelet on their 60-foot fish packer, the CCS. A howling storm caught them. They got into serious trouble and were being driven towards reefs. They were only "two waves from the rocks," said Nick, when two 30-foot trollers came over the crest of the waves, threw a towline to the distressed vessel and started pulling the packer out to sea. The second troller threw his fellow fisherman a line and between them, they performed the risky job successfully, and towed the packer back to Clayoquot.

"One chap's name was Kishi," said Nick. "All they said when we thanked them was: 'We glad to help.' They refused all offers of money."

Their bravery and splendid seamanship will always be a wonderful memory, says Nick Stevens.

Mr. Stevens spent many years at sea; he was buyer for the San Juan Canning Co. of Friday Harbor; at camps in Clayoquot, at Dodgers Cove; and at Port Renfrew. He was also Canadian convoy for Friday Harbor Packing Co. and the Deer Harbor Canning Co. He switched from packer to packer. Some of the names of the packers were the Seymour of Tacoma, the Totem of Bellingham, the Blue Sea of Friday Harbor, San Juan Company, the Nerlied and Dorothy Halbert of Friday Harbor, and Deer Harbor Canning Companies. The Seymour was a 77-foot, two-masted schooner.

The most dangerous spot he had encountered was the Nitinat Bar, says Nick.

Nick married a widow when he was 31, and she was a music teacher and his three step-children, Ronald, Ruth and John, were very musical. His own children, Homer, well known as secretary of the Fisherman's Union, and George and Dorothy, are all married. Nick has 16 grandchildren, and he is a proud father and grandfather.

After he settled in Ladner, Nick felt like "doing something" so he joined the Delta Board of Trade, ran for election and was elected to the municipal council as chairman of health and welfare for two years.

He helped to establish the Ladner Fishermen's Credit Union, helped to organize the West Delta Ratepayers' Association of which he was chairman, and the Ladner Fishermen's Co-Op Association. From 1928 to 1955-1966 Nick has been a part of the B.C. Packers Ltd., as their Ladner representative and fish buyer. He has had 55 years of free lance buying and fishing, has kept busy and healthy.

Nick Stevens is still very active in community affairs in Ladner, B.C., where is the No. 1 trouble shooter for many fishermen all along the Coast. He helps them with their tax papers and their supplies of fishing gear, etc.

He is rich in friends and has the affection and respect of his children and grandchildren to whom he tells his "really really stories," which he takes from his adventurous life at sea. His articles, which appear now and then in The Fisherman, their local newspaper, are popular.

Now Nick thinks he would like to write a book about his adventures in the fishing industry and along the Coast. That is, if he ever gets time—he is so busy helping others.

On Salt Spring Island, the Stevens brothers and family are some of the most respected of the pioneers of the 1800s and Nick is welcomed home whenever he can get away from business at Ladner. Like his brothers, Andy and Pete Stevens, Nick is a very fine neighbor.

Nick has two sisters—Lina (Mrs. W. J. Howard), Banff, Alta., and Irene (Mrs. M. Silack), Ladner, B.C.

California Press Toured Victoria In 1897

. . . and had a wonderful time

By JAMES K. NESBITT

It was late spring of 1897 and the tourists were commencing to arrive in Victoria. One of the great sights of the town was the nearly-completed legislative buildings..

Workmen were outlining the buildings in tiny lights, and each evening there was a dress rehearsal in preparation for Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee in June. The tourists swore they had never seen so magnificent a sight, and those who could manipulate that new-fangled business, the small portable camera, had themselves a fine time, as tourists have had ever since setting up after dark before our legislative pile.

One of the first of the large tourist parties here 69 years ago was the California Press Association. They were on a tour of the Pacific Northwest, and Victoria was a highlight. Most of these visitors were placing foot on British soil for the first time, and they found many quaint customs, though the buildings, they said, looked remarkably like those in San Francisco.

The Colonist noted the arrival of this party: "When the gangplank was laid from the steamer City of Kingston there streamed ashore a long line of men, women and children, all sporting a yellow badge which bore the information that this was an excursion of the California Press Association.

"Soon the visitors to the number of 71 had reached the Driard Hotel, and then came the chance for Victorians to show how hospitably strangers could be received when they proved so important and useful a body of people as newspapermen and women."

On the way north by special train, there was an amusing mishap: "Mr. W. S. Mallick of The Pasadena News got off the train at Portland for a shave. That was the time this wide-awake newspaperman got left. He reached the station, feeling very superior with his smooth cheeks, only to find that the train bearing his bride and the rest of the party had gone while the barber was operating, and now he was minus his whiskers and his wife. He will now have to join the party in Seattle, on their return there from Victoria."

The newspaper crowd duly raved about the new legislative buildings, taking copious notes so that their folk back home would know how splendid small-town Victoria had become.

The Colonist said all of them did "unlimited Kodak work, and then the whole of them — all but one gentleman inclined to embonpoint — climbed up the little staircase in the wall and from the tower took in the delightful view of the Straits, the town, and the picturesque scenery of the surroundings."

Then came quite a contretemps: "One of the ladies, when she reached the top, lost her courage for the descent, and wished she had not been so eager to climb the spiral staircase leading to the outside gallery. However, a rope was rigged around her waist, and, with eyes closed, and placing each step carefully, and hanging tightly onto the railing, she slowly and surely, with that support, managed to get down to safety."

(Years ago the climb to the dome was a favorite with youngsters, and it's a mercy none of them plunged to the marble floor 100 feet below. There were many narrow escapes. The staircases are now locked, and no one is allowed up there any more, which is a great pity, but safety of the public must come first.)

Down from the dome the California tourists found carriages-in-waiting outside the Buildings, and away they went to Esquimalt, to inspect the drydock, the navy yard and the flagship . . . boats were waiting, by courtesy of Admiral Palliser, to convey the visitors to HMS Imperieuse, "and nothing could have been more cordial and kindly than the reception aboard."

Before leaving James Bay, however, the visitors had a look at a new and elegant mansion just completed for British Columbia's soap king, W. J. Pendray, who later went into the paint business. The big house stands yet, today a hostel operated by a Catholic order of nuns. It is still a showplace.

The Colonist described it: "A palatial home . . . a beautiful home, modern in its appointments, and an ornament to James Bay, is the new residence of Mr. W. J. Pendry on Belleville Street, facing the Inner Harbor. Though occupied for several months it is only now receiving interior finishing touches . . . the garden is being developed in topiary style, and it is the intention to cut trees and shrubs to resemble birds and animals . . . there will be an electric fountain in the central part of the grounds, indeed a novelty in Victoria.

"Mr. and Mrs. Pendray made a complete tour of the cities of the coast to get ideas for the building of their home, which is the first important sample here of the work of Messrs. Muller and Sturn, German fresco artists, who do all kinds of ornamental work, and whose headquarters are at Joseph Sommer's art shop on Government Street.

"Special interest attaches to this work, from the fact that frescoing seldom ever adorns the walls of private residences on this coast, particularly the kind to be seen in the rooms of Mr. Pendray's residence. Both Messrs. Muller and Sturn have worked in the largest castles and residences in Germany and Switzerland.

"The European style, or the style which Mr. Pendray says was originally acquired in the ruins of ancient Pompeii, is applied with imposing effect in Mr. Pendray's home. The drawing room is very handsomely finished to correspond with the drapery, as is the case in every room. A cream-colored ceiling is shaded in different tints, and ornamented with flowers and scroll work, while the walls are light terra cotta.

"The music room is done in brown screen, with variegated light and dark, and the ceiling finished in appropriate floral design. In the dining room a most charming effect is produced in the introduction of fruit hanging as if in tempting clusters from the ceiling."

In Esquimalt the Californians found a fine and unexpected sight to greet their eyes. That morning one of the world's great vessels, the Glory of the Seas, arrived for repairs after a long ocean voyage. And the visitors, naturally, were proud that she flew the Stars and Stripes.

Crowds of local citizens, too, flocked to Esquimalt to see this vessel, for Victorians of those days were ship-lovers all; and nothing so pleased them as to see fine vessels and to stand on docks and bid them welcome and wave them farewell.

The Colonist told of this particular ship: "Full of years and honors, as the saying goes, the American ship Glory of the Seas—is a vessel

The May days flow in and out, out and in: from chill to warmth, storm to calm, fog to clear moonlight, rain to sun. Sometimes the rain starts 10 miles up in ice pellets and sometimes it comes in a soft mist from low-lying clouds. If you want to find out whether it has the big drops of far away or the small drops from mountain height, catch them on a plate of flour or dry plaster of paris and cast them as you would animal tracks.

The Tides of May at Cortes Island

Another Nature Ramble with GILEAN DOUGLAS

The sea storms high on the beach, almost putting boat and boathouse afloat, then shrinks back to a clam tide. The temperature leaps up from its dawn low as we warm ourselves physically and spiritually on this beachhead of summer. The golden tide of sun creeps steadily forward and each day I find it closer to my house. After a night of storm there are glimpses of morning blue between white clouds. A flock of kinglets come to feed on the shore cedars and I stand still to watch their underwing paleness flashing in almost swallow flight. The air is like plush and full of promises.

Now at last, after all these years, I have decided between the seasons. It is spring which I love best and May is my dearest month. It is in May that the tide of spring comes to full crest. The promise of planting blossoms, the longing of the seed is fulfilled. Light is still lengthening, time still seems eternity. Each day is a gold piece of treasure, each night new-minted silver.

Standing in my living room I can see the moon rising grandly above the cliff behind and, turning, glimpse the sun gloriously descending the western slope of snowy mountains. The sky fades through the sunset rainbow until at last sky and sea and even air seem the color of the lavender that scents my linens. I go to sleep with moonlight on my face and wake in the night to live a few hours in this enchanted lunar world and hug its beauty to my heart. There will never be another spring quite like this. No painting, no photograph, can really capture it. No words of mine can describe that rush of wonder, joy and thanksgiving which runs through me like the tide of Heaven.

I know that an earthly tide has begun to rise when I look up from cultivating peas to see more tourists approaching. On request, I show them my simplicities: the cooler, fresh as a sea breeze can make it; the carpet sweeper which is so kind to carpets; the oil lamps which shine out softly on snow or green moss. I mention the poem by Tagore in which the setting sun asks who is to take up his duties and the earthen lamp answers: "I will do what I can."

"But however do you manage?" asked the woman. (However do I manage without all the luxuries which have become necessities?)

I manage beautifully. That is the exact word, beautifully. Such simple living is a form of beauty. Instead of the dawn dissonance of motors bloating into bedlam, I have the candid whistle of a hermit thrush admiring the new day. Instead of a witch's brew of smells, there is pure air zested with a soupcon of salt. The TV camera comes to places like this to put the reflection of slow loveliness into hurried, harried living rooms. But its only the reflection. I have the original.

'You do have a mator," observed the woman, peering into the boathouse. Yes, I have two; yet these are manageable artificialities, unlike smog and pollution and chemicals in food. (Bread is home-baked here, fruits get only a dormant spray; vegetables receive little but leafmold, seaweed, compost and t.l.c.) If I had to do without them again it wouldn't matter. More time would have to be spent on the mechanics of living, but how do I use the moments I save now? Do I look up at the stars as when I rested the last water buckets of the day on my way from the well? Do I look out towards the mountains as when I scrubbed on my washboard to the rhythm of the sea, with wind and sunshine making all things fresh and sweet again? If I don't, I am wasting time indeed.

"How do you get away from here?" pursued the woman. (As though that were what I wanted!) When I tell her that the only way off on on the island is by small plane and that there has been no passenger boat since 1953, her pity showers around me. I feel so sorry for her that I mention the ferry which is coming soon.

"But that's splendid!" she exclaimed. "Soon you'll be one of us!" One of whom? Of the hypertension-ulcer crowd? Of the smooth-as-custard crowd where you can't tell one person from another? I only hope that the pioneers who came to this island to be themselves and no one else, to live in clarity and quietness, aren't spinning in their graves at such a conversation. Especially John and Elizabeth Pool, who are buried under the broadleaf maples.

Perhaps my face said more than my few words, for the man observed: "The air here is wonderful." So we spoke about an ancient desert palace described by Lawrence of Arabia. Its clay had not been kneaded with water, but with the oils of flowers. Each room had a different perfume: jasmine, violet, rose . . . each room except one. This had the "very sweetest scent of all": the scent of the desert wind blowing free across hundreds of miles of sand and space.

The tide of talk rose and fell as we drank coffee and the walked down to my visitors' cruiser, tied up to ringbolts in the rock. Just as he was going aboard the man turned and looked all around. "The silence of the place was like a sleep," he said, "so full of rest it seemed." It was one of the nicest thank-yous I have ever had.

whose name is familiar to most shipping men the world over, and whose history, if told in detail, would fill many a book of many chapters."

If the Americans were proud because she was an American ship, local people were proud that she had been built by a Canadian:" Constructed at Boston in 1870 by the renowned shipbuilder, Donald McKay, who was born in Nova Scotia, the Glory of the Seas has earned for herself an enviable record—as her name implies she was designed to be a vessel among vessels.

"Her builder, after constructing a line of clipper ships in the latter part of the 1860s that gave to the United States for a time the world's sovereignty in marine architecture, and innumerable records for fast voyages which, to this day, have not been parallelled, built the Glory of the Seas as a masterpiece.

"She has the best of oak framing in her, and her planking is all pitch pine. She is very heavily sparred, the diameter of her mainmast being 42 inches, a good half-foot larger than most such sticks. In building the Glory of the Seas, no expense was spared, and as a result she is one of the most costly ships of her kind afloat."

So, all in all, the Californians had a wonderful time in Victoria, which reaped a great deal of publicity as a result of their visit. The next morning the City of Kingston sailed away with them to Seattle, where, presumably, they found the man who had been left behind in Portland because he stayed too long in a barber shop.

Meanwhile Victorians went about their everyday affairs, and as I searched The Colonist files I found items of history and of interest.

There were two weddings: "A novel and pretty wedding took place . . . at the residence of the bride's parents, 129 Michigan Street, when James John Robson of Plumper Pass was married to Miss Henrietta Emma Avery Boorman, daughter of Mr. William S. Boorman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Solomon Cleaver, the bride having as bridesmaids Miss Alice Boorman, Miss Knight and Miss Ethel Knight. Supper was very tastefully spread, the big wedding cake looking like a pyramid in the centre of the table.

"Advantage was taken to have a large group photograph taken by Savannah of the guests, and then Mr. Wicken's juvenile orchestra, out of compliment to the bride, who was one of Mr. Wicken's pupils, gave an instrumental concert."

(Savannah for years was one of Victoria's top photographers, who advertised: "If you have beauty, I will take it; if you have none, I will make it.")

"At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Adam Watson, 'Ross Dhe,' Foul Bay Road, the marriage of Mr. John Bowron, gold commissioner of Cariboo, to Miss Elizabeth Watson was celebrated, Rev. Canon Beanlands officiating, and Mr. Robert Watson, brother of the bride, giving her away. Only the immediate friends of the family were present, among them being Messrs. Adams and Watson, representatives of Cariboo in the legislature.

"The bride looked charming in a dress of white satin duchesse trimmed with point lace and orange blossoms. The bridesmaids were Miss Nason and Miss Roberta Nason, dressed in white silk and carrying bouquets of jonquils. The groom was ably supported by Mr. W. F. Sargent of Tacoma. After the ceremony a reception was held . . . Mr. and Mrs Bowron left later for Barkerville, where they will make their home."

There was a mysterious robbery in 1897 that had everyone talking and guessing. The Colonist gave a long preamble before it got to the point:

"In these days of progress, when, thanks to modern science, almost every family is able to make a brave display of silverware (bearing, as a rule, the Meriden-Britannic Co.'s stamps as extra plate) solid silver services are only to be found in the homes of the few and then they are usually made doubly valuable by family associations.

Gonzales, the residence of Mrs. J. D. Pemberton is such a home, and its silver has always commanded the appreciative admiration of guests at this hospitable home, standing in its many acres, and looking across meadows and marshlands to the sea.

"The probability is that it will excite no more the envy of connoisseurs, for during Thursday night Gonzales was burglarized, and the silver is not there now."

There was a police investigation, and hints in the newspapers that it had been an inside job, probably the work of some former servants. I read page after page, but never did find further reference to the affair, and so I am frustrated, not knowing whether or not Gonzales ever had returned to it a silver service that must have been truly magnificent.

HAMMARSKJOLD . . . The Man . . . the diplomat and embryonic legend

Reviewed by E. D. WARD HARRIS

On a minor scale, Dag Hammarskjold is fast becoming as legendary a figure as John F. Kennedy.

Both men had a high sense of purpose and a mission and both died violent deaths. But there the similarity ends for no two public figures could have been greater fundamental opposites.

From his own writings and from the welter of biographical material already published, we know as much about Kennedy as it is permitted for men to know about one of their kind, but of Hammarskjold we know next to nothing.

His own book, Markings, published posthumously, afforded a glimpse into the mind of this remarkable man but left us little wiser about the flesh and blood man who, from obscurity, became secretary-general of the United Nations.

This biography of the enigmatic Swede — undoubtedly the first of many — strips away much of the mystery and yet shows us a man so unusual, so complex that knowing all, we still know nothing.

Hammarskjold was a man of contradictions. A bureaucrat's bureaucrat whose speeches and public writings have the authentic civil service ring, he was nevertheless a man of unusual culture with a brilliant intellect.

He was humorless, without the gift of laughter and devoid of intimates. He found it difficult to mix and hated publicity. And yet he accepted one of the most exposed posts in the world.

He had a phobia about women, was unjustly suspected of homosexual tendencies and was in fact sexless. Despite this handicap, which would have twisted most men's mentalities, Dag Hammarskjold was just and courageous.

An intensely religious man, he drew heavily on his inner resources to sustain him when, singlehandedly, he saved the UN from the fate of the League of Nations.

Hammarskjold the man, the diplomat and the embryonic legend are all powerfully sketched against the background of continual crisis—Suez, the Congo, Cuba — by a privileged observer.

Emery Kelen, a world famous political caricaturist and now director and producer of television at the UN, has been with the world organization since its inception, and before that worked as an artist at the League of Nations.

An enthusiastic UN man, Kelen has produced a brilliant sketch of a man he obviously admired greatly, but not so completely that he couldn't see his faults. The protrait that finally emerges is that of a man utterly brilliant and utterly cold, an enigmatic, ascetic, forbidding genius.

The magnitude of the task facing secretary-general of the UN can best be understood by reading The United Nations and How It Works.

This revised edition of this reference book, first published in 1955, surveys the principles and activities of the UN and its related organizations.

One is apt to think of the UN as consisting of a General Assembly and Security Council, as an organization dealing solely with economic and political crises. Actually, this is only the tip of the iceberg.

The UN also encompasses the Trusteeship Council, the International Court of Justice, the Secretariat, Food and Agricultural Organization, World Health Organization, Children's Fund, International Monetary Fund, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and more.

This book covers the entire field and, as a reference, is invaluable.

MAN WITH NIMBLE FINGERS

Reviewed by
PATRICK O'NEILL

The Odds Against Me* is the interesting story of a man with nimble fingers who spent 10 hours a day during his childhood becoming a card mechanic.

But there is serious question whether any magician should write a biography of his career.

He is in no position to do the very thing expected of him, to disclose the techniques he uses for his tricks.

John Scarne, a fine magician (the world's finest, by his own admission) runs into this problem time and time again.

He will indicate the sensation caused by a trick we cannot see. Then comes the climax, the reader waits breathlessly for the explanation, and Scarne is forced to say: "How is it done? I'll never tell!"

Scarne begins his story with an account of his meeting with card sharps, his long hours of practice with a deck before a mirror, his first successful card tricks.

Then, he traces his path through the roaring twenties, as he brushed with Al Capone, Houdini, and other celebrities, including, in the early thirties, President Roosevelt.

This should be the most interesting and colorful part of the book. But Scarne's ego drains away the excitement.

His main interest in the characters of his day was limited to what they thought of him.

Instead of painting pictures of these figures, he uses them as mirrors to reflect himself.

For example, here are statements about himself he attributes to some of the great names he remembers:

Famous 1920's gambler Arnold Rothstein: "this kid is terrific. Have you ever seen anything like that in your life?"

Doc Kearns (Jack Dempsey's manager): "Johnny, I could make a million dollars with you if you weren't determined to become a top magician."

Al Capone: "He's only 20 years old, but he fooled the pants off our competition."

Harry Houdini: "Johnny, with your flair for mathematics and your comprehensive knowledge and understanding of game rules, you should write a book to replace Hoyle."

President Roosevelt: "Young man, you were great!"

To justify the praise Scarne quotes celebrities as heaping upon him, the magician quotes the Great Houdini:

"Johnny, if you believe in your heart and soul that you are the best card manipulator in the world, don't be foolish and keep it to yourself. Tell the world."

In addition to the air of mystery Scarne draws around his tricks, he takes some stands that challenge credulity. For example:

"At the time of writing this book I reflected over the pat 40 years, recalling hypnotic exhibitions I have given, the great demonstrations of hypnotism I have witnessed.

"I recalled the many scientific lecture-demonstrations on hypnotism I have attended, given by doctors at forums in colleges and universities throughout the country.

"I recalled the countless articles I have read in our national periodicals saying hypnotism is in daily use in hospitals as surgical anesthesia.

"I do not hesitate to step right out and state unequivocally: Hypnotism is a fake!"

That's strong stuff, even from Scarne.

The memoirs of this great magician and card manipulator, have one important social point:

They show that a man can concentrate all his time and energy into becoming the world's greatest exponent of almost any pursuit, no matter how trivial or useless.

With the same dedication of a great athlete doing exercises, or a brilliant jurist studying, a man could apply himself to the game of tiddly-winks and become, after 20 years, a sensation at tiddly-winks.

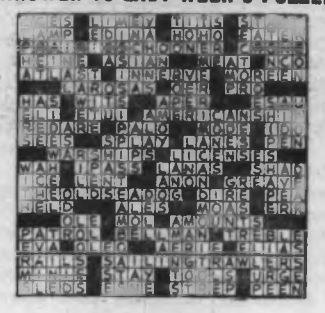

Probably even, the best in the world!

RUARK'S TECHNIQUE WAS TO USE SHOCK

The Honey Badger, by Robert Ruark. McGraw-Hill Canada. 567 pages. $7.70.

Reviewed by
JERRY BOULTBEE

Robert Ruark's last literary effort is welcomed by this reviewer with open arms.

If nothing else, Ruark's death in London last July will ensure that no more Ruark-style books will appear on the market.

Possibly that's why his last work should be so welcome.

Ruark made big sales with shocking books — notably Something of Value and, much later, Uhuru.

In Honey Badger he is still trying to be shocking, and the effort is labored, trite, thoroughly bad.

To say nothing of the tale itself.

Most unfortunately, Ruark was read avidly by people who knew nothing about Africa, and he thus established himself as something of an authority.

Chiefly because of Something of Value and Uhuru.

It is hard to describe the disdain with which this author is viewed by people who live in Africa and know Africa.

His books were considered yellow journalism between hard covers.

But this was not recognized for a long time in North America.

The man actually accomplished a great deal of damage in putting forward a face of Africa that does not, and never has, existed — and this in order to sensationalize.

His technique was to use shock.

It was a phrase with many writers — a thin one. One might legitimately hope Ruark was among the last of that stylistic era.

Honey Badger is essentially the same fare.

It describes the fortunes and misfortunes — in print and in and out of bed — of one Alec Barr, writer.

Barr slept with women, drank hard booze, swore and disdained underdogs or paternalized over them.

He went to Africa, hunted, and slept with more women.

He won himself a literary prize — something Ruark dearly wanted but was never able to do.

And Barr cussed and cussed and cussed — and Ruark brings it out in print by cussing and cussing and cussing.

It's just lousy and obvious attention-getting.

Because Ruark was in Africa, and dearly loved to tell about it, so his character moved through Africa. And Ruark lets us know he has the African savvy because there they are — the liberal sprinklings of Swahili italics.

Ruark's dead, so there'll be no more books quite like his.

A reader of light tripe might enjoy The Honey Badger — if only as an exercise in mental masturbation.

If you want to know Ruark, read Ruark.

But don't try to get to know about either Africa, or writing, by reading Ruark.

Spring Is Perfect Season To Explore Olympic Peninsula

Exploring the Olympic Peninsula, by Ruth Kirk. 120 pages, illustrations, maps. Cloth Gift Edition, $3.95; Paper, $1.95.

These spring days find the Olympic Peninsula in one of its most enticing aspects. The seasonal calendar in Ruth Kirk's Exploring the Olympic Peninsula, published by the University of Washington Press in co-operation with the Olympic Natural History Association, is a concise summary of seasonal attractions.

In March: Heaviest snows of the year in the mountains, intermixed with warm sunny days. Spearfishing meet and octopus grab in Port Angeles. In April: Maple and alder trees first flower, then leaf out: beautiful in the rain forest. Fishing in lowland lakes. In May: Rhododendrons bloom along Hood Canal. Loggers' rodeo in Sequim. Fishing opens in streams and lakes in the high country. And in June: Deer fawns and elk calves are born. Outdoor theatre productions in Shelton.

This complete guidebook by the wife of an Olympic National Park Ranger includes more than 70 photographs which are a visual tour of the natural wonders of the Peninsula — the bald rock and ice of the mountain tops, the tarned and flowered ridges, the lush green of the rain forest, the quiet inland waterways, and the stormy coast.

Included is a history of the Peninsula, from the nine tribes of Indians who first lived on the coast to the Spanish and British explorers and fur traders; from the first European settlement at Neah Bay to the days of the timbermen and the homesteaders.

A section on natural history includes discussions of geology, plants, and wildlife. In a particularly valuable road guide, Mrs. Kirk lists and annotates points of interest on the avenues that lead into the lowlands of the Peninsula and that climb the outer mountains. She supplies useful information on the availability of gasoline, groceries, laundry facilities, and overnight accommodations.

About 800 miles of trail wind through the back country of Olympic National Park and National Forest. Exploring the Olympic Peninsula directs the hiker to trails that are particularly rewarding for the miles and effort involved. A feature section describes in detail the camping facilities and picnic areas. These are also marked clearly on the six maps in the book.

Practical tourists will welcome the capsule information on fishing and hunting regulations, with tips on where and how to dig shellfish, and how to cook it.

Glasgow Sank Enemy Sub by Accident

ceased in Europe — Oshawa was senior ship escorting a convoy toward Newfoundland. Accompanied by HMC Ships Saskatoon, Rockcliffe and Dunvegan, Oshawa participated in the dramatic surrender of a German U-boat on the high seas.

That afternoon, the convoy was proceeding on schedule, when an RCAF plane flashed word it had sighted a surfaced submarine some miles distant. The warships wheeled about and headed for the scene at full speed. Finally, they spotted the rust-streaked, barnacled U-boat running on the surface.

Ordering her to halt, Lt.-Cmdr. J. C. Pratt, RCNVR, eased alongside. The other Canadians surrounded U-889 to discourage her skipper should he suddenly decided he did not want to surrender after all. Signalling headquarters, Oshawa received orders to return to her convoy with Saskatoon, while Rockcliffe and Dunvegan shepherded the prize to Shelburne.

U-889 was the first German submarine to surrender in the Western Atlantic. In company of another U-boat which surrendered to the RCN, U-190, she visited Canadian ports before being handed over to the U.S., who later destroyed her. The U-190 was kept for more than two years, then towed out to the position where she had torpedoed the poor little Bangor, Esquimalt, the last RCN ship lost during the war. U-190 went down in minutes, under the bombs of RCAF aircraft and RCN destroyers . . .

With peacetime, Oshawa entered a series of goodwill visits to East Coast Canadian ports, then completed a five-month overhaul. Back in service, she made her longest voyage since commissioned 16 months earlier, steaming through the Panama Canal for Esquimalt. Dropping anchor here, she was paid off into the reserve fleet early in 1946.

Paid off again, for the last time, in November, 1958, Oshawa's final duties had been as a research vessel with the Pacific Naval Laboratory. Included in these assignments had been seismic research in preparation of the historic Ripple Rock blast.

Today's shortage of trained personnel has mothballed even more ships of the Maritime Command Atlantic. Laid up are Athabaskan, last of the RCN's famous battle-scarred Tribal class destroyers, and the ocean escorts (frigates) Crescent, Inch Arran, La Hulloise, Outremont and Victoriaville.

Designated for disposal were the Buckingham, Fort Erie, and Lanark, all Second World War veterans. La Hulloise and Cap de la Madeline were towed to an Italian scrapyard in February. Earlier, the honored Tribals Huron and Sioux were sold to be cut into "razor blades."

particularly the Garry oaks, are massive. Those persons who take an esoteric delight in poking around graveyards should visit St. Peter's; there are interesting gravestones to be seen, but chiefly the visitor will find reward in the tranquillity and charm of this rural churchyard. Two of the graves deserve mention here: One is that of W. H. Dring and James Miller, who were the victims of a bizarre murder at Crofton in 1886; the other is the Barkley plot. Capt. Edward Barkley, RN, who died in 1909, was the grandson of Frances Barkley, the first white woman known on this coast, and her husband, William, master of the British fur trader Imperial Eagle.

The churchyard, or rather, the people in it, is but a reflection of the growth and the development of the community. The pioneer names of Cowichan, the early settlers, are all represented, sometimes through several generations. Then there are many graves of men, who, mostly military, ranging all the way from full admiral to a mere private, having served the British Empire, came to Cowichan to retire. It was this element which gave character to the Cowichan area, a character still lingering on in reduced degree, but which, more importantly perhaps, gave economic stability before the days of large-scale development of resources.

Many interesting people have been parishioners of St. Peter's. Three provincial premiers have at one time or another been members of the parish; A. E. B. Davie, was premier from 1887 to 1889, and his brother Theodore, was premier from 1892 to 1895. The Davie family came to the Cowichan area in the early 1860s, and descendants still reside there. The third premier is less well-known, William Smithe, who held office from 1883 to 1887. Curiously enough, Smithe was never an Anglican; though one of the builders of the log Church, he was really a Methodist, but as there was no Methodist church in the district at the time, he gave his allegiance to the Anglican church.

A hundred years ago, the great theological issue of the day, so far, at least, as the Church of England was concerned, was the question of ritualism or, to put it another way, the question of high church versus low church. Upon reflection, this would appear to have been more an argument over form than substance. Today, however, an even graver theological question presents itself to every church: how to interpret God in a scientific age. This is a question of real substance, and upon its answer the continued existence of St. Peter's for another hundred years will depend.

This is the year of the totem poles in B.C. – the year when 20 new totem poles will be carved and later erected in special ceremonies along B.C.'s highways.

YEAR OF THE TOTEM POLES

The new totem poles will be tourist attractions, and are being carved to mark the centenary of the union of Vancouver Island with the mainland of B.C. The incentive to carve totem poles has diminished since the arrival of the white man on the coast. Realising this the provincial government has ordered 20 new poles to be carved by Indians throughout the province. Also, the government is ensuring excellence of the poles by offering a bonus prize of $250 to the Indian who carves the finest totem pole.

In numbers, variety and artistic skill the Haida Indians of the Queen Charlotte Islands had shown the greatest development in totem pole carving—an art recognized as one of the great primitive art styles of the world. It was in the 1880s, after the white man arrived in the northland areas, that the Haida and Tsimshian Indians stopped carving poles for their own use.

Residents of Victoria may take totem poles for granted but not so a host of discriminating visitors who come here to see the totem poles in Thunderbird Park and the provincial museum. A woman from Paris, France, visits Victoria every year to see the "priceless" totems. Recently an artist from Toronto, Mrs. Bernice Fenwick Martin, focused the lens of her $1,500 camera (her husband has an identical model) on the totem poles in Thunderbird Park as a means of collecting material for future designs.

B.C.'s new totem poles will commemorate the mythology of the Indian's forefathers and at the same time will be something as truly Canadian as Cowichan Indian sweaters. Already carvers are busy at Prince Rupert and mainland points, and on Vancouver Island at Campbell River, Port Hardy and Victoria. Five poles will be carved here, in Thunderbird Park, in the totem carvers' workshop, in full view of visitors.

There is a wealth of material here for the Indians on the west coast were rich in resources. A surplus economy allowed them leisure time for their art to develop. Nine Indian languages springing from four distinct linguistic families are spoken on Canada's west coast. Indians got along without such things as a priesthood, political leaders, footwear, tailored clothing, tobacco, and the axe.

Indians carved their totem poles out of the soft straight grained wood of the cedar tree. They build their large, rectangular houses — the best on the continent — of red cedar. Canoes were made out of single cedar logs, using fire and adze. Clothing, baskets and rope also came from the cedar tree. "They evolved a superior technology by using the material they found around them," according to Wilson Duff, anthropologist.

Indians have been master wood carvers for many centuries. Their totem poles are symbols of west coast Indian life and were the Indian's way of handing down stories and legends. They took one or two years to carve and were from 30 to 50 feet high with some towering to 60 and even 80 feet. B.C.'s 20 new totem poles will be pint-sized in comparison—12 feet high.

THIS IS GEE-EKSEM, the bottom ancestral figure on the world's tallest totem pole in Beacon Hill Park. Gee-eksem is the legendary "First Man" of the Kwakiutl tribe, and is said, by Indian legend, to have been created at Gold Beach, on the north end of Vancouver Island.

TSIMSHIAN MEMORIAL POLE shows ancestress Willadaugh holding her child. Original pole has a giant woodpecker on top, a mountain eagle, and some small figures fishing through holes in the ice.

Poles were not of religious significance but were raised in honor of some head of the clan who had died recently. Sometimes a house frontal pole was erected, 40 feet high, carved with crests and legends of the owner and his wife. An oval hole at the base of the frontal pole served as the door.

When a Haida chief died, his successor had a mortuary pole carved to hold his remains. This was a massive post with a hollow section near the top for the coffin; the post and the rectangular board in front of the coffin were decorated with the crests of the dead man. Thousands of guests would arrive from near and far to help with the work, and to share in the feast (potlatch) that followed.

"Memento to the nation's infancy, symbol of a proud race, monument to a rare native art, proof of a united community interest and the purest form of Canadiana."

So reads the inscription, The Legend of the Totem for the world's tallest totem-pole, in Beacon Hill Park. Measuring 127 feet seven inches, and carved by the late Chief Mungo Martin, David Martin and Henry Hunt the pole was raised by public subscription and dedicated July 2, 1956.

It was carved out of a cedar log, using native adze and knives, and features all the animals of the Kwakiutl clan. This is the first time that all of these animals have been carved on the one totem pole.

The Kwakiutl Indian's Adam or first man of the tribe was Gee-eksem. Indians of that tribe believe that Gee-eksem was created at Gold Beach, on the north end of the Island. According to Indian legend Gee-eksem one day saw a strange sight: A totem pole slowly rose out of the beach! On the pole were all the animals now carved on the world's tallest totem pole and each animal was making its own strange cry. The bottom figure on the pole was that of a man who said to Gee-eksem, "These be your crests to be displayed by you and your descendents." The pole then disappeared.

Some of the animals carved on the tallest totem pole are Hohoo and cannibal bird, Mukinookw, the killer whale, Kle-akin, the sea lion, and Kwikw, the eagle. Wilson Duff says that, "no other peoples of the world made carvings of identical meaning and conception."

What animals will be carved into the new totem poles? Each pole must include the likeness of a bear because that animal—grizzly or otherwise—was common to the mythology of all early B.C. tribes. The cedar poles may display thunderbirds, whales, lightning snakes, eagles, beaver, frogs, and giant woodpeckers; or semi-human creatures like the Kwakiutl Indian's Daonoqua,—"the wild woman of the woods" who captured children and ate them. All of these are presented in poles, restored and on display in Thunderbird Park.

The Thunderbird is a powerful and awesome creature of Indian mythology. "Thunder was thought to be the flapping of its wings," Mr. Duff says, "and lightning, according to some tribes, was the flashing of its eyes. According to others it was its belt, the lightning snake, with which it harpooned whales o carry back to its home in the mountain tops to devour." Ears on a totemic character showed that it was an animal. A beaver was identified by its large teeth, scaly tail, and the stick it was holding.

Thunderbird Park was set up in 1940 and extensively renovated in 1952-55 to display examples of this northwest coast art. The carvings in the park, along with others in the Provincial Museum collections, form the finest group of totem poles in existence.

In the rear of Thunderbird Park and plainly visible to the public is the long shed, the totem carvers' workshop. It was previously erected to permit full public viewing of the work. Indian carvers are busy with various sized adzes and knives, carving the giant cedar poles which have been donated by MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River. Here, new totem poles are coming alive in Thunderbird Park for B.C.'s Centennial year.
